Preface

(Reprint from Second—1875—Edition)

IN the spring of 1870 I published the first edition of the Loomis Genealogy. That volume contained the names of 4,340 persons whose descent was traced from Joseph Loomis of Windsor, Conn. In the preparation of that volume I expended a large amount of time and money, and yet it fell very much short of my idea of a complete genealogy, such as I was desirous of making it. Notwithstanding its imperfect condition, there were many reasons which inclined me to publish it. The most urgent reason was, that my manuscript had become so large as to be unwieldy, and in order to prosecute my researches further, it was important to have a fair copy of all the names which I had collected, that they should be arranged in systematic order, and provided with copious indices for convenient reference. Another consideration which influenced me was that I hoped the publication of the book would excite greater interest in the history of the family, and that a large number of contributors would volunteer to furnish me information for correcting errors and supplying omissions in the first edition.

The book excited a less general interest than I had expected. Although only 250 copies were printed, and the book was offered at a price barely sufficient to pay the expense of printing and binding, if all the copies could have been sold, the demand for the book nearly ceased when only about half the edition had been disposed of. Upon reducing the price, some additional copies were sold, and the remainder were distributed gratuitously, as I hoped by this means to secure more abundant materials for a second and improved edition.

Since the publication of the first edition of the Genealogy, I have spent nearly all of my college vacations in collecting additional names and information. I soon discovered that the objects which I desired could not be secured by correspondence except to a very limited extent. I therefore undertook to canvass the whole country in a systematic manner by personal visits. My first object was to obtain the places of residence of all persons of the Loomis name, that is, to take a census of all persons of that name. In prosecuting this object I encountered very great difficulties. I examined every Directory of City, County or State I could find, and of these there is a very large collection in the State Library at Albany. I also examined Business Directories, Catalogues of the Clergymen of the various religious denominations, Catalogues of Lawyers and Physicians, and Catalogues of names of every description for any part of the United States. I also spent considerable time in examining County Maps. For most of the older States, large County Maps have been published, giving the names of the occupants of every farm in the county. I studied many of these maps with great care and copied all the Loomis names which they contained. By these different means I obtained very extensive lists of names of persons to be visited.

But after the most diligent use of all the means of information which I have indicated, I found there were still extensive districts almost entirely unexplored. This deficiency for all the States except New England, I supplied in the following manner: in New York, Pennsylvania, and generally throughout the Western States, there is kept at the county seat of each county the tax list for each of the towns of that county. These lists show the name of every person in the county who pays any State or County tax, however small. They therefore show (with but few exceptions) the names of all the male residents of the county who are over 21 years of age. This then has been my ultimate reliance for information in all the States except New England, and the other means of information which I have indicated have generally been simply auxiliary. Having obtained a list of all the Loomis names in a county I commence the canvass. As the majority of the persons to be visited reside at a distance from any railroad, (often 10, 15 or 20 miles,) I take a private conveyance, and after an early breakfast, start upon my explorations. I mark out a circuit as extensive as I think I can complete during the day and return to my hotel at evening. In these tramps, generally over hills, sometimes through sand-beds, and at other times through mud-holes, I occasionally visit half a dozen families in a day; more frequently, however, only two or three, and sometimes only one; and it has repeatedly happened to me to spend a long summer day, riding in an open buggy under a broiling July sun, and find but one family of the Loomis name, and even that sometimes proves not to be descended from Joseph Loomis of Windsor. Sometimes, after encountering almost insurmountable difficulties in searching out some obscure family, I have found only an empty house and no one to be seen who could give me any such information respecting the owner as I desired. Notwithstanding every kind of discouragement I have steadily persevered, until I have made a pretty thorough canvass of every part of New England, of every part of the State of New York, of nearly every part of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, and of the northern part of Ohio. I have also explored a number of cities further west, such as Detroit, Chicago and St. Louis. For the other Western States I have accomplished what I could by correspondence. This is, however, generally a very slow and uncertain process, for a correspondence can only be commenced after a certain amount of preliminary information, and many persons will not answer a letter addressed to them, while many others, even with the best intentions, have but a poor faculty of communicating information in writing.

The result of all my labors is a Catalogue of 8,686 persons bearing the Loomis name, and believed to be descended from Joseph Loomis of Windsor, besides the names of 4,682 persons who have intermarried with them. This is double the number of names contained in the first edition, and respecting many of the names in the first edition I have obtained much fuller information. I have made, therefore, considerable advance towards a complete list of the descendants of Joseph Loomis. There are not many additional names to be looked for except in the new States at the West.

Many persons wonder at my devoting so much time and labor to this research, and think I have some profound plan of making money. Some imagine there is a great fortune to be gained in England,—others think I am going to make a fortune by selling a vast number of copies of a book at an exorbitant price. I cannot think it strange that others should be surprised at my devoting so much time to this subject, for I am surprised myself. Nevertheless, I can see many important objects to be gained by this publication, for the benefit of the public if not of myself. In the first place, it enables many thousand persons to trace their genealogy back for about three centuries, and to many persons this is a source of rational satisfaction. In the second place, it enables many persons from the older States to recover information respecting relatives who long since wandered off to the far West, and had been often sought for in vain. In the third place, it is probable that cases may hereafter arise in which this book may prove to be worth a thousand times more than its cost, from the assistance it will render in tracing relationships which may secure the inheritance of estates. But beyond all such personal considerations, a complete family genealogy, such as it is hoped the Loomis Genealogy may one day become, has a value with reference to questions of General History and Political Philosophy. This Genealogy shows how from a single man, established in Connecticut in 1639, has descended an army of sturdy men who contributed no mean share towards making good our Declaration of Independence in 1776, and in saving our country from disruption in 1861; who have been respectably represented in the ranks of educated men and in each of the three learned professions; who have been creditably represented in Congress as well as in numerous State Legislatures and on the bench of Justice. These men have contributed an important share in levelling the forests of New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio, and in subduing the prairies of the more Western States. Wherever they have gone they have organized churches and schools, and with few exceptions their characters have been blameless. Although most of the names recorded in this book are obscure, very few have done discredit to their ancestry by an immoral life.

Those persons who wish to compare the present with a former age will find ample materials in this volume. They will see that for six generations the average number of children to a family was in no generation less than six; and that the average age of all the persons of the first five generations was considerably over fifty years. They will find a list of thirty-five of the descendants who attained to an age of 90 years, and one exceeding a hundred years. In these particulars, the comparison with the present generation is not encouraging.

With regard to the history of the Loomis family in Europe, I have not obtained much new information since the publication of the first edition. I have sought information from every source within my reach, but without much success. Mature reflection has, however, led me to adopt a more decided opinion respecting the origin of the Loomis name, the reasons for which will be found in the following pages. Among the new facts stated in this edition will be noticed the burning of John Lomas for heresy in 1556. Similar cases in England were not very numerous, but at the time of the planting of the New England colonies, dissenters from the Established Church of England were made very uncomfortable, and we can easily understand why Joseph Loomis, (although a man of respectable pecuniary means,) should be willing to abandon the comforts of his native country, and seek a new home among the savages of America.

Before commencing the printing of this volume I issued a very large number of circulars announcing my plan of publication, and soliciting additional information for the new edition. Many of the answers to these circulars did not arrive until the printing was far advanced. Whenever it was practicable, the information thus obtained has been incorporated in this volume in its appropriate place, but many of the letters arrived too late. The result is that in some cases the latter part of the book contains statements which differ from what had been given on a preceding page. In one or two cases it is stated that a man had no children, while under the next generation the names of his children are recorded.*

When two persons of the Loomis name have been married to each other, I have generally indicated in brackets each person's number in this catalogue. It thus sometimes became necessary to refer to a subsequent page not yet in type, and in consequence of the additions to my manuscript during the progress of printing, these numbers were necessarily changed. It has thus happened in a few cases that in referring to a person on a subsequent page, the number is quoted erroneously. In all cases, however, it will be easy, by means of one of the Indices, to find the name intended.

I wish it to be distinctly understood that I do not regard this book as containing a complete Genealogy of the Loomis family, and I have no doubt that it contains serious errors. It is my sincere desire that these imperfections may be removed. I therefore request that if any person who examines this book detects any error, however trivial, or notices any omission which he can supply, he would communicate the information to me without delay. I say, without delay, because that which is deferred is apt to be neglected until it is forgotten. If my life is spared a few years longer, any information thus communicated to me will not be lost. The public shall have the benefit of all new materials obtained, and I contemplate publishing a Supplement to this volume before many months.

NOTE—Dr. Elias Loomis died before the Supplement was published. But this third (1908) edition contains all new materials which he had collected, along with all new data collected and obtainable since his death.

Edition of 1908

Believing that many of the Loomis Family desired the preservation of the preceding preface, we have retained it as also we have retained the historical account of Joseph Loomis and his name found hereinafter. In the foregoing preface Dr. Elias Loomis has said so well so many things which every genealogist has to contend with that we are relieved of enumerating them.

On page 17 he says: "I wish it to be distinctly understood that I do not regard this book as containing a complete Genealogy of the Loomis family." Neither do we regard this edition a complete Genealogy of the family. While his edition of 1875 contained a catalogue of 8,686 persons bearing the name of Loomis, this edition catalogues over 13,000 names, and yet it is no more complete than his, and probably its percentage of errors and omissions is just as great as found in his edition. And because of this we crave the indulgences of the Loomis family for such errors and omissions, and request that all such, even if trivial, may be sent to us for correction hereafter.

While we have retained unbroken Dr. Elias Loomis's historical account of Joseph Loomis, his origin and his name, as set forth under the heading, Historical Data, p. 21, yet we deem it best to add such supplementary facts as have come to light since 1875, especially as touching the name Loomis..

Indeed it is very doubtful if our ancestral name originated in the way Dr. Loomis surmised, as the investigations of Prof. C. A. Hoppin, Jr., hereinafter given, seem to show. That Joseph's great-grandfather died at Thaxted, Eng., in the year 1551, is now proved as evidenced by Thaxted church records. But whence came his ancestors, what was the origin of the name, and what is our right to a coat-of-arms? These queries are raised and discussed in Prof. Hoppin's scholarly report to which the reader is referred. Evidently our antecedents are not Royal, but something far better, viz., clean, God-fearing, industrious men of respect and influence—men of character and back-bone.

This volume is enriched by a map of Connecticut, showing the location of Windsor, and the Loomis Institute so generously provided for, and which is fully explained in the body of this work, and of which the Loomis Family may indeed be proud.

Some have insisted that we should also record herein all obtainable descendants of Loomis daughters, saying "The work of Pater-lineist is too narrow in its scope to merit the name of a family history." To prove that it is utterly impossible to do this, I have, under the caption, "Who Are We?" made some calculations and prepared tables by which it is seen that the possible descendants of the daughters, in 10 generations, become millions. All blanks received containing data for family records of descendants of Loomis daughters have been carefully preserved and so numbered that the same may be finally reduced to printed volumes, the names now in hand numbering about 30,000. And now will not some one establish a fund for putting this data into print? It would be worth while. Who will do it?

While we have adhered to the system of numbering used in the 1875 edition, yet in one particular this edition differs radically from that, as those fortunate enough to have a copy of that edition will observe. It is in this: We have regarded the family as a unit, and hence have given at the head of each family all the data relative to the father and mother of that family and in the list of children born to them only the name and date of birth of such sons as themselves become the head of a new family, following all such with a + which means that his history will be found in the next generation under his respective number. By so doing the reader will find unified such data as he is seeking without referring to a preceding page.

This edition contains data sufficient to show that the descendants of pioneer Joseph Loomis fill many important and prominent positions in the various vocations of life. They are found not only among the tillers of the soil and the mechanics at the bench, but also among the teachers of our public schools and the ministers of the gospel; among those who are enrolled in the medical and legal professions; among editors and publishers of religious and secular papers and magazines; among authors and professors of our advanced institutions of learning; among college, bank and railroad presidents; among our statesmen and diplomats; and among our original thinkers and inventors.

And the reader will also discover, by consulting the indices of names and addresses, that these descendants are now found in every state and territory of the United States, as well as in Canada, Mexico, Central America, South America, Europe, Asia, Japan and the Philippines.

By consulting our military annals, see tables I to IX, in which are recorded nearly 1,000 names of Loomis soldiers, the reader will note that from King Philip's War down to the Spanish-American War soldiers bearing the name of Loomis were ever ready to fight and die for home and country.

If all to whom we have written and submitted blanks for family data had replied as they ought to have done, our Genealogy would be more nearly what we wished to make it. But as I write this sentence, I notice that my catalogue of unanswered letters contains nearly 500 names of Loomises who (and many were addressed a second time) failed or neglected to reply even when enclosed postage for reply was included. Such persons cannot be reached except by a personal visit, as my experience in many near-at-home cases proved.

When some of these finally realize that they have neglected a duty, a duty which they owe to their family, and discover that neither their names nor none of their children are found herein, will they wonder why?

As I have sent out nearly 6,000 memoranda soliciting information for this book, the reader can judge somewhat as to the amount of time and labor this has entailed. Also our able corps of assistant annalists have helped in the search for Loomis descendants and their deeds; and among us we have searched hundreds of volumes of genealogical and vital records; census reports; local histories and catalogues; military records; and probate court records, all of which cost time and money.

In addition to all this the Association has made, at great expense, extended researches in England for our antecedents, and the origin of our name, the results of which are fully set forth hereinafter under the heading, Origin of the Name and Ancestry in England.

Now to all this let the reader add the cost of circulars, stationery, memoranda blanks, travel, illustrations, printing and binding, then he may ask himself how it is possible to bring out a limited edition of this work at the price per volume which it costs him. To this we reply, it is due to the fact that your corps of annalists and many other interested friends of the Loomis Family did much of the work gratuitously, paying their own expenses, for the Loomis Association. To all who have in any way contributed to the enrichment of this Genealogy, the Association publicly extends its thanks and acknowledges itself forever indebted.

To meet the requirements of Section 2, of the Charter of the Loomis Institute, which see hereinafter, if for no other reason, is cause sufficient for the publication of this Genealogy. And because of this we are desirous of discovering and cataloguing every descendant of pioneer Joseph Loomis, to the end that any child bearing Joseph's blood in his veins may avail himself of the educational advantages offered by this Institute. And for this reason, if for no other (although there are many other reasons), every person bearing the name Loomis, or descended from a Loomis, should report his family record to the annalist of the Loomis Association, so that future supplements of this volume may record the same for future generations, for records which preserve from oblivion "the history and traditions of the lives of the progenitors and their posterity, will be of incalculable value to generations yet unborn, and will be highly prized by them."

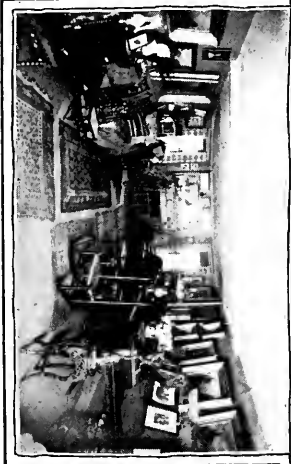

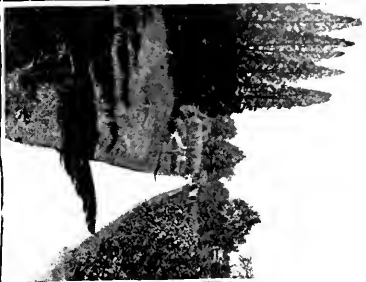

The Association acknowledges itself especially indebted to Frances Engelsby Loomis and Henry Bradford Loomis, sons of Dr. Elias Loomis, for the gratuitous use of their father's manuscripts, without which this volume would have been nearly impossible, and also to Mr. Burdett Loomis, of Hartford, Conn., who conceived, planned and brought to a final and successful issue this valuable work,—a work which is second to none heretofore issued, and believed to be the largest one-name Genealogy ever issued.

And finally the Association hereby acknowledges itself greatly indebted to the following list of contributors and annalists for their untiring efforts and earnest zeal in gathering, classifying and contributing valuable genealogical data for their respective branches of the Loomis Family, as well as much general information relating to other members of the name, viz.: Miss Jennie Loomis, Sec'y and Treas. of the Loomis Family Association, of Windsor, Conn.; Miss Grace L. Investigations of Dr. Elias Loomis

Pertaining to the Genealogy of the Descendants of Joseph Loomis

Historical Data Reprinted from Edition of 1875

DRTHOGRAPHY of the name Loomis.—Nearly all of those persons in the United States who are known by the name of Loomis are descended from Joseph Loomis, who settled in Windsor, Conn., in 1639. This name, in the lapse of time has undergone various changes of orthography. For somewhat more than a century it has, with few exceptions, been spelled Loomis. Previous to that time, the more common spelling was Lomis. On the oldest grave-stones at Colchester the name is spelled Lomis. On the early town records at Windsor the name is generally Lomys, but on the oldest grave-stone of any member of this family now known to exist anywhere in America, the name is spelled Lomas. This is the grave-stone of Deac. John Lomas, who died at Windsor, Sept. 1, 1688.

In England, for more than a century past, the name has uniformly been spelled Lomas, but two or three centuries ago the name was sometimes spelled Lummas, Lommas, or Lomes. All these names are considered to be variations in the spelling of one original name, and the spelling now well established in England is Lomas, while the spelling adopted in the United States is Loomis.

Proof that Joseph Loomis came from Braintree, England.—Joseph Loomis, one of the first settlers of Windsor, Conn., came from Braintree, Essex County, England, in the year 1638. This fact is established by the following document, being a deposition made July 30, 1639, by one of the passengers in the same ship with Joseph Loomis. The original, of which this is a copy, is in the possession of Mr. J. Hammond Trumbull of Hartford, Conn., President of the Connecticut Historical Society.

The following is a copy of the original draft (unsigned) of the deposition of Joseph Hills of Charlestown, taken 30th July, 1639:*

“Joseph Hills of Charlestowne, in New England, Woollen Draper, aged about 36 yeares, sworne, saith upon his oath that he came to New England undertaker in the ship called the Susan & Ellen of London whereof was master Mr. Edward Payne, in the yeare of our Lord one thousand six hundred thirty and eight, the 14th yeare of the raigne of our Sou^raigne Lord the King that now is and this d^{pt} knowes that divers goods and chattells, victualls & commodities of Joseph Loomis late of Brayntree in the County of Essex, Woollen-draper, w^{ch} were put in three butts, two hogsheds, one halfe hogshed, one barrel, one tubb & three firkins, transported from Malden in the County of Essex to London in an Ipsw^{ch} Hye, were shipped in the said ship upon the eleventh day of Aprill in the yeare abovesayd, and this deponent cleared the said goods wth divers other goods of the said Joseph Loomis and other mens, in the Custome-house at London, as may appeare by the Customers bookes, and this dep^t saith that the said goods were transported into New England in the said ship where she arrived on the seaventeenth day of July in the yeare aforesayd.”

So designated by Savage, Vol. II, p. 417.

Several of the facts stated in the preceding deposition are confirmed by other documents.

The following is a document contained in a volume of Land Records preserved in the office of the Secretary of State at Hartford, Conn. It is a copy of a letter from an attorney of Braintree, Eng., dated 1651, and addressed to an acquaintance in Hartford, Conn., in which letter allusion is twice made to Loomis. The writer of this letter (W. Lyngwood) is mentioned in the history and antiquities of the county of Essex, by Phillip Morant, London, 1768, vol. 2, p. 391.

"Cousin Clark:

Since I have received your letter in March, 1650, with your letter to your brother Richard and the testimonial of your being alive, under the Governor's seal, I have proceeded against your brother and taken out a commission in chancery, to examine witnesses which I intended to have had executed about Michaelmas, etc.

And now I desire only to have a good warrant and order from you testified by such of my friends there with you whose hands I know, as my cousin Loomis, cousin Cullick, John Talcott, John Steele, or some of those to whom you would have me pay the money, that I may have a good discharge and you may be sure to have the money, for I should be very sorry, after so much time, pains and money spent that either you should fail of your money, or myself of a good discharge for the £29, and so desiring to hear from you as speedily as you can, with my love to you, my cousin Loomis, cousin Cullick, and the rest of my cousins and friends there with you, I rest,

Your very loving cousin,

Braintree, March 20, 1651.

W. LYNGWOOD.

This is a true copy, Oct. 11, 1654.

JOHN CULLICK."

In a manuscript by John Talcott the second (shown to me by Mr. Charles J. Hoadley of Hartford), he says: "My uncle Mr. Mott sold my hon^d father Talcott his house that he lived in in Braintree in Old England per order in the year 1644, my father Talcott then living in this house in Hartford."*

In the will of John Talcott (made between 1655 and 1660) he mentions his kinsman John Skinner. This John Skinner was the son of John Skinner and Mary, daughter of Joseph Loomis (4).

In Hotten's Lists of Emigrants from Great Britain to the American Plantations, 1600-1700, the ship Susan and Ellen, Edward Payne, Master, is said to have sailed with a load of emigrants from London to New England in May, 1635. This is the same ship, with the same master, that brought over Joseph Loomis in 1638.

Again in vol. 2, Records of Particular Court for the colony of Connecticut (preserved in the office of the Secretary of State, Hartford, Conn.), p. 116, is given an inventory of the estate of Mr. Joseph Loomis, deceased, Nov. 25, 1658, in which it is stated that there is a debt in England against Mr. Loomis's estate amounting to £12. 14s. 8d.

The preceding documents are regarded as sufficient authority for the statement that Joseph Loomis, who is mentioned in the records of Windsor as having bought a piece of land in that town, Feb. 2, 1640, came from Braintree, England, and landed in Boston in 1638.

Children of Joseph Loomis.—Joseph Loomis had five sons and three daughters, whose marriages are recorded in the town records at Windsor, as also the births of their children, but as the date of the birth of Joseph's children is not recorded, it is difficult to determine the order of seniority.

In the Records of Particular Court for the colony of Connecticut, vol. 2, p. 115, is recorded the agreement of the children of Mr. Joseph Loomis respecting the division of the estate of said deceased, as approved by the court Dec. 2, 1658. This agreement is signed by the children in the following order:

Joseph Loomis.	Thomas Loomis.
Nicholas Olmsted.	Nathaniel Loomis.
Josias Hull.	Mary Tudor.*
John Loomis.	Samuel Loomis.

It is believed that the above order indicates the relative ages of the sons. This conclusion is founded upon the sentiments generally prevalent at that period with regard to the rights of seniority, and is confirmed by several circumstances.

1. Since the laws of England secured to the oldest son very important privileges over his younger brothers, the position of Joseph Loomis's name in the agreement above-mentioned is regarded as proving that he was the oldest son.

2. Joseph Loomis, the younger, and John Loomis had land granted to them from the Windsor Plantation in 1643. The other sons acquired no land until several years afterwards. The names of the five sons are repeatedly mentioned on the records at Windsor and Hartford, as jurors, freemen, troopers, etc., and these dates lead to the conclusion that Joseph and John were older than the other three sons.

3. The marriages of the sons, as recorded at Windsor, took place in the order of the names mentioned above.

Materials from which this genealogy has been derived.—The genealogy given in the following pages is for many years derived principally from the town records at Windsor, Conn. About 1672, Samuel Loomis removed to Westfield, Mass., and from him there descended a numerous family in that town. Soon after the year 1700, other descendants of Joseph Loomis settled in Colchester, Lebanon, Coventry and Bolton, from whom has sprung a numerous family; and soon afterwards they established themselves in Torrington, New Hartford, Suffield, and many other towns in Connecticut, as well as Springfield, Southwick, Sheffield, and other towns in Southwestern Massachusetts. I have consulted the records of all these towns with considerable care, and have visited nearly every Loomis family at present living in Connecticut or Massachusetts. Soon after the peace of 1783, several of the Loomis family emigrated to the States of Vermont and New York, and their descendants at the present time are found in nearly every county of the latter State. Early in the present century, and particularly after the war of 1812, several of the Loomis family removed to New Connecticut, and their descendants are now found in considerable numbers in all parts of Ohio, but particularly in the northern portion. Within the past forty years, the Loomis family has followed the grand tide of emigration westward, and representatives of Joseph Loomis are now to be found in all of the States formerly known as the "Free States," and a few are to be found in the States formerly known as the "Slave States."

In the following genealogy I have aimed to include all the descendants of Joseph Loomis of Braintree, England, who have retained the family name. No attempt has been made to enumerate the descendants of the daughters, who are known by other names than Loomis. It is not claimed that this list of descendants is complete. I have collected some additional names of persons who are presumed to be descendants of Joseph Loomis, but whose connection with him I have not yet been able satisfactorily to establish. It is hoped that future researches may enable us to recover most of the names which are now deficient in this record.

Unfounded traditions.—In my numerous visits with members of the Loomis family, I have met with a considerable number of traditions respecting the first settlement in this country which are either very inaccurate or entirely erroneous. One statement* which I have repeatedly seen is the following: "Joseph Loomis (then spelled Lomas), wife and children, left Plymouth, Eng., in the ship Mary and John, March 20, 1634, and landed at or near Boston, Mass., May 30."

This statement is entirely untrue, and contains a jumble of facts and dates derived in part from the history of other settlers in Windsor. On the 20th of March, 1630, a company of 160 persons, including Rev. John Warham, afterwards the first minister of Windsor, embarked at Plymouth, Eng., in the ship Mary and John, a vessel of 400 tons burden, and landed at Nantasket, near Boston, May 30th. But it is established that Joseph Loomis and his family did not come over until 1638, and the first record which can be found of his name in Connecticut is dated Feb. 2, 1640, when he bought a piece of land at Windsor.

Another statement, furnished me by a gentleman who has given considerable attention to the genealogy of the Loomis family, is the following: "Some sixty years since, Dr. Wheelock, then president of Dartmouth College, N. H., received a letter from a gentleman in Leyden, Holland, stating that a Mr. Lomas had deceased at that place, leaving some property to the oldest Lomas in Windsor, Conn., and from concomitants it is believed that our family once resided in Leyden."

In July, 1857, I visited Leyden, mainly for the purpose of testing the truth of this rumor. I examined the Address-Buch of Leyden for the name of Lomas, but found no such name. I consulted the clerks at the post office and many other persons in the town, but no one knew any such person.

The deaths in Leyden are all recorded in large volumes preserved at the Stadthaus. From 1775 to 1795, and also since 1805, there has been prepared an alphabetical list of all the deaths; but the name of Lomas could not be found there. There was no alphabetical list of the deaths for other years, and it was a hopeless task to look for a particular name without some indication of the year in which it was to be found.

There is also an alphabetical list of all who have left unclaimed property since 1776. The name Lomas is not there to be found, nor any name which it is thought could be confounded with it. I also examined an alphabetical list of all whose property had been sold from 1770 to 1812, but did not find any name resembling Lomas. Hence it is inferred that no such person had property sold in Leyden during that period.

This evidence satisfies me that the rumor above referred to is erroneous, either in respect of the place (Leyden) or the person (Lomas). I have found no evidence which indicated that Joseph Loomis of Windsor ever resided upon the continent of Europe.

The name Lomas in Great Britain.—In some parts of Great Britain the names Lomas and Lomax are of very common occurrence, while in other portions these names are entirely unknown. Slater's Directory of Manchester for 1865 gives 102 persons of the name Lomas, 47 of the name Lomax, 2 of the name Lummis, and 2 of the name Lomnitz. The following table shows the result of a similar analysis of the directories of eight towns of England:

*This statement is copied in R. R. Hinman's First Settlers of Conn., p. 152; Hartford, 1846.

	LOMAS	LOMAX	SIMILAR NAMES

Sheffield.....	11	0	0.
Birmingham.....	3	0	Lummis, 1.

Newcastle.....	0	0	0.

Column second of the preceding table shows the number of times the name Lomas occurs in each of the towns above mentioned; column third shows how many times the name Lomax occurs, and column fourth shows a few cases of names bearing some resemblance to the preceding.

In order to determine in what part of Great Britain the Lomas family first appeared, or has been longest established, I have consulted with great care the Directories of Great Britain and Ireland.

I have searched through Slater's Directory of Ireland for 1856 without finding Lomas or Lomax in a single instance. I have also searched through Slater's Directory of Scotland for 1860 without finding either Lomas or Lomax in a single instance.

In Slater's Directory of Wales for 1850 the names Lomas and Lomax occur only once each, viz., Thomas Lomas, tinman, in Crickhowell, and John Lomax, bootmaker, in Bangor.

In order to discover, if possible, the home of this family in England at a remote antiquity, I have selected as the basis of comparison that class of persons which is presumed to be the least migratory. Merchants and bankers, from the very nature of their business, form a migratory class, and we find an occasional merchant of the name Lomas in nearly every one of the large cities of England. Mechanics are less migratory; but with the exception of the nobility, the persons who are thought to be most closely attached to the soil are the farmers. I have therefore carefully consulted the English Post Office Directory for 1858 and have found no farmer of the name Lomas or Lomax except in the five following counties, viz.:

	LOMAS	LOMAX	SUM.
Cheshire.....	16 times	5 times	21 times

Staffordshire.....	9 "	0 "	9 "
Lancashire.....	1 "	3 "	4 "
Cumberland.....	1 "	0 "	1 "
Total.....	46 times	8 times	54 times

With only one exception these places are all near Manchester, and are included within a circle of 30 miles radius, whose centre is 25 miles S. S. E. of Manchester. This point is near the boundary of the three counties of Chester, Derby, and Stafford, and this circle has without doubt been the home of the Lomas family for several centuries.*

The resemblance between the Christian names occurring in England and those found at Windsor, Conn., is quite remarkable. Thus in the small town of Stockport, Cheshire, the Post Office Directory gives eight persons (only) of the name Lomas, and their Christian names are John, Joseph, James, Isaac, Matthew, Jacob, Charles, and William. Each of these names is found in the first three generations of the Lomas family at Windsor, and the first four names occur in the aggregate 26 times.

From the preceding examination it is inferred that for a long period the principal home of the Lomas family in Great Britain has been in the vicinity of Derbyshire.

Early history of the name Lomas in England.—In order to trace the history of the name Lomas, I have consulted early English records as far as I have been able. In the "Calendar to Pleadings in the reigns of Henry VII. to Elizabeth," a work in two vols., folio, published in 1827, the names Lomas, Lomax, and Lommas occur in all seven times. In the "Proceedings in Chancery in the reign of Elizabeth," a work in three vols., folio, published by the British Government in 1827-32, the names Lomas and Lomax each occur once. In an English periodical entitled "Notes and Queries," 2d series, vol. 8th, is a communication containing some hints respecting the early history of the Lomas family. In "William Berry's Pedigrees of Hertfordshire families," is given the pedigree of Joshua Lomax, who died in 1685. In a few other ancient documents I have found occasional mention of the name Lomas. The following table embodies the substance of the information derived from the preceding sources, to which I have added the Lomas and Lomax graduates of the two oldest English Universities, down to 1850.

The correspondent of "Notes and Queries," 2d ser., vol. 8, p. 478, says: "The ancient orthography of the name Lomax or Lomas appears in a MS. Rent-Roll of Sir John Pilkington of Bury, Knight, dated 13 Henry VI. (1435) wherein occur Radus del Lumhalghes, Oliverus del Lumhalghes, Thomas del Lumhalghe de Whetyll, and Galfridus del Lumhalghes, all holding lands within the manor of Bury, in the county of Lancaster."

At first view we might think that the name Lomax could not be derived from Lumhalghes, but a little reflection will render it less improbable. It is presumed that the name Lumhalghes was pronounced in two syllables. There are several English words ending in es in which the e is not sounded; such as besides, domes, fires, notes, etc., and in the early English the number of such cases was much greater than at present. Thus clerks	was written	clerkes.

fowls	"	fowles.
herbs	"	herbes.
hills	"	hilles.
months	"	monthes.
mountains	was written	mounteynes.
sins	"	synnes.
songs	"	songes.
towards	"	towardes.
wills	"	willes, etc.

The letter h simply denotes a strong breathing which is common in all parts of England, but more particularly in the northern counties. Canceling the letters h and e, the word is reduced to Lumalgs, and this would be pronounced very much like the word Lomax.

The same correspondent of "Notes and Queries," p. 478, states: "In a curious article contributed to the Chetham Society (Miscell., vol. 1855) being Examynatyons towcheynge Cokeye More, tpe. H. vii (1485-1509), one of the witnesses examined was Lawrens Lomatz of y^e p'ish of Bolton, of the age of lxx years."

From the table on page 16 it appears that the name Lomas in England can be traced back a little more than four centuries, but I have been unable to trace it further. Surnames were first introduced into England about the time of the Conquest (A. D. 1066), but the custom came slowly into use during the eleventh and three following centuries. Hereditary surnames were not permanently settled among the lower and middle classes in England before the era of the Reformation (A. D. 1517). But Laurent Lomax, born about 1427, was a person of some distinction, and either he or his son (as will be shown hereafter) was authorized to have a coat of arms. The absence of any earlier mention in English annals of the name Lomax or Lomas is therefore thought to be somewhat remarkable, and may be explained if we suppose the family to have been natives of some other country, and that they had recently settled in England. The reasons for this last supposition will be stated hereafter.

The pronunciation of the name Lomas four centuries ago was probably well represented by the spelling Lomatz. Subsequently one branch of the family adopted the spelling Lomax and another the spelling Lomas, and these two modes of spelling have been pretty consistently adhered to in England down to the present time.

It is the common impression in England that the names Lomax and Lomas have the same origin. A surgeon of some eminence residing in Manchester, Eng., married a Miss Lomas. I visited the family in 1857, and was told that the lady's grandfather was named Lomax, but that her father (believing that the name was originally Lomas) adopted the spelling Lomas.

The change of the name Lomatz to Lomax and Lomas is no greater than the changes which have taken place in many other English names whose history can be traced back several centuries. We have an example of the facility with which the letter x is exchanged for the letter s or soft c, in the word index, whose plural is either indexes or indices.*

The Lomax coat of arms.—Lawrent Lomax of Lancaster Co. was authorized to bear a coat of arms sometime prior to the year 1561. In the reign of Philip and Mary (A. D. 1554), a commission of visitation was appointed to regulate the use and assumption of arms, and several similar commissions were subsequently issued under the reign of Elizabeth and her successors. At the Visitation of 1561, Lawrent Lomax of Eye, in Suffolk County, was recorded as having a coat of arms. This record is found in a manuscript volume contained in the British Museum, entitled "Pedigrees and Arms of Suffolk Families," Harleian Collection of Manuscripts, No. 1449. On page 110b of this manuscript is found a record of Laurent Lomax (born in Lancaster), with the names of his descendants (including children, grandchildren and great grandchildren), and his coat of arms is represented by a figure in the margin.

The following is a copy of the record:

Lawrent Lomax = Ann dau. and heir of Ounger

*Also note that Brussels was formerly Bruxelles; Mexico was Messico.

The representation of the Lomax coat of arms on the frontispiece is taken from Berry's Pedigrees of Hertfordshire families, page 103, where is given the genealogy of Joshua Lomax of Childwickbury, Hertfordshire. This coat of arms is thus described: "Ermine a Greyhound, courant between three escallops, sable. Crest a demi greyhound Argent, collard Gules."

The last visitation of the heralds was made in 1683. Soon after this date the ordinances which had been made deciding who were entitled to bear arms were generally disregarded, and arms were assumed by any person who coveted this distinction.

Within a comparatively recent period, the Lomas family has assumed an independent coat of arms. In a book entitled "A complete body of Heraldry, by Joseph Edmondson, London, 1780," the name Lomax appears, but not the name Lomas. In the "British Herald, by Thomas Robson, Sunderland, 1830," and in numerous more recent works on heraldry, the Lomas coat of arms is described thus: "Argent between two palets, gules three fleurs de lis in pale sable, a chief azure. Crest, on a chapeau a pelican vulning herself proper."

The figure on the frontispiece representing the Lomas coat of arms, is copied from a drawing which I obtained in 1856 at an office of Heraldry in London. (See supplementary data on The Lomas Coat of Arms).

Can the Lomas family be traced to the continent of Europe?—In the hope of obtaining some further information as to the early history of the Lomas family, I have consulted the most extensive biographical dictionaries within my reach for the names Lomas and Lomax; also all the directories of cities and countries of Europe which I could find in the United States, or in those parts of Europe which I have visited; and I have also consulted all the large gazeteers that I could find in quest of places bearing either of the above names, or any name having a decided resemblance to either of them.

(A.) The following is a brief summary of the results obtained respecting the names of persons:

1. Cantoral (Hieron de) Lomas, a Spanish poet from Valladolid, lived in the latter half of the sixteenth century, and wrote various poems, which were published at Madrid in 1577. See Grosses Vollständiges Universal Lexicon, 1738, v. 18, p. 330. Also Ticknor's History of Spanish Literature, v. 3, p. 513.

2. Giovanni Paul Lomazzo, an Italian painter and savant, born at Milan,* April 26, 1538, of a distinguished family from the village of Lomazzo, near Como. He was called to Florence by Cosmo de Medicis, who made him guardian of a gallery of 4,000 paintings. He died in 1598.—Biographie Universelle, Paris, 1819, t. 24, p. 637.

3. In the Directory of Spain (El Indicador de España, Barcelona, 1864, á 1865) appears the name of Nicolas Lomas at Santander. The name Loma occurs five times in the Provinces of Madrid, Toledo, Cordova and Burgos.

In 1864, Fidel Carcia Lomas was sub-director del Registro de la propiedad.—El Indicador, p. 23.

In 1869, Eduardo de la Lomas was civil Governor of the Province of Saragossa.

tories of Berlin, Dresden and Leipsic, the name Lommatsch frequently occurs. Also the Directory of Berlin for 1866 contains the name Lomax, but upon inquiry this was found to be an Englishman recently established in Germany.

Do the preceding facts afford a basis for any conjecture respecting the early history of the Lomas family? It is generally contended by writers on onomatology that all proper names had originally a peculiar and appropriate meaning. (See Salverte's Essai historique sur les noms d'homme, t. 1, p. 7.) Is the name Lomas derived from any word or combination of words in the English language? No one has ever suggested any such derivation which could be considered as in any degree plausible. The conclusion seems to follow of necessity that the name Lomas is not of English origin. The same considerations lead to the conclusion that it is not of French, or German, or Italian origin. The case is, however, different with Spain. Loma in Spanish signifies a little hill, and lomas is the plural of loma, signifying hills. It is probable, therefore, that the names Loma and Lomas were early introduced as surnames in Spain, and we can understand why these names were applied to places which were inhabited by Spaniards, or of which the Spaniards were the first explorers. The conclusion naturally follows that the Lomas family in England came from Spain about the year 1400, or perhaps earlier. The names Lomis and Lomisville, applied to villages in Switzerland, render it probable that persons of the same name from Spain, or perhaps from the Lomas family established in England, migrated to Switzerland.

The names Lomazzi and Lomazzo in Northern Italy are also thought to have originated from the same stock. These names differ from Lomax or Lomatz only in substituting an Italian termination.

This will appear from the following examples:

The English name	Lawrence	becomes	Lorenzo	in Italian.
"	Morris	"	Maurizio	"
"	Boniface	"	Bonifazio	"
"	Florence	"	Fiorenze	"
"	Nice	"	Nizza	"
"	Venice	"	Venezia	"

*See maps accompanying Murray's North Italy, Part I.

See hereinafter, what Prof. C. A. Hoppin, Jr., says on this very interesting point.

It is possible that the name Lommatsch in Saxony is simply the name Lomatz modified by a change of termination, so as better to express the peculiar German pronunciation.

It seems, therefore, probable that the Lomas family originated in Spain; that four or five centuries ago, and perhaps earlier, one or more members of this family became established in England, while others of the family found their way into Northern Italy.

It may appear strange that when the facilities for travel were so restricted, as they were in Europe during the middle ages, the Lomas family should have become so widely scattered. But we know that during the Crusades (from A. D. 1096 to 1270), adventurers from England, France, Spain, Germany and Italy, were united in a common cause; and those crusaders who returned from Palestine instead of returning to their native homes, were frequently dispersed into foreign countries. The result must have been a considerable mingling together of the people of the different nations of Europe.

It may be objected that the fact that Laurent Lomax had a coat of arms proves that he was not of foreign origin. Such an objection is not well founded. Many English families that have a coat of arms are of French origin, while others are of German, Italian, or Spanish origin. Among families of this description having a German origin occur the names Deycheler, Kramer, Lauginger, Mazzinghi, and Weber; among those families having an Italian origin occur the names Castillon, Corsellis, De Moline, and Sileto; while among the families admitted to be of Spanish origin occur the names Ayala, Florio, Gambow, and Ilbery.

Other families of the Loomis name.—Besides the descendants of Joseph Loomis of Windsor, there are in the United States other families known by the name of Loomis, Lummis, or Lomas. Edward Lomas, born about 1606, came from London in 1635, and settled in Ipswich, Mass., as early as 1648. He had six children: John resided in Salem, Mass.; Samuel settled in Hamilton, Mass.; Nathaniel settled in Dover, N. H.; Jonathan settled in Ipswich, Mass.; Edward settled in Cohanzy, N. J.; and there was a daughter, who married John Sherring. The descendants of Edward Lomas generally spell their name Lummis, and this circumstance is usually sufficient to distinguish them from the Windsor family; but some of them have adopted the spelling Loomis, and a few have adopted the anomalous spelling Lamos. I have undertaken to make out the genealogy of this family, and have made considerable progress, but my manuscript is not yet ready for publication.*

There was also a Joseph Lomas born in England about 1761, who was a soldier in Burgoyne's army, who remained in this country after the war, settled in Andover, Mass., and died in Erie Co., N. Y., about 1830. He had ten children, among whom were six sons, who married and had children. They generally claim that the proper spelling of their name is Lomas, but it is sometimes spelled Loomis. I have also undertaken to make out a complete genealogy of this family.*

Besides the three families above referred to, in most of the larger cities we find persons of the name Lomas who were born in England, or whose parents came from England since the peace of 1783. Such persons uniformly claim that the proper spelling of their name is Lomas, but in the city directories it is frequently spelled Loomis. I have not yet found a person in the United States bearing the name Lomas, Loomis, or Lummis who does not probably belong to one of the preceding classes; in other words, there are believed to be in the United States but two Lomas families whose ancestors came to this country before the Revolution of 1776; the members of one (being descended from Joseph of

*A copy of this and much additional data is now in the possession of Elisha S. Loomis, of Berea, O.

Windsor) almost without exception spelling their name Loomis, and those of the other family (descended from Edward of Ipswich) generally spelling their name Lummis. If the work which I have commenced should be ever completed, it will show the genealogy of every person in the United States bearing the name Loomis, Lummis, or Lomas, and whose ancestors came to this country before the commencement of the present century.*

Additional Historical Data and Supplementary Facts

Under "Early history of the name Lomas in England," these additional facts are pertinent.

The name "del Lumhalghes" appears as "del Lumhalghe" in records of the time of Henry VI.

"Laurens Lomatz" appears in one author as "Laurent Lomax, b. 1427, of Bolton Parish, Eng. A witness at ae. 70."

Jossu Von Lom, b. 1500, in Buren, Holland, a physician, wrote a work and signed his name (Lottu) Lommius.

"1578 John Lummas, Derbyshire" is also written "John Lomax."

"1668. Rev. John Lomax" was the father of John Lomax, who was the ancestor of the Lomaxes of Va., and N. C., U. S. A.

"1848. James Lomas, Lieut. Gen.," is also written "James Lumax, Lieut. Gen."

In Notes and Queries, Dec. 10, 1859, the same name is written the following three ways,—Lummas, Lummis, and Lomax.

Also it appears that Anne and Sarah Lomax, of Shropshire, were daughters of Jervase Lummas, of Shropshire.

Also James Lomax, 1626, had his name written Lummax.

Also Bardsley's (Ed'n of 1901) Dictionary of British and Welsh Surnames, p. 492 and 500, for name Loomis has:

"Lomas, Lomax, Local, 'of Lomax,' a small spot in the parish of Bury Co., Lanc. I do not know whether it can still be identified, but it has given birth to a family name that has ramified itself in a wonderful manner."

1. Christopher Lomax, of bury, 1590; wills at Chester (1545-1620), p. 125.
2. Jeffery Lomax, of Heap, 1590; ibid.
3. Lawrence Smethrust, of Lomax, parish of Bury, 1624; ibid (1621-50), p. 201.

4. Edw. Smethrust, of Lomax, parish of Bury, Yeoman, 1638; ibid.

5. Oliver Lumas, 1602, Preston Guild Rolls, p. 63.

6. Oliver Lumas, 1622, ibid, p. 70.

7. Richard Lumas, 1603, ibid, p. 63.

8. Richard Lumax, 1622, ibid, p. 70.

The double instances given in 5, 6, 7 and 8 prove, if proof were needed, that Lomax and Lomas are one and the same name. In Manchester Directory Lomas occurs 31 and Lomax 18 times; London, 7, 10; New York, 3, 4."

*It is now (1885) established that one William Lomas, a forgerman (i. e. trained to forge iron) came from Wales and settled in East Nantmel, Chester Co., Pa. He bought land there in 1797 and died in 1803, leaving sons Wm., Thomas and John; from John are now known many descendants. It is said that Wm. Lomas came in the British army, but deserted to the Am. army while at Valley Forge. He helped to make the first gun ever made in Pa.

The Name Lomas on the Continent of Europe

In British Family Names, 2nd edition, 1903, is found the following:—
 “Lomax, Lomas. Fr. Lammas, Lamusse; Fl. Lammers; D'ch. Lommesse, p. n. (time of birth (?) famous). Lammasse in Rot. Hund. Lamisso, a Lomb. King 5th century.”

Another writer says: “The name is Lomas in France and Lommatsch in Germany.”

The following historical note relative to the Scottish border revolution, 1095, makes reference to a name which seems closely related to the name Loomis.

In “The Border-History of England and Scotland” by the Rev. Geo. Ridpath of Stitchill, revised by his bro., the Rev. Philip Ridpath, of Hutton (edition of 1810, London), on p. 72, we find this:

“Soon after, (the last revolution in Scotland, 1095), the young king, (Edgar, King of Scotland, in 1098), in testimony of his gratitude, made a present of the above-mentioned convent (the convent of Durham), of the place and lands of Coldingham, together with several villages in its neighborhood. . . .* ”

Is not Lumis (omitting the “den”) nearer Loomis than Spanish Loma, Lancastrian Lumhalghes, or even Lomax? Was there a Lumis family sufficiently established in 1095 to stamp its name on this “border” place, or did the place (through the meaning of the term) give rise to a Lumis family? And was this family in any way connected with the early Lancastrian family? Who can tell?

Some Variations of the Name Lomas

In Savage's Gen. Dic'y, Vol. III, p. 111-115, the name is spelled eight ways. In England and the U. S., the name has been written or recorded each of the following 42 ways since the year 1600: Lamas, Lames, Lamus, Lammas, Lamos, Lamys, Lewmas, Lomack, Lomacks, Lomas, Lomatz, Lomax, Lomes, Lomies, Lomis, Lommas, Lommatz, Lommes, Lomnitz, Lomys, Loomas, Loomax, Loomes, Loomis, Loomiss, Lomes, Looms, Loomys, Lowmas, Lumas, Lumass, Lumax, Lumes, Lumis, Lummas, Lummis, Lummix, Lummox, Lummus, Lumus, Lumux, Lumys.

Investigation reveals that:—

1. The descendants of Joseph Lomas, the soldier in Burgoyne's army, who settled at Andover, Mass., and of Wm. Lomas, of Ashtabula Co., O., who settled there about 1870, coming from England, generally spell their name Lomas; a few spell it Loomis or Lumis.

2. The descendants of Wm. Lomas, said to have come to America during the Rev. War, and who settled in Chester Co., Pa., generally spell their name Loomis.

3. The descendants of Edward Lumas or Lumax, also written Lomas and Lummis, of Ispwich, Mass., 1648, generally spell their name Lummis or Lummus; but many are now found who spell it Loomis.

4. The descendants of Joseph Loomis (Lomas) of Windsor, Conn., 1639, now nearly always spell their name Loomis.

*The Charter together with the mansion of Coldingham, mentions the following mansions, viz.: Aldcambus, Lumisden, Regintun (Renton), Riston, Swinwede (Swinewood), Fardun (Farnyside), the two Eituns (Aitons), Prenagest (Prendergest), and Cramsmuthe. All these, with small variations in spelling, are the names of villages to this day situated in the neighbourhood, except Cranesmuthe.

At present, in England, the spelling Lomas is well established.* In the U. S. of America and Canada, the spelling Loomis is generally found.

The Lomas Coat of Arms

"He who inherits arms is A gentleman, well bred and of good name."

—King Henry V.

The motto "Ne cede malis" is found in Verg. Ae., 6, 95, and the translation is, "Do not give way to misfortunes." The coat of arms by the rules of heraldry may be interpreted thus:

The pallet, signifying military strength and fortification, was given to those who impaled or otherwise defended cities, or supported the government of their sovereign, "by standing up uprightly for prince and country." The Fleur-de-lis was often granted to those who had taken part in the French wars. The Pelican is the device of the inner temple, London. And vulning itself signifies, that it will give its own blood for its young, hence a symbol of devoted and self-sacrificing charity. On p. 98, of Wescott's Hst. of the Eng. Bible (the Bishop's Bible which appeared in 1568), Wescott says: "At the end is an elegant couplet in the device of the pelican feeding her young." The couplet is:

"Matris ut haec proprio stirps est satiata cruore, Pacis item proprio, Christe, cruore tuos."

Translated, it reads:

"As this young is fed by the actual blood of the mother
So, O Christ, you feed yours with your own blood."

The signification of the colors are,—

Argent, peace and sincerity;

Gules, magnanimity and military fortitude;

Sable, constancy; and

Azure, loyalty and truth.

Some Historical Facts Relative to Arms

Arms, so called because originally displayed upon defensive armor.

Coat of arms, because embroidered upon the coat worn over the armor.

William the Conqueror did not use arms. Uncertain when introduced into England, but in the 13th century they came rapidly into use.

In the infancy of heraldry every knight assumed whatever arms he chose, but the Crusades, by bringing together soldiers of different nations, tended to produce a certain assimilation in their heraldry, all of which are now under the direction of the Heralds' College of London.

In America any one is free to adopt any device, or coat of arms, he may choose. For our pioneer forefathers left all such trappings in the mother country, and for now ten generations their descendants have been more than "gentlemen," they have been useful members of society and defenders of equality. Yet, is not the advice given in the report of the Committee on Heraldry, of the N. E. Hist. and Gen. Society, made in 1898 and adopted in 1899, the better rule to follow? See same at end of Prof. Hoppin, Jr.'s report, on Origin of the Name and Ancestry in England.

*In "Homes of Family Names in Great Britain," by Henry Brougham Guppy, M.B., edition of 1890, p. 135, the author says: "Lomas is a name very numerous on the Cheshire border and in the vicinity of Stockport in that county," viz., Derbyshire. On p. 57 he says: "Lomas, Cheshire, 40 (meaning 40 per 10,000 of population); Derbyshire, 61; Lancashire, 11; Staffordshire, 14. In Lancashire it is occasionally spelt Lomax." (The reader will note that the spelling Loomis does not occur at all in Guppy's work).

The Loomis Institute

Its Organization, Condition and Purposes

OF the 26,000 people who came down to this land of ours in the great Puritan exodus from England, from 1620 to 1640, was one—our ancestor—Joseph Loomis, who settled finally, in 1639, at Windsor, at the meeting of the waters, on “The Island.”

This “Ancestral Home” has been in perpetual possession of his descendants, coming down in an unbroken regular succession to Epaphras Loomis (No. 2474), and he sold it to Rev. George Loomis (No. 5476), who finally sold it to Col. John Mason Loomis (No. 2537).

This “homestead” is situated on elevated ground on the bank of the Farmington River and but a short distance from the west bank of the Connecticut River, and commands an uncommonly fine view of these rivers and vallies. Being but six miles north of the beautiful city of Hartford and but a half mile from the depots of the N. Y., New Haven and Springfield R. R., and an inter-urban electric road, the site is ideal. What could be more fitting to perpetuate the family name than that this “ancestral home on the Island” should become the home of the Loomis Institute, thus forever preserving “The Hearthstone” of our ancestor, Joseph Loomis.

“In 1874, James C. Loomis, Hezekiah B. Loomis, Osbert B. Loomis, H. Sidney Hayden and his wife, and John Mason Loomis were constituted a corporate body by the name of the Loomis Institute. * * * It is the design of the corporators to do what they can to endow this Institution, and in this they desire the co-operation of all the Loomis family, that the Institution may become a lasting monument to the memory of Joseph Loomis, and a blessing to the town which he selected for his refuge from the annoyances to which Puritans were subjected in the mother country.”

That you may the more fully appreciate the origin and purpose of the Institute, the Loomis Association has deemed it wise to give in full the address of the President of the Board of Trustees of the Institute. Its completeness leaves but little to be said in addition.

The Loomis Institute Consecrated to American Education

BY JOHN M. TAYLOR

President of the Board of Trustees of The Loomis Institute

AN ADDRESS SETTING FORTH THE ORGANIZATION, CONDITION AND PURPOSES OF THE LOOMIS INSTITUTE AT WINDSOR, CONNECTICUT, DELIVERED AT THE REUNION OF THE LOOMIS FAMILY ASSOCIATION AT HARTFORD, CONNECTICUT, SEPTEMBER TWENTY-SEVENTH, NINETEEN HUNDRED AND FIVE

IN behalf of its trustees, and at your president's request, I am to have the pleasure and the honor of stating a few facts to you about The Loomis Institute, its organization, condition, and purposes.

May we not first take a glimpse at the historic principles which, nearly three centuries after their enunciation, make our government what it is, link together the constitutions of the nation and the states, and find a new renaissance in the work of family reunions like these, and of the many patriotic orders and societies, on whose rolls we read alone the names of the descendants of the adventurers into the New England:

"Faith in God, faith in work—this is the short formula in which we may sum up the teaching of the founders of New England, a creed ample enough for this life and the next."—"New England Two Centuries Ago." (Lowell.)

"The Puritan was hard, severe, sour, sober and bigoted; but God sifted three kingdoms to find him wherewith to plant a free republic."—Address, Forefather's Day. (Curtis).

"I do not believe in all the beliefs of the Puritan Fathers; but I thoroughly believe in them, in their manhood, their fortitude, their integrity, their devotion to duty, their reverent recognition of God in their public and private affairs."—"The Puritan Republic." (Howe).

"The Pilgrims and the Puritans did not live in vain. Their influence has gone out into all the earth. We are drinking at the fountains which they opened. We walk in their light; and we are to pass on the torch to other generations."—"The Puritan in England and New England." (Byington).

These are the honors paid to the Puritans of Old England and of New England, and to their service to mankind, by their kinsmen of our generation.

These are the present day tributes of the diplomat and poet, the orator and reformer, the historian and theologian, not only to the men who stood in the ranks of Cromwell's Ironsides, and with "the embattled farmers who fired the shot heard round the world," but to their fine and unconquerable spirit and devotion which in parliament and conventicle, in camp and field, in council chamber and meeting house, gave character, inspiration, perpetuity, to that great historic movement which Carlyle calls the last of our great heroisms.

We light our altar fires and burn incense to the memories of these masterful men, and of the gentle and heroic women who shared in their sacrifices and achievements that our matchless heritage of government by the people might endure; and it is not alone what the forefathers and foremothers were or were not in birth, station, inheritance, environment, that commands our homage, but what they wrought out of hard and fast conditions in the colonial settlements in the New England, that we offer our songs of thanksgiving.

Therefore are we ancestor worshippers; and these are the days of ancestral honor, discovery, and exploitation. Vanity, social ambition, and preferment may inspire some of the candidates for honors in the societies of the day; and shrewd politics, we are told, plays a part in conventions and elections; and these are necessary incidents; but every monument, memorial, tablet, statue and inscription, every neglected God's acre restored and made beautiful by the loving hands of the children of the Pilgrim and Puritan, voices the spirit of new loyalty and patriotism, and of a new-born faith in God, our country, and our fellow-men.

Is it not fitting to-day, and in this presence, and always, to lay stress on what our forefathers ordained here in blood and sacrifice and tears?

Twenty-six thousand people came over to this land of ours in the great Puritan exodus from England, from 1620 to 1640. Strong and masterful were many of these men—makers of history—men of Kent and Middlesex, of Suffolk and Essex, of whom I may not speak, as no time offers; and with the men of Essex came your first ancestor, Joseph Loomis, of Braintree, to set down at Windsor in the "Lord's Waste."

What an environment was his, what an opportunity of acquaintance and of honor, what a share to have in building the temple of the Republic! He was the friend and companion of Hooker and Ludlow, of Haynes and Wyllys, of Stiles and Phelps, Grant and Rossiter, and all the leaders of the three original towns; doing his duty amid the hardships and dangers that confronted the colonists in his life at Windsor from 1639 to 1658.

What a race of men and women in church and state, in all the world's busy activities of action and of thought, has sprung from that sturdy stock! Are they not known to all of us, who do honor to their memories this day—physicians, surgeons, artists, physicists, journalists, authors, diplomatists, educators, scientists, inventors, statesmen and jurists, soldiers in all the wars of the colonies and of the Revolution and of the Union? A wonderful record is the story of their service to mankind.

It is a pure and princely heritage of truth, of honor, of nobility of character, which these men have left to you—sons and daughters of the house of Loomis. Will any memorial of them be more enduring or more fitting to perpetuate the family name, than the one to rise on "The Island" yonder when we or our successors have carried to fruition the plans and purposes of the Institute's donors whose names are on your lips?

Thirty years ago, James C. Loomis, Hezekiah B. Loomis, Osbert B. Loomis, H. Sidney Hayden, and his wife, Abbey S. Loomis, and John Mason Loomis, petitioned the General Assembly of Connecticut for an act of incorporation.

There was a deep and tender pathos, a great sorrow, written within the lines of this appeal. Children were not born of some of the marital alliances of these good people; and children born of others died in the bloom and promise of their youth.

With none to bear their names in direct lineage, and inherit their fortunes, their thoughts were turned to the nurture, protection and education of the children of their kinsmen, and others upon whom might fall the benediction of their good deeds.

Earnest study, keen foresight, and prayerful meditation—in the old, Puritan fashion—marked the beginning of their philanthropic purpose and wise charity, made perpetual in the special law of the Commonwealth. All this stands out in bold relief in the notes, memoranda, family records, and in the last wills and testaments of the incorporators.

Is not that a fine and exalted spirit, the spirit of their forefathers and yours, that rings in the words of James C. Loomis, written four years after the charter was granted, and signed by all the petitioners and Mary H. Loomis, and entitled a

“FAMILY TESTIMONIAL.”

“Somewhere near the termination of the year 1871, or the beginning of 1872, a sentiment, born of the strong natural love and sympathy between us, and intensified by the loss of all our children, crystallized into a desire to leave some memento of our lives, failing the natural one of succession; and this finally took the form of a free educational establishment, called the Loomis Institute.

“Those of us now living, admonished by the death of our brothers, James and Samuel, that whatever we wish to do, or make known, must be done now; and desiring to make a record of our united sentiments for ourselves, and all who in the future may be interested in the story of the love and tenderness we bear to each other, moving us to stand together, supporting at the close of our lives a common purpose, pledge ourselves to the support, care and personal comfort of each other, and to remain true and signally faithful to the Loomis Institute, acknowledging and accepting the duties incident, cheerfully, lovingly, and devotedly; so that nothing short of death shall divert us from our purpose of mutual support; hoping and trusting that some good may come to posterity, from the harvest, poor though it may be, of our lives.”

After clothing the body politic and corporate by the name of The Loomis Institute with full corporate powers, there came the vital question of defining its purposes, and, it is to this point we ask your especial attention. With what clear conception of future needs and conditions, and under what explicit and simple limitations were the intentions and plans of these donors written in the law. This is the educational clause of the charter:

Sec. 2. This institute shall be, and the same hereby is constituted and established for the free and gratuitous education of all persons of the age of twelve years and upwards to twenty years in all the departments of learning which are now taught or hereafter may be taught in the various grades of schools in this country, and also for the purpose of maintaining and supplying all those whose condition and circumstances may require it, with all those things which may be deemed necessary and proper for their comfort and advancement in useful knowledge, so far as the funds of the institute will permit. But no person shall be admitted as a student in said institute until he or she shall be adjudged, on examination, capable of reading and spelling the English language correctly, writing a good, legible hand, and resolving questions in the four rules of arithmetic, with a knowledge of elementary geography and grammar, and shall sustain a good moral character. In case a greater number of persons having the requisite qualifications shall apply for admission than the institute can accommodate, then selection from said applicants shall be made, first from those belonging to the state of Connecticut, and next from those deemed most worthy, without regard to state or nation, all of which shall be determined by said trustees and their successors, or by committees by them appointed, in conformity to the provisions of this act.

Such, then, is the trust committed to us—one which no one may venture to administer save in the spirit which gave it life, and under a full sense of its solemn obligations.

Who are charged with these charter duties, and under what authority and commission do they serve? They are acting at the request of some of the original incorporators, and under the wise provision they made for the nomination and appointment of their successors:

Sec. 8. The said trustees and their successors shall have power and authority by a major vote, from time to time, as they may deem expedient to increase the number of trustees to any number not exceeding twelve, and also by a similar vote to fill any and all vacancies that may occur by death, resignation, removal, or otherwise, at their discretion; but after the death, resignation, removal for cause from office, or neglect or refusal of all of the above-named trustees to act as such, the number of trustees shall not in any case be less than seven; and if the then existing board of trustees shall neglect or fail to fill all the vacancies that may then exist under the number of seven, for the period of six months, or if from any cause at any time there shall be an entire vacancy in said board, then the governor of the state, for the time being, shall have power, and it shall be his duty, by and with the advice and consent of the chief judge or justice of the state, to appoint not less than seven fit and proper persons to be and become the trustees of said institute; and the persons thus appointed shall be the trustees of said institute, with all the rights and power appertaining thereto.

The charter fixes the institute site. The trustees have power and authority, with the consent of the owners thereof, to select such portion of the original homestead of Joseph Loomis, taken up by him in 1639, and continued in the ownership and possession of his descendants from that day to this, situated upon "The Island," so called, in Windsor, in the County of Hartford and State of Connecticut, and any other lands immediately contiguous thereto, not exceeding in quantity fifty acres, as they may deem necessary and proper. And the location thus selected and determined upon shall thereafter become and forever be and remain the site and location of said institute, and no person or persons shall thereafter have power or authority to take, appropriate, convey, or otherwise dispose of the same, by gift, grant, bargain, sale, exchange, mortgage, or in any other manner or form to any person or persons, or for any cause or purpose whatever, but the same shall be and forever remain the location of said institute, and appropriated and used for the purposes intended by the donors and by the provisions of this act.

No duty imposed on the trustees, save the establishment of educational methods and courses of instruction, involves more serious problems than these permissive charter provisions—to lay out, improve and beautify said grounds, in such manner and to such an extent as they may deem necessary and proper—to determine the number, form, dimensions, materials and style of architecture of the buildings to be erected thereon, and the location of the same in said premises.

It is our present purpose during the coming year, acting under expert advices to take some steps in beautifying and improving "The Island," by grading, draining, designating roadways and paths, and especially in setting small plantations of trees and shrubs, and all with a proper view to the location of the institute buildings; and we are not unmindful of your deep interest in the preservation and maintenance of "The Homestead."

On these historic grounds, diversified by hill and valley, meadow and upland, and wide river views, rich in tradition and hallowed by ancestral memories, there will rise to view, in the coming years, the memorials to the Loomis name, consecrated to the ends they sought to serve.

These important and primary works for the beginnings of the institute must be co-ordinate. They must be undertaken with a clear and definite knowledge of the end in view, from the outset. We shall take no action until we are fully prepared with ways and means.

We shall try no experiments. We shall erect no buildings, beautiful and ornate, without resources to maintain them. We shall erect none until we know what plans are the wisest to insure that "free and gratuitous education," that "comfort and advancement in useful knowledge," which we are solemnly charged to devise, inaugurate and conserve. We are in the midst of a revolution in educational views, systems and results; and who may predict what the course of wisdom and prudence may be, at some distant day, when the affairs of the institute shall call for practical administration, as a school or series of schools of learning? Noting on every side the value and success of present-day methods in the arts, crafts, trades and industries, and the wider sweep of practical instruction and experience, I can only say that, so far as we can now foresee, the children and youth who may have been trusted to The Loomis Institute will go out from it equipped to win their way in the world, with both heads and hands.

Five years ago vacancies caused by death made a reorganization necessary; and the present trustees were appointed by Governor George P. McLean, with the advice and consent of the late Chief Justice of the State, Charles B. Andrews.

The institute cannot be established and maintained, except it have ample resources. They are provided, and to be provided, by the bequest of the donors whose names you may read in the charter, of other members of the family who hold to the same great purpose, and by the gifts or bequests of others who may be interested through your good offices:

Sec. 4. The said trustees and their successors shall have power and authority to manage and direct the property, funds and effects of said institute, all of which shall be exempt from taxation so long as said institute shall be maintained and used for the purposes of education, as herein intended; provided, always, that no real estate located in the state of Connecticut, held by said institute for investment and not used by said institute for educational purposes, shall be exempt from taxation by virtue of the provisions of this section.

And after the original buildings shall have been completed according to the plans of said trustees, and furnished as herein provided, it shall be the duty of said trustees and their successors to cause all of the uninvested principal funds which may remain, or which may thereafter be received, and which may not be given to the institute for any specific purpose inconsistent herewith, and which may not be needed for the erection of any other buildings, to be safely invested in the same manner as required by the laws of this state for the investment of trust funds; and said funds shall be and remain a perpetual fund, and the rents, issues, and profits thereof thereafter shall be used and expended in defraying the current expenses of the institute, in the erection of new buildings, and in the purchase of books, maps, charts, apparatus, and all other matters and things which may be deemed necessary and proper best to promote and secure the welfare of the institute.

The present assets of the institute in the treasurer's custody, under various bequests of members of the family and the result of their investment and reinvestment as trust funds, amount to $520,000. This is a conservative estimate. The securities are sound in quality and character, and they are selected by the finance committee of the trustees. As it has been publicly noted elsewhere, we think it proper to also state that when the life estate of his widow, Mary H. Loomis, ceases (an event which we trust may not occur for many years), except five per cent going to various persons, the institute will receive the properties bequeathed to it by the late Col. John Mason Loomis—of whose last will and testament one of the trustees is an executor—estimated at $1,120,000. The institute therefore has either a present or vested interest in property worth, at a reasonable present valuation, $1,640,000—a great benefaction, dedicated to one of the noblest of purposes, and to be administered, we trust, now and always, in the spirit which illumines these words in Colonel Loomis' will:

"Hoping to leave some mark for good upon our race and time, we present to the Loomis Family this their Hearth Stone, and endow it with all we have; inviting them to rally round it as their shrine, from which their boys and girls shall take the highest inspirations for better and grander lives, from the best of their race who have gone before, and, like them, ever keeping the banner of human progress, honor and manhood, to the front."

We trust that every one here has visited "The Island," "The Homestead" and "The Hearth Stone," and feels the uplifting and the inspiration which such ties and associations alone can give. We hope every one has seen our "Loomis Room," where we hold in trust and safety—until transferred to the Memorial building on "The Island"—the libraries, paintings, portraits, engravings, arms, curios, letters, manuscripts (many of them of tender and inspiring memories) of men and women of your lineage who have passed on and have left these cherished possessions to our keeping.

A word more and I have done. In this booklet are written the purposes, the prayers and admonitions of the founders of the institute in the letters of the law. It is our character, it is our corporate bible, it is worthy of your consideration in its teachings of morals, philosophy, and the charity that finds its expression in the words: "Write me as one who loves his fellow-men." Will you take it with you and give it place in your thoughts when you pay homage to your ancestors at the shrine of "The Loomis Family Association?"

OF

Windsor, Connecticut

An Act to Incorporate The Loomis Institute in the Town of Windsor, Approved July 8, 1874, as Amended by Act Approved March 28, 1905.

SECTION 1. That James C. Loomis, Hezekiah B. Loomis, Osbert B. Loomis, H. Sidney Hayden, and his wife, formerly Abby S. Loomis, and John Mason Loomis, and their successors, be and they hereby are constituted a body politic and corporate by the name of The Loomis Institute, and by that name shall have perpetual succession hereafter, and shall be able to sue and be sued, plead and be impleaded, defend and be defended in all courts whatever, and may have a common seal and change the same at pleasure. They also shall have power and authority to take, by purchase, gift, grant, devise, or in any other manner and form, any and all property and estate, real, personal, and mixed, and wherever situated, and the same to hold in trust for the sole and exclusive use and benefit of said institute; provided, that no purchase, gift, grant, devise, or other mode of transfer or conveyance, made to or for the use and benefit of said institute, shall be accepted or received upon any condition or conditions inconsistent with the provisions of this act. And they also shall have power and authority to give, grant, bargain, sell, exchange, transfer, convey, or otherwise dispose of any or all of the estate and property so held by them, as they shall deem for the best interests of the institute, except as is herein expressly provided to the contrary.

SEC. 2. This institute shall be, and the same hereby is, constituted and established for the free and gratuitous education of all persons of the age of twelve years and upwards to twenty years in all the departments of learning which are now taught or hereafter may be taught in the various grades of schools in this country, and also for the purpose of maintaining and supplying all those whose condition and circumstances may require it, with all those things which may be deemed necessary and proper for their comfort and advancement in useful knowledge, so far as the funds of the institute will permit. But no person shall be admitted as a student in said institute until he or she shall be adjudged, on examination, capable of reading and spelling the English language correctly, writing a good, legible hand, and resolving questions in the four rules of arithmetic, with a knowledge of elementary geography and grammar, and shall sustain a good moral character. In case a greater number of persons having the requisite qualifications shall apply for admission than the institute can accommodate, then selection from said applicants shall be made, first from those belonging to the Loomis family by name or consanguinity, next from those belonging to the town of Windsor, next from those belonging to the state of Connecticut, and next from those deemed most worthy, without regard to state or nation, all of which shall be determined by said trustees and their successors, or by committees by them appointed, in conformity to the provisions of this act.

SEC. 3. The trustees above named shall have power and authority, with the consent of the owners thereof, to select such portion of the original homestead of Joseph Loomis, taken up by him in 1639, and continued in the ownership and possession of his descendants from that day to this, situated upon "The Island," so called, in Windsor, in the county of Hartford, and state of Connecticut, and any other lands immediately contiguous thereto, not exceeding in quantity fifty acres, as they may deem necessary and proper, and they shall cause an accurate survey and map of the same to be made and lodged on file in the office of the land records of said town for safe keeping, there perpetually to remain. They shall also have power and authority to lay out, improve, and beautify said grounds, in such manner and to such an extent as they may deem necessary and proper—to determine the number, form, dimensions, materials, and style of architecture of the buildings to be erected thereon, and the location of the same on said premises, and shall cause plans of the same to be made and lodged on file in said office, there to be forever kept, and they may proceed to erect said buildings, or so many thereof as they may deem expedient, and provide the same with suitable furniture, books, apparatus, and all such other matters and things as they may deem necessary and proper for the use of the institute, whenever the funds of the same shall equal the sum of two hundred thousand dollars.

The location thus selected and determined upon shall thereafter become and forever be and remain the site and location of said institute, and no person or persons shall thereafter have power or authority to take, appropriate, convey, or otherwise dispose of the same, by gift, grant, bargain, sale, exchange, mortgage, or in any other manner or form to any person or persons, or for any cause or purpose whatever, but the same shall be and forever remain the location of said institute, and appropriated and used for the purposes intended by the donors and by the provisions of this act.

If the above-named trustees shall neglect or fail to exercise or perform any or all of the above-granted powers, during their continuance in office, then the same are hereby given and granted to their successors.

SEC. 4. The said trustees and their successors shall have power and authority to manage and direct the property, funds, and effects of said institute, all of which shall be exempt from taxation so long as said institute shall be maintained and used for the purposes of education, as herein intended; provided, always, that no real estate located in the state of Connecticut, held by said institute for investment and not used by said institute for educational purposes, shall be exempt from taxation by virtue of the provisions of this section; to enlarge the qualifications for admission, to prescribe the course of instruction and direct the same therein, to limit the time that students may continue therein, to appoint a president, who shall be an ex-officio member of the board of trustees during his continuance in office, secretary, such professors, tutors, and all such other officers and employees as they may deem necessary to assist in the government, education, and care of the students belonging to said institute, and to make all ordinances and by-laws, and the same to alter and amend at pleasure, that they may deem necessary and proper for carrying into full effect the object of said institute, not inconsistent with the provisions of this act and the laws of this state and of the United States. No officer, instructor, employee, or student shall be made eligible or ineligible for or by reason of his or her religious or political opinions, nor be compelled to acknowledge or sign any religious or political creed or test whatever; but no officer, instructor, employee, or student shall be appointed or continued in the employment, service, or enjoyment of the privileges of the institute who does not sustain a good moral character.

SEC. 5. After the original buildings shall have been completed according to the plans of said trustees, and furnished as herein provided, it shall be the duty of said trustees and their successors to cause all of the uninvested principal funds which may remain, or which may thereafter be received, and which may not be given to the institute for any specific purpose inconsistent herewith, and which may not be needed for the erection of any other buildings, to be safely invested in the same manner as required by the laws of this state for the investment of trust funds; and said funds shall be and remain a perpetual fund, and the rents, issues, and profits thereof thereafter shall be used and expended in defraying the current expenses of the institute, in the erection of new buildings, and in the purchase of books, maps, charts, apparatus, and all other matters and things which may be deemed necessary and proper best to promote and secure the welfare and prosperity of the institute. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent the appropriation of any gift, grant, bequest, or devise to the specific object intended by the donor, provided the same is approved by the trustees and is consistent with the provisions of this act.

SEC. 6. Said trustees and their successors shall annually, in the month of January in each year, make a full and detailed statement, under oath, of all the receipts and disbursements for or on account of the institute during the year preceding the first day of said month, and how the funds are invested, and the securities thereon; of the number of students in said institute, and the amount which has been expended in their support; of the number of officers and employees therein, and the amount of salaries and compensation paid to each one, and any and all other matters that they may deem advisable to communicate to the public, and shall immediately thereafter cause the same to be printed at length in two of the daily newspapers published in the city of Hartford, believed to have the largest circulation, for a period of ten days; and shall also cause said statement to be lodged in the office of the record of lands in said Windsor, and thereupon it shall be the duty of the proper officer to record the same at full length upon said records.

SEC. 7. The said trustees and their successors shall have power and authority to grant all such literary honors and testimonials as usually are or hereafter may be granted in the literary institutions of this country; and in testimony of such grant may issue and deliver diplomas, under the signatures of the president and secretary, and under the seal of the institute; provided, that nothing herein contained shall authorize the conferring of collegiate degrees.

SEC. 8. The said trustees and their successors shall have power and authority by a major vote, from time to time, as they may deem expedient, to increase the number of trustees to any number not exceeding twelve, and also by a similar vote to fill any and all vacancies that may occur by death, resignation, removal, or otherwise, at their discretion; but after the death, resignation, removal for cause from office, or neglect or refusal of all of the above-named trustees to act as such, the number of trustees shall not in any case be less than seven; and if the then existing board of trustees shall neglect or fail to fill all the vacancies that may then exist under the number of seven, for the period of six months, or if from any cause at any time there shall be an entire vacancy in said board, then the governor of the state, for the time being, shall have power, and it shall be his duty, by and with the advice and consent of the chief judge or justice of the state, to appoint not less than seven fit and proper persons to be and become the trustees of said institute; and the persons thus appointed shall be the trustees of said institute, with all the rights and power appertaining thereto. No trustee shall be removed from his office for misconduct, incompetency, or other disqualifying cause, except by the judgment and decree of three of the judges of the superior court of the state, for cause shown, whose duty it shall be, upon proper application to them, to hear and determine the same.

SEC. 9. Whenever funds shall be contributed or secured to the satisfaction of the treasurer of the state of Connecticut, for the use of said institute, to the amount of fifteen thousand dollars, the trustees above named, or the survivors of them, and their associates and successors, at any time thereafter, may proceed to organize and establish said institute, according to the provisions of this act; and may do, execute, and perform, all and singular, acts, matters, and things, as they may deem for the best interests of the institute, not inconsistent with the provisions herein contained.

SEC. 10. This act shall not be subject to alteration, amendment, or appeal, except upon application of two-thirds of the trustees.

The President, Treasurer, and Secretary shall be residents of this state, and it shall require a majority of votes of all the Trustees to elect them.

The Treasurer shall also receive and immediately deposit and continue on deposit in some savings or other bank or banks, or security vault or vaults, in the county of Hartford, in good standing, all the moneys, certificates of stock, bonds, mortgages and other personal securities, belonging to said Institute so long as they may remain unappropriated or uninvested by the Trustees, and shall keep a full and accurate account of all the receipts and disbursements for or on account of said Institute, in a book or books to be provided therefor; and said books shall always be open to the inspection and examination of any or all of said Trustees, and the Treasurer shall, annually on or before the second Thursday of January in each year, make a full and true statement and account, under oath, and report the same to the Trustees, of all said receipts and disbursements during the year next preceding the first day of said month, and at such other times and to such an extent as may be required, in writing, by a majority of said Trustees.

6. THE COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

The Trustees shall elect from their own number a Committee on Finance of three or more members whose duty it shall be to have a general supervision of the financial condition and affairs of the Institute; to examine and report to the Trustees upon all the investments of its funds; to keep a constant and vigilant watchfulness over all the securities and existing investments.

Section 2 is the educational clause of the Charter. How explicit and simple are its limitations,—how just to those who may elect to partake of its advantages, and yet how inclusive are its terms.

Also note the liberal and manly conditions named in the last clause of Sec. 4, as to eligibility,—not party or sect but freedom of mind and a clean conscience.

The following sentence from Col. John Mason Loomis's will embodies what the Institute stands for, and also what should be the spirit of every true Loomis boy or girl who may become a student of the Institute. He says: "Hoping to leave some mark for good upon our race and time, we present to the Loomis Family this their Hearth Stone, and endow it with all we have; inviting them to rally around it as their shrine, from which their boys and girls shall take the highest inspirations for better and grander lives, from the best of their race who have gone before, and, like them, ever keeping the banner of human progress, honor and manhood, to the front."

So, through Col. Loomis, the Loomis Family of America comes into possession of its original homestead, and forever will it inspire the generations, who partake of his liberality, to live worthy of its pioneer builders. And in due time there will arise on "The Island" a "Memorial Building" in which will be found the libraries, paintings, portraits, engravings, manuscripts, letters, and curios of the men and women of your lineage who have gone before and left to your keeping their cherished possessions. With such advantages and such associations, unitedly let us individually and as a Family, make our ancestral home the peer of any in all "New England." We can if we will, and we will.

And that you may know and appreciate what is being done for you and for our Institute we here give you the last report of the present assets of the Institute in the treasurer's custody and in addition its vested interests in the life estate of Mary H. Loomis, the widow of Col. John Mason Loomis.

The Loomis Institute

Treasurer's Account, January 1, 1908

DR.

To inventory, January 1, 1907.....	$540,753.10
To gain on inventory, through sales.....	6,434.50
To income—interest and dividends.....	24,859.48
Total	$572,047.08

CR.

By payments—taxes, expenses and improvements.....	$ 6,668.66
By prevaluation of securities, decline in bonds and stocks.....	60,493.00
By property on hand.....	504,885.42
Total	$572,047.08

In addition the Institute has an expectancy certain in the estate of the late Col. John Mason Loomis, of Chicago, which becomes absolute upon the death of his widow, Mary H. Loomis, estimated at $1,120,000.

From the foregoing it is seen that the Institute has either a "present or vested interest in property worth, at a reasonable present valuation, $1,625,000,— a great benefaction, dedicated to one of the noblest of purposes," the making of self-protecting, self-respecting and self-supporting men and women.

And will not you, of your goods and money, add to this what you may? Or if you prefer, endow a department—of teaching, or investigation. There are many good things which ought to be done. Let some one make possible the getting together, in an alcove of the library, copies of all works written and published by Loomises; let another provide the means of revising and bringing down to date the two volumes of the Female Branch of our genealogy, or add other volumes to these two; but above all will not some one provide the means whereby a proper person can devote all his time to the work of securing complete records of all persons born Loomis who are descendants of pioneer Joseph, so that our genealogy, in years to come, will be what we wish it were—a complete genealogy?

Science of Heredity—Who Are We?

“ Our pioneer ancestors were ‘very respectable, well-to-do, religious, practical, temperate, industrious and honest’ people.”

TO whom are we kin? Who was my father’s mother’s great-grandfather? But few can tell. Shakespeare makes one say: “O call back yesterday, bid time return.”

But we must call back a hundred years to find an answer. And every generation beyond increases the difficulty of finding our ancestors. How rapidly the number of our ancestors increase is easily seen through the following: Every human being has had two parents, four grandparents, eight great-grandparents, etc. One’s ancestors for 10 generations are 512; fifteen generations, over 16,000; twenty-five generations, over 16,000,000; at the beginning of the Christian era, more than all the people on the earth then. But what a paradox! How can it be? What does it teach? This—that some remote ancestor is common to several lines. The writer has traced his lineage through three sons and one daughter of pioneer Joseph Loomis. You, possibly, may trace your lines through more than four of his children. Because of this our actually different ancestors are reduced in number, and the paradox vanishes, even though we are kin to the preceding countless millions—to kings enthroned and the vilest beggar in the wake of a crusade, to some historic genius and some unnamed serf.

But from this long look into the past let us consider the future and enumerate, if possible, the untold descendants of Joseph and Mary (White) Loomis. And to be definite let us suppose that they had but two sons and two daughters, each marrying and each again having two sons and two daughters, and so on for ten generations. Granting this, how would the count stand, as to those who bear the name Loomis, and those whose names through the daughters are no longer Loomis, no marriage occurring in which both parties are descendants of Joseph Loomis.

The following table sets forth the problem in detail:

JOSEPH LOOMIS

GENERATION	SONS	DAUGHTERS	HIS SUPPOSED DESCENDANTS NOT BEARING NAME LOOMIS
I.....	2	2
II.....	4	4	8	8
III.....	8	8	16+	32
IV.....	16	16	32+	192
V.....	32	32	64+	896
VI.....	64	64	128+	3840
VII.....	128	128	256+	15892
VIII.....	256	256	512+	64522
IX.....	512	512	1024+	260096
X.....	1024	1024	2048+	1046528
Total.....	2046	2046		1,394,008

A comparison of totals shows the rapid increase of the descendants. It also shows the utter impossibility of recording these descendants. For, allowing 10,000 names to a volume, it would require 140 volumes of 600 pages each. But granting that many inter-marriages occur, as they do, then there will be less than 1,394,008 different descendants. True. But it is a fact that the families actually averaged more than two sons and two daughters each who married and left descendants. As we have no means of following the families under other names than Loomis, for such families we will again suppose but two sons and two daughters, as in above table. Under these conditions our table, as prepared below, by actual count for six generations, reveals that this world will never know in how many hearts Joseph Loomis has secretly written his name.

GENERATIONS	LOOMISES			MARRIED		SUPPOSED DESCENDANTS. Based on supposition that each married (Loomis) dau. had two sons and two dau., etc., as in above table.			Per cent who marry

X.....	—	—	—	—	—	24528+	3940384	3964912
Totals.....								5,270,540

A study of this table shows that, for six generations :

1. Over 70 % of those born Loomis married.
2. The families averaged 6 children each.
3. The ratio of males to females born, as 10 : 9.
4. The families averaged above 2 sons and 2 daughters each who married.
5. Barring inter-marriages, at the end of 10 generations, it would require a library of 527 volumes of 10,000 names each, to catalogue the descendants of Joseph Loomis.

Some one has said: It is impossible to know the source of all our ancestors; but we do know that some of them were of the old British, Saxon, Danish and Norman races,—that some came to England with William the Conqueror; that some were among those who led the Crusades to the Holy Land; and some were makers of English history at home. Again, some of our lines go back to early Spanish, Dutch and Italian ancestry of distinction. But best of all is this: that their descendants, our more immediate ancestors, the pioneers of the new world, have continued to fill useful and honorable stations in America.

Let us, if possible, behold the problem of our pioneer ancestors. Persecutions and intolerance in the Old World. Savages and forests in the New. But for Conscience's sake they bade adieu to the "fatherland" and set sail for America. Behind them the homes of their births and rulers intolerant and oppressive. Before them the vast ocean and a land of liberty of conscience. Finally the ocean is behind them and the forest all about them. What a change in feeling must have possessed them. Here they face new difficulties cheerfully, for no longer are they bound down by the whims and caprices of tyrannical kings and religious rulers. New environments are productive of new ideas, and out of the thinking of our forefathers was born a new civilization and a new government.

Authentication of their sacrifices, their heroic deeds and their early history is becoming more difficult yearly. Reliable sources of information, such as original town and church record books, family Bibles and tombstones, are rapidly disappearing, and unless such facts are crystallized in print, they will be forever lost.

The mildew of time will eventually destroy all that is material; but perchance through many copies of the printed page, having thereon recorded the deeds of our ancestors worthy of remembrance, we may possibly transmit them to those who shall come after us and thereby make ourselves unforgettable.

Some there be who are proud of their lineage because they can trace their pedigree to some Royal kingly line—to Alfred the Great or Charlemagne. But happy should be that family whose ancestors were of those who settled in New England between 1620 and 1660, for they were God's chosen seed for the planting of the greatest nation this earth has ever known. For us, "it is all the nobility we have; and it is nobility enough, when we can trace our descent from the fathers of New England." And it is with pleasure that we can record that "many of them, if they had not stood in the ranks of power and nobility, had certainly stood in the ranks of the most learned and enlightened people of England; and their integrity, their piety, and the purity of their morals in general, were unimpeachable."

Therefore "let us treasure up the memories of our ancestors. Already much is irretrievably lost and in many cases we are unable, because of want of, or destruction of records, to retrace our lineage to those who sacrificed so much that we might enjoy the blessings of liberty and plenty."

Since the bulk of immigration of the present age is of a type wholly unlike that of colonial days we owe it as a duty to ourselves and our children to establish the character of our ancestry while it may be done. At the time our early New England ancestors came over, the so-called lower classes of Europe had not the education, the knowledge of affairs, nor the habit of government, which would enable them to take the lead elsewhere. When therefore, we find that an early settler occupied a place of respect and influence here, we may believe that he brought with him this stewardship ability. If, in addition to this he possessed that force of character which made him a leader of men, he became so prominent that his name and achievements can generally be easily traced. A man's own social station was also indicated by the marriage of his children; for, in New England, marriage outside of the family's social grade was then, and ever since has been, uncommon.

Joseph Loomis's sons and grandsons married into the leading families of Windsor and Hartford. This fact fixes his social position. If other evidence is desired that the Loomises of early Windsor belonged to the best and most prosperous classes, the following is submitted:

In 1675 the assessor or lister divided the families of Windsor for taxation for rivulet ferry purposes into five classes. (See Stiles's Anc. Windsor, Vol. I, p. 88). The first class included such men as have a family, a horse and 4 oxen; there were 29 in this class, two of whom were Joseph and Nathaniel Loomis, Nos. 1 and 7 of this catalogue. The second class included such men as have a family, a horse and 2 oxen; there were 42 in this class, two of whom were John and Thomas Loomis, Nos. 5 and 6 of this catalogue. Samuel Loomis, No. 8, had already removed to Westfield, Mass., hence his name is not found in this tax list.

And that they were owners of real estate is evidenced by the following, found in Stiles, Vol. I, p. 160. It reads:—

"Loomis, Joseph, 1640, lot gr. 35 r. wide bd. s. by John Porter. The upland or house lot ext. W. to Henry Wolcott's lot W. of highway; his meadow ext. to Conn. River 24 rods wide, bdg N. by the Rivulet. A road betw. his ho. and the Rivulet runs thwart the corner of his meadow 17 rods 'to the passage over the Rivulet' [ford to the Great Meadow]. His orig. ho. prob. was a little below the brow of the hill, near the present barn, where a dep'n was lately filled wh. had been known as the cellar hole of the orig. ho.

Of his sons, Joseph by gift from him rec'd a lot 12 r. wide, next N. of Mr. Matthew Allyn, on wh. he built; John had the homestead; Thomas, by gift had a lot 12 r. wide E. of the highway, betw. his bro. Joseph and H. Wolcott Jr.; Nathaniel bo't the ho. and lot of John Moses on the W. side of the St. directly opp. his bro. Joseph's pl. (he was also among the early settlers on the E. side of the Great River); Samuel bo't Mr. Witcheld's pl. and subseq. rem. to Westfield (Mass)."

That pioneer Joseph Loomis was a man of "respectable pecuniary means" is also evidenced by the fact that his name appears on the tax list of Braintree, England, for building a ship of 800 tons, to be built at Portsmouth, March 1, 1636, said ship to cost £8,000, the parish of Braintree being assessed £951-12-4½. Moreover Joseph Loomis's father-in-law, Robert White, was considered a rich man for his time, and this is fully verified by his will, which see hereinafter.

“The Loomis Family of America”

[This narration has naught to do with lords, dukes, earls, or gentlemen of leisure, nor with courts and castles; it is an account of a “plain practical people,” such as of whom Lincoln said: “God must love them, for he made so many of them.” Appropriate thereunto we shall not indulge in fancies, or appeal unduly to the imagination; this hereinafter is, therefore, a recital of facts, as to actual persons, places and events, interpreted reasonably, without prior bias.]

‘ ‘ W EARY with wandering in the desert world Gladly I turn to thee, old Lancaster.” The name of Loomis (Lomas) and the blood it represented, when this surname originated, were both Saxon, neither being Norman, Celtic, Pictic or other. The blood was of Lancashire, and in that region the surname was first assumed. For eight hundred years, from Saxon times until the present hour, the Lomas family appears to have resided in the very parish in which it first became a family having a surname.

The surname of Lomas, or, as written in America, Loomis, is territorial; it was taken from a locality. The locality was what has been modernly known as the village of Haulgh, now a part of Tonge-with-Haulgh, which is a township in the civil and municipal parish of Bolton. Bolton is a parish of 150,000 population,—a market-town in the Wapentake of Salford, which is the southwestern division of the county Palatine of Lancaster, and within the Duchy of Lancaster, in the northwest of England.

We must first picture, somewhat briefly as best we may, the conditions of human life and customs in this part of England where the blood of Lomas inhabited before it became finally designated by a surname.

What is now Lancashire seems to have been but little peopled by the Britons prior to the Roman conquest of Britain in the year A. D. 43; and the Romans did not, apparently, greatly develop the region, though various remains of their occupation have been found. The Roman influence, however, was progressive for four hundred years. Then, in 401, when the Roman Empire gave up its dominion over Britain, withdrawing its “legions,” this wild and remote region of England once more, before 547, became reduced (when the Northumbrian Anglo-Saxon kingdom was set up) almost to a state of nature. History affirms that though not absolutely depopulated, the settlements must have been few and small, and feebly defended by the poor remnant of the aboriginal inhabitants, who were thus left subject to the raids of the savage Picts. The Saxons (Anglo-Saxons) or the English, as they are called, who came from the north of Europe, (the southern shores of the Baltic sea), beginning with the year 400 and forming the Kingdom of Northumbria in 547 (the whole north of England) and other kingdoms, are therefore to be looked upon as the prime creators of Lancashire. It is said that there, as elsewhere, they gave birth to a new era of manners, language and religion. They re-peopled this part of England, named the settlements and developed it in every way. Consequently, about all the place-names are pure Saxon, often chosen to convey some distinctive and natural circumstance in the situation of a village. They founded Haulgh and Bolton and Salfordshire and named them. The Saxon dominion was complete; everything about Lancashire was substantially Saxon, though the Saxon remains are not as numerous as in other parts. With the development of population, peace and prosperity continued without great hindrance, until the Norman conquest of England. The organization of society up to that time, or rather the home life, is interesting to note, especially as among the Saxons were the men who, known among each other only by Christian names, such as Egfrith, Cuthbert, Egbert, Siward, Osbert, Wiun, Utred, Ulf, Ranulph, Swaine, Hasebert, Penda, Ralph, Edwin, Hugh, were the ancestors of the man who first assumed the surname that we now know as Lomas and Loomis; it is well here to note that Mason, the historian of Norfolk, explains how these Saxons first found the greater part of England overgrown with woods, or marshy through the frequent floods of unembanked rivers. "Boars, deer and game in general abounded, and hunting, which was conducted uniformly on foot, was not only a pastime, but an important occupation of the settler. The unit of society was the head of the family. Every family lived by itself and safeguarded its own members. The quarrel of one of the family was as a rule the quarrel of all. Children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren dwelt together, and these family guilds formed the first villages. When the English settled here their clearings or winnings of agricultural land were each of a family character. The population was sparse, and natural boundaries divided the ham of one family from the tun of another—woodland in many cases; in others, the moor; sometimes a fen constituted the frontier of the mark. Any one crossing this frontier had to blow a horn as announcing his approach, otherwise he was to be regarded as an invader, and attacked accordingly. Within the mark each member of the family guild had his own home and byre, but the woods and wastes were in common, and there each man could pasture his cattle or feed his pigs. Horses were not used in agriculture, neither were they ridden to battle, except in later years but little before the Norman conquest. Each household had its slaves, whose lot, however, was not entirely hopeless, as in more than one way might the position of a freeman be obtained. These slaves were recruited from the conquered Britons, from members of rival families defeated in war, and from the children of freemen by slave mothers. As time went on the villages became manors. Natural superiority in some particular member of the family group asserted itself in war with neighboring families or with foreigners, and the ascendancy thus obtained tended to become hereditary. The lesser freemen found in war time that their chief safety lay in following some powerful local leader, and gradually an aristocracy was formed from men whose land was tilled for them, whose occupation was rule and the administration of rough justice in peace, and leadership and personal prowess in the field of war. The Danish wars tended to foster aristocracy, and something not very dissimilar to the Norman feudal system prevailed in many places sometime before the landing of William, Duke of Normandy, in 1066. Each manor had, not only its own agriculture, but its own trade. The clothes, the shoes, the weapons of the village were all made at home by artisan members of the family guild or local group. The houses were all of wood, and were built by carpenters of the village.

Each manor was in all essentials self-supporting. The monasteries were generally also self-supporting manors. They, too, had their farmers and their artisans, and both their husbandry and their handicraft set an example to the neighboring civil manors, and tended to raise the agricultural and industrial character of the whole district.

Lancashire was less turbulent than some states, but quite as aggressive as any of its neighbors. The early English were great eaters, and Lancashire men were not behind the rest of their countrymen. Many contrasts between the Saxons and their Norman oppressors are not usually drawn in favor of the former, who are claimed to have been great drinkers as well as eaters; but while they lacked the culture and refinement of the more polished Normans, they had, nevertheless, erected in England several substantial kingdoms, established some of the foundations of the great fundamental laws of modern England, produced Alfred the Great, "the purest, grandest, most heroic soul that ever sprang from our race," and done the broad, rough work of making the isle of Britain ready for the advancement and elevation to which the Norman influence subsequently lifted its people. An ancient chronicler complained that the Normans "combed their hair once a day, bathed themselves once a week, changed their clothes frequently, and by all these arts of effeminacy, as well as by their military character, rendered themselves so agreeable to the women that the wives and daughters of the English were by no means safe in the company of such desperadoes."

Of the Saxons it is claimed that they were of the German race, and before that, came from the Aryan peoples, who were largely agricultural, in the eastern part of Europe.

A modern writer, Jean Finot of France, claims that this Aryan race does not exist; that there is no "Caucasian" race, nor any such thing as race, any way; that the contrasts in the various groups of the human species are caused by differing environments, conditions of climate and life and of nutrition. "There is no French race, no German race, no Anglo-Saxon race. Every one of these supposed stocks is an intricate blend, a cross-breed, to the making of which have gone much the same elements in every case. We are all alike, and there is not a 'pure blood' on the earth." We need not be concerned as to this, even if there is no racially pure blood, for the distinctions that nationality have made are quite sufficient to mark out our so-called Saxons as forming a great clan, (if not absolutely a pure and separate race), the mental and physical features of which are still plain to see and which still continue to stamp their characteristics and domination upon the world.

The Saxons had a love of liberty and a disposition to wander, and were great navigators, especially those who lived on the northern shores of the Baltic Sea and became known as the Northmen. They ventured upon the soil of every kingdom within their reach and generally conquered. "They were broad-shouldered, deep-chested, long-limbed, with slender waists and small hands and feet; their build told of strength, which was so prized by them that their puny infants were exposed and left to die. Their complexion was almost always fair, and the fair alone were considered beautiful or well-born." An early writer said of one of these northern Saxons: "His face was large; his forehead broad, with mickle eyebrows; his nose not long, but thick; his upper lip wide and long, while his chin and jaw bones were enormously broad. He was thicknecked and his shoulders of superhuman breadth. In shape well-built and taller than the most of men."

Our readers will find a deeper study of the Saxons an interesting pastime, since it is plain that the blood of the earliest Lomases was Saxon, as distinguished from the Celtic, and Pictic, and the Norman which entered largely into the people of the isle of Britain.

We may properly look upon the Saxons residing in the Wapentake or Hundred of Salford (a section of Lancashire consisting of a hundred townships) prior to the year 1100, as divided into four classes—men of birth, men of property, freemen, and serviles; and also we may believe, from the evidences of the earliest recorded Lomas, that they were men of property, and freemen, neither men of title, nor serviles. The chief landholders were the thanes, (thengs), who held of the king, which term was the Saxon equivalent for northern baron. Some men of yeomen birth or station were called thanes, as also were some freeholders or franklins, because their holdings were hereditary and their tenure free. Some of the ancestors in Salfordshire of the American Loomises were doubtless of this rank. In 1066 there were 175 manors held by as many thanes in the southern part of Lancashire between the rivers Ribble and Mersey; and in 1086, after the Normans had claimed title thereto, there were no large estates, or fiefs. In 1086 the annual value of all the vast property in Lancashire south of the Ribble was £120, (equivalent to the present £13,200), while in 1814 the income of the same lands had increased to £2,569,761. In 1066 the Hundred of Salford yielded £37:4:0; in 1866 it yielded in revenues £4,082,799.

Salford Hundred (embracing the city of Manchester) is thus, to-day, the world's greatest textile-producing area of its size, and Lomas descendants are found to have been concerned in this development during the past century. The title to the land of Salford was held, nominally, in 1066, by Edward the Confessor, King of England, yielding the aforesaid £37:4:0, but with the death of his successor, Harold II at the battle of Hastings, in the same year, that right passed to William, Duke of Normandy, the "Conqueror" of England. While we are told in the introduction to the printed Pipe Rolls of Lancashire that it was not for "a long period of years after 1066" that the Norman power was effectively demonstrated in Lancashire, owing to this county's remoteness and to its not being considered as an inviting region, and liable to give armed resistance to the Normans at any time, the general effect of the conquest upon this particular part of England was ill. It is plainly shown in the Domesday Book that in 1066 Salford's revenue of £37:4:0 had, in 1086, fallen to 12 pence per annum, and only 63 families are therein accounted for in the whole Hundred of Salford. Many may have escaped observation, possibly by temporarily sequestering themselves in the mountains standing nearby to the eastward. And though the Domesday Book shows that William the Conqueror gave the Hundred of Salford to his follower, Roger of Poitou, as a share of the spoils of victory, who in turn parcelled it out to Nigel, Warin and Goifford (all Normans), these Normans seem to have had little to do with the property other than to claim a yearly revenue from those minor lords, the actual residents, long hitherto in possession—the thanes and drengs (free tenants, holding of the thanes by a tenure partly military, partly servile). We obtain the impression here that our Saxon ancestors with their neighbors presented a formidable front to the Normans, and like the people of the other northern parts of England, effectually prevented, for many years, the actual encroachment of the Norman power; thus the apparent barrenness and worthlessness of Salfordshire, as presented to view in the Domesday survey, wherein only 63 families are accounted for, probably does not portray the actual conditions throughout. From the same source we are informed that Count Roger de Poitou was "little pleased with his rugged northern fief and its inhabitants." A generation after the Conquest, a great portion of the landholding population, the thanes and drengs, or other various serjeants of the castles and wapentakes would appear from their names to have been of Anglo-Saxon blood, or descendants of the Danes who had overspread the country in the tenth century. The parsons of the thirty or more churches which existed in Lancashire, at the Conquest, probably differed little from their neighbors except in name.

Bolton (Saxon Boltune or Bothel-tun, a town adjoining to a principal mansion or mansion-house) manor and town was acquired from Roger de Poitou by Randle, Earl of Chester. Later, with other surrounding towns it became a holding of the earls and dukes of Lancaster, and to-day remains within what is called the Duchy of Lancaster, which is crown property; but Bolton has been held of the crown by the Stanleys, Earls of Derby, for several hundred years, who acquired their rights after the treason of their predecessors, the Pilkingtons, whose rent-roll contains references to Lomases, as hereinafter.

With the foregoing brief statement of the conditions existing in the region where the blood abounded from which later came the man who then first took the earliest form of the present surname of Loomis, we enter upon a little study of the actual origin and meaning of what is now in America, the name of Loomis, prefacing this with some remarks which will tend to illustrate the general origin of family names.

Surnames are only about a thousand years old in Christendom. Christian names are evidently even pre-historic; and some sort of a name for each man or woman may well have been among the first formal vocal utterances of a human being. Christian names, therefore, are as old as any language or form of speech. (A certain writer upon surnames has begun his discourse with the declaration that "names commenced in Eden—the name of Adam denoting his origin from the earth." If this presumer refers to the Biblical Eden, there is evidence that would have modified his opinion, while if the declaration is recited as historical fact, he has been still further misled by some one's imagination. It is sufficiently established, by scientific scholars, that the name of Adam was taken from the earlier Babylonian "Adama" which meant "the race;" the name of Eve was also obtained from an earlier Babylonian word, viz., "Eva," meaning "woman.")

The Greeks had only one name; the Romans frequently used two Christian names. Celtic and Teutonic names were very significant personally, and continued down from father to son.

Surnames began to come into use in England with the eleventh century, through the Norman influence. "There is no village in Normandy that gave not its denomination to some family in England." "Every town, village, and hamlet in England and Scotland hath afforded names to families." Such surnames are "territorial," and generally accompanied by the prepositions "de," or "del," as in Piers de Gaveston, Henry del Halle. Other surnames sprang from every conceivable source, serious or trivial, "from the highest things celestial to the lowest things terrestrial," from "Qualities of the Minde" and "Habitudes of the Body,"—from ages and times, from costume, color of the complexion and clothing,—from animals, nicknames, old Christian names, nationality, etc., etc. "All names were significant," says a high authority, "in their first application to individuals." This is the great and important fact that has especial bearing upon the name of Loomis. The actual situation, with respect to personal nomenclature in Bolton, as elsewhere in the Hundred of Salford and in Lancashire, when the Loomis Saxon ancestors there dwelt, and when the Norman introduction of surnames was about to happen, (in the twelfth century and to become fairly adopted in the thirteenth century and quite generally established in the fourteenth) was simply this:—The Saxon place-names were thoroughly fixed long before the Norman conquest of 1066; the later Norman influence could scarcely affect them at all. But with personal names there was great need of a change; the Saxons used only one Christian name, and sometimes two, such as Edwin, son of Leofwine, which custom was clung to by the Welsh until quite modernly, with their "John ap Thomas," "Evan ap Williams," etc. This led to confusion because the Saxon language was not copious enough to designate individuals sufficiently specific and distinctive, with their increasing numbers. Hence, the owners or holders of lands relinquished the inconvenient habit of the single name, added to it the name of their place of residence with the "de" or "del" placed between the Christian name and the place-name. The latter was either the name of a house, farm, lot, corner, road, hamlet, or descriptive of a site or location, or of some natural characteristic with which such land-holder was associated. Yet these names were not unchangeable at first, and might be varied with a man's place of abode. If a son, for instance, left the place of his father's home, he would assume a new denomination from the estate to which he had removed. His brother could do the like; and thus all evidence of their relationship was wanting as far as their names would show. Their descendants became confirmed each to the different surname of his father, and so many families became lost for ever to later identity with each other of their kin.

The records of the thirteenth century contain thousands of instances of this truth, and our family was no exception to this early rule. In these same early times men who had no land did not attain to the dignity of a territorial surname. These men appear in the Pipe, Hundred and Subsidy Rolls and in charters, etc., as "Radulphus fil Richard," etc., or under surnames taken from their trade or other personal significancies. Men of landed property in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries generally distinguished themselves by territorial surnames as denoting their better station. It is, therefore, pleasing, in the fullest sense, to find that the name of Loomis is beyond the possibility of question, of exactly such origin.

There is no mention in the Domesday Book of 1086 of the surname of Loomis in any form whatever, in any county of England; this date is between one and two hundred years before the name became applied to any person. It was a place-name, however, before 1086, in the parish of Bolton, Lancashire; but its omission from the Domesday Book as a designation of locality is explained by the fact that it then had reference merely to a part or small section of Bolton within which it was early comprised. Neither is there any mention of the surname in the Pipe Rolls (Great Rolls of the Exchequer) of 1130-1216; this period was still too early for the surname to have become firmly formed and fixed in Lancashire. The Hundred Rolls of King Edward I would afford the earliest opportunity of finding the surname were they extant; these records were taken in 1224, upon the king's return from the Seventh and Last Crusade to the Holy Land, and they constitute the results of an official investigation of all the rights and revenues of the Crown, touching property, persons and privileges, etc., which rights had become abused and encroached upon by the people during the years of the king's absence. Lancaster is one of the six counties for which no Hundred Rolls have been yet discovered in the archives. All other records of Lancashire for the thirteenth century have been examined without the surname being found.

The surname of Loomis is, barring the exception hereinafter mentioned, an American modernization of Lomas, the original form of which was "Lumhalgh," or "Lumhaulgh," "del Lumhalgh," "Lumhales"—pronounced without sounding the letters "h" and "g."

The earliest record, now existing in England, of this surname (and it may be said, in this connection, that several months have been devoted to the accurate searching of every record of any possible bearing upon the subject) is found in a Lay Subsidy Roll, number 130-6, at the Record Office in Chancery Lane, London. This parchment is the original record (as made) of the assessment and collection of a tax upon the inhabitants of Lancashire granted to Edward III by the parliament, in the sixth year of his reign—1333—such subsidies generally having been assessed at a tenth or a fifteenth of the value of the lands or goods of the inhabitant. Under the Hundred of Salford, for the then hamlet of what is now Pendleton, in the parish of Eccles, about two miles west from the city of Manchester and twelve miles southeast of Bolton, this roll gives, in ink still quite as clear as on the day it was written five hundred and seventy-five years ago:—"Penhilton Rico de Lmhales." "Lum" in the names Lumhales or Lumhalgh is abbreviated in this roll to "Lm" or "Lu" as is proven by the use of a short curved dash ~ (this ~ is not reproduced over the "m" or "u" in this volume as in the original rolls) over the first syllable, as is also found with other names and words, e. g., "Item" to "Itm" in the rolls of that period; and the spelling here employed is not necessarily after a fixed form used by Richard de Lumhales himself, but, while it does occur in an official document, it was merely so written by the scribe whose duty it was to make out the rolls for his superior officers, the official collectors of the subsidy. This roll affords the only instance of the Lumhales spelling until 1394.

The further significance of this item of the assessment of a subsidy of two shillings upon the land-holding of "Rico de Lmhales" of Pendleton is that, first, that either he, or his ancestor of a generation or two or three before him, had removed to Pendleton after the surname had become established elsewhere, so as to be passed from father to son, and so on; and second, that the tax of two shillings was a good average amount, which at present reckoning, would amount to over forty dollars, which, at a fifteenth, would make the value of his land about $600.

While we are in Pendleton, there best be noted some facts about the place, so that it will remain clearer in the mind before the etymology of the family name is entered upon minutely. Pendleton was anciently called Penhulton (i. e., the head hill town), and as late as 1780 was but a little hamlet with its Maypole Green, whereas to-day it is as large as a city (66,000 population), a suburb of Manchester, (the second city of England), abounding in mansions and devoted to calico-printing, dyeing, cotton-spinning and coal works. In the old days St. Mary's Church in Eccles was the parish church to which the inhabitants of Pendleton were attached. There can be no reasonable doubt but that Rico de Lumhales worshipped in this church; in fact, he would scarcely have been allowed not to; he had no choice in the matter. The religious beliefs that were instilled into him by the clergy of that day form too long and interesting a subject for this paper. In brief, he had but to obey, leaving all thinking and direction to the churchmen; and the substance of his belief and practice was that he must pay more or less, as able, to the church, for happiness while he lived and to provide further for masses to be said after his death, in order that he might go to Heaven.

(The duty of a parish priest before the Reformation was not to preach, but to attend to the offices of the church and to see that the inhabitants of his parish fulfilled what was required of them by the church, and to hear confessions, to absolve the penitent, to visit the sick and to bury the dead. Most of the duties were often left to curates.)

In his day he saw Edward III annex France to England, and must have heard with pride of the exploits of John o' Gaunt, the great noble of his own Lancashire. His life was principally covered by the years of the reigns of Edward II and Edward III—1307-1377, though he may have been as old as forty years in 1333, and so born before 1300. In all human probability we shall never hear of another Lomas antedating this Richard; and so he is now a man more marked than ever he was to his own knowledge. So, too, this church of St. Mary's is the oldest structure in the world with which we can ever identify the name of Lomas thus early.

There is no other record extant of this Richard or of his father or sons;

the parish registers of baptism, marriage and burial do not commence in England until 1538; but there is no occasion to doubt but that more than one early Lomas was laid away in long last rest beneath a spot within reach of the shade of St. Mary's tower. Surely this church is a great mark to our family. Ever enduring, ever inviting, ever rewarding it continues. Age after age passes,—its peaceful bells are heard above the "crash of empires;" while fears of change alarm the world, "perplexing monarchs"—it discharges its mighty yet simple task, to—

"Invite to heaven and point the way."

A poet's lines suggest the ancient interior:—

"Not formed to nice proportions was the pile
But large and massy, for duration built;
With pillars crowded and the roof upheld
By naked rafters intricately crossed,
Like leafless under-boughs in some thick grove,
All withered by the depth of shade above.
* * * * * The floor
Of nave and aisle in unpretending guise
Was occupied by oaken benches ranged
In seemly rows; the chancel showed
Some inoffensive marks of earthly state
And vain distinction. A capacious pew
Of sculptured oak stood here, with drapery lined;
And knightly monuments were here displayed
Within the walls; and on the floor beneath
Sepulchral stones appeared with emblems graven,
And foot-worn epitaphs, and some with small
And shining effigies of brass inlaid."

Let us look at it a little closer. The building is a venerable Gothic structure, forming a favorable specimen of rude architecture, with a massive tower, grey with age. It consists of a nave, chancel and side-aisles, the latter of which were in early times chapels attached to the old families of the parish. The building is of an irregular shape, supported by buttresses and adorned by arched windows. The roof is partially embattled and on the north and south sides rise two small circular columns terminating in crocketed ornaments. The original church was probably of a date as early as 1065, hence Saxon. The curfew-bell, a relic of that age, continues to be rung nightly. Traditions fix the date of the present church as 1111, though it has been several times restored and probably enlarged. There are now no tombstones dating before 1575.

An annual festival is held at Eccles, of great rustic celebrity and of high antiquity, as old probably as the first erection of the church, called Eccles Wakes, celebrated on the 1st Sunday in September. History recounts that, at times, these wakes have been exceedingly wakeful, if not altogether hilarious. The church was valued at £20 per annum in the valuation of Pope Nicholas in 1291. In 1864, 6,000 silver pennies of King Henry and Kings John and William I of Scotland were found in Eccles parish in an earthen pot, just below the surface. Their bullion value was $354.

Another remarkable feature in Eccles parish still remains quite as Richard de Lumhales knew it, and that is Chat Moss; it is a morass five miles long and three broad, containing 6,000 acres; originally an immense forest, but became reduced to a bog. It is peat soil, trees being found imbedded in the peat, principally birch, oak and fir, as black as jet and as hard as ebony. Most of the trees have been found to be charred on the exterior, showing that they fell by fire. In this peat were found not long ago, the horns of a breed of cattle now extinct, and a leather shoe, singular in shape—five inches broad at the toe and only 1¼ inches at the heel. It is supposed that this ancient forest-swamp was one in which the ancient Britons took refuge when the Romans conquered Britain,

A. D. 43, and it is recorded that Agricola, in order to free himself from the hostile invasion of the native Brigantes, ordered their woods to be burnt down or felled by the Roman soldiers. It is clear that some of the forests of Salfordshire had disappeared before the Norman Conquest.

All of the Subsidy Rolls of Lancashire from the earliest preserved (1300 to 1500) have been examined; they are many in number; many are only fragmentary, being worn or rotted away in parts, hence illegible. The most of these records consist of only the names of the places with the sums collected therein; but from roll number 130-29, which is an assessment on the inhabitants in the Hundred of Salford by virtue of a subsidy granted by parliament to Richard II in his second year as king—1381—these items were deciphered on a much injured membrane (parchment):—

“Wig” is the town of Wigan abbreviated; the “lu” in luhalghus is also an abbreviation for the first syllable “lum,” as is proven by the line drawn over the “lu” in the original, which in ancient manuscripts is usually so placed when a letter or two is omitted. This omission was simply the habit of the clerk who made out these rolls, and not an established or habitual abbreviation of this surname. These items form the second earliest data extant.

Now for the etymology of “Lumhalgh,” and the proof that it is the earliest form of Lumhales, Lumhals, Lumals, Lomas, Lomax, Lummys, Loomis,—for this is the true order of the changes in spelling as they occurred.

The word “lum” anciently had various meanings in different parts; but the word “halgh” had only one general signification, however spelt; both are Saxon words mainly. Lumma, in Swedish, meant to resound. Lum in the Shetland Islands meant a rift, an opening in the sky; of the sky; to clear of fog; to disperse. In the county of Norfolk, England, a lum was the handle of an oar. Lum also meant to rain heavily. In Scotland, Ireland and the northern English counties of Durham and Yorkshire a lum meant a chimney, the vent by which the smoke issued, as in Grant’s Chronicles of Keckleton—

“She heard a voice cryin’ doon her ain lum.”

Hence, very commonly used in those regions of Britain. From this came the term “lumhat,” a chimney-pot hat. Further south and west in Yorkshire and in Derbyshire and in the West Riding of Yorkshire, close to the border of Salford Hundred in Lancaster County, lum meant (1) a small wood or grove, (2) a wood bottom growing shrubs and trees, not fit for mowing. In Lancashire, also in counties Derby and Oxford, lum meant “a deep pool in the bed of a river.” Halliwell sums the word up as “a woody valley, a deep pit.” Thus these latter ancient usages were descriptive of locality, “territorial,” and, be it now remembered, had direct reference to a certain definite place, or places, in the natural topography of Lancashire and adjoining parts. Now for halgh, (haulgh, haugh):

“Haugh” is a Scottish and northern England word and particularly written “halgh” and “haulgh” in Lancashire; other forms having been “halche,” “hawch,” “hawgh.” It means low-lying, level ground by the side of a river; forming part of the floor of a river valley, and in the original sense particularly specified; perhaps a corner or nook of land at or within the bend or angle of the river. Streams in hilly regions of the north of England may properly be said to cross and recross the floors of their valleys, striking the base of the slope on each side alternatively, forming a more or less triangular haulgh within the bend, on each side in turn.

In Northumberland and Durham haulgh or haugh denoted low-lying spreads of loam, sand, or gravel, forming the lowest ground of the river valleys which are still flooded from time to time, or which, although they may have for years kept above water, may yet conceivably still be flooded in unusual seasons.

"Haugh-ground" was this low-lying ground. That a "haugh" was by no means waste or useless land, but instead highly fertile is evidenced by the expression (1) In Richardson's Borderer's Tablebook (1846. vii-78)—"O'er the gay daisied haughs will I roam," and (2) In Row's History of Kirk (1842) which mentions that in 1633-50 "330 inundations of waters took away to the sea whole large haughs full of shorn corne."

The name as so applied and meaning is very old, occurring in a charter of Coenwulf in 814, as "healh" and the same in 967 in a Charter of Oswald. We may note also that in the old Anglo-Saxon Ælfric's Homilies "hall" meant a house in the valley.

Coming now to the matter of pronunciation, it is generally known that words and speech have always varied very much in the manner of their verbal use, even in so small a country as England, and that the letter "h" is often not sounded in words in which it appears and often sounded in words in which it does not appear. The dialects of the north, the southwest and the east are contrasting indeed. The broad, full mouthed speech of the Yorkshire man is distinct from the more precise, thinner and keener pronunciation of an East-Anglian, while a Cornishman's talk might prove a puzzle to a Lancastrian. In one city alone the "cockney dialect" of the "East End" of London only adds to the many other contrasts between life there with the different phases in the "West End." Halliwell's Dictionary of Archaic and Provincial words gives us vital evidence as to halgh; it states that in Lancashire pronunciation "al" is changed into "au." Therefore Lumhalgh was rendered as if written Lumau and sometimes Lumaual in the singular form, and Lumhalghes or Lumhalghus the plural or Latin form, as if written Lumaus and Lumauals or Lummals (Haulghton was the early form of the surname of Houghton). Hence, the softening into the later forms, of which we shall quote ample actual evidence from old records, viz:—"Lumhales," "Lumhalx," "Lomas," "Lummas," "Lommance," "Lummys," "Loomys," "Loomis," "Lomax." "Lomax" has only been used since a little before 1600, but to-day it is the almost universal spelling in England. Lomas, however, often occurs, at present, in Lancashire and elsewhere in England; but Loomis has not been found anywhere in England at any time, except at Braintree, Co. Essex, as hereinafter related.

Now for the place itself:

There is no question as to the exact locality in Lancashire that was called Lumhaulgh, or the Lumhalges, or that it was a place of habitation in the thirteenth century. This is certain because there has been only one locality that has had the singular distinction of being known, from sufficiently remote times, by such a form of this name. The locality is that before referred to as Haulgh (only of recent years united with Tonge and called Tonge-with-Haulgh) in the parish of Bolton, Lancashire. The small place of Haulghton, in Manchester parish, should not be construed into connection with Lumhalgh, even though we have noted it in an inquisition post mortem as early as Edw. I (1272-1307). A study of this very ground in Bolton, even in this day of its modern development, reveals the ancient features essential to the haulgh in the river vale. Tonge is on one side of the river, with Haulgh opposite; the two are set in two angles between the three rivers, Croal, Tonge and Bradshaw. As to Lum, it is still the name of a section in Bolton now to be identified in connection with "Lum Street." The removal of the woods, the alterations of grades and the many changes during six hundred and fifty years of material growth leave the investigator in doubt as to between just what bend of the rivers, the highway called Lum was identified with its etymological and topographical mate, the haulgh. The whole matter, nevertheless, is plain enough. There is no theory or assumption, consequently, in the conclusion that (1) only two, three, or at the utmost, four generations (1200 to 1270) before our "Rico de Lmhales" was of Pendleton, in 1333, his, and our first Lumhalgh ancestor was resident in the aforesaid part of the small town of Bolton; (2) that he took his surname appropriately therefrom and no more was known, or called, by the single Christian name of his father prefixed with his own Christian name, as, for (Latin) example Radulphus fil Galfridus or Edwin, son of John. Thus it was that the original adopter of the surname owned, leased, tilled, or was considerably identified, doubtless principally distinguished in connection with a certain piece, or pieces of land, which had the somewhat unique position of being fertile, flat ground in a small river valley, between rivers, and which was, perhaps, partly of wood and partly of meadow, suitable for cultivation, and large enough in area for at least a small farm; also near to a deep pool, or pools, or girt about with banks, or slopes, of rising ground, wooded and forming a vale or pit-like enclosure, or enclosures, with the flat bottom-land below and stretching out with the course of the stream; and also with an habitable structure set either on the slope or upon the haulgh beneath. This situation was distinctive enough in its natural characteristics to render the resident thereat distinguished as of the "lum" "halgh." The appearance of the man and of his immediate descendants in the official records of that time as de Lumhalge and del Lumhalge (in Latin, Lumhalghus—Latin was the "record" language of that time) and later as Lumhalgh and Lumhales is entirely in accord with the prime principles of both etymology and of ancient custom in connection with the origin of surnames. Thus, this conclusion is reached in a proper manner, and is supported by all authorities.*

Although originating in Bolton parish the earliest recorded individuals of the Lomas family appear in the Subsidy Rolls for Pendleton and Wigan, places near to Bolton, some members of the family must have continued in Bolton almost uninterruptedly, as their later development therein indicates. We shall never know the Christian names of the Bolton Lomases of the fourteenth century, because the rolls for that manor are not preserved in the Government Record Office. The reason that no one of the name then in Bolton is mentioned in the subsidy roll of 1333 is that no man would have been so taxed who was not then a landholder, or a merchant having a stock of goods of fair value. Men in the employ of others were not assessed in this subsidy. In the imperfect roll for 1381 the list of men taxed in Bolton is missing. The "Ric luhalghus" of Wigan, taxed two shillings in the subsidy of 1381 must not be considered as the same man as "Rico de Lumhales" of Pendleton in the roll of 1333, though both men bore the same name and held property of exactly the same value amenable to the subsidy. They may have been father and son, but as to that, it will never now be known. The inferences to be drawn from the mention in this roll of 1381 of —

are these:—(1) the amount of the tax of two shillings is higher than that collected of many of their neighbors; (2) the two first names being written one below the other, spelt alike, and taxed alike, indicate that the two men were closely identified with each other in the affairs of life; (3) that both may have dropped the “del” in the manner of writing their family name, but we cannot be at all positive as to that, for this is only one little item in their lives, and one not written down by either one of them. The use of the other form of the name in the third item may only have been done by the scribe, or have been the habit of “Thom. del luhalgh” for the special purpose of distinguishing him more clearly from the other two. Some relationship between all three men is indisputable; and their value in our present contemplation of the early days of the family is so vital that, we may take some note, at this moment, of the place in which they lived. Wigan is just as near and should be just as dear to the Loomis descendant of to-day, as Haulgh in Bolton, Pendleton or Bury, for the evidence that might connect us the more particularly with some one of these places is now,

“Lost in the shadowy gulf of bygone things.”

All the Lomasés and Loomises of the English-speaking world sprang from the original “del Lumhalgh” of Bolton; some, or all of these later men were of Pendleton or through Wigan, or Bury; and the descendants of Joseph Loomis in America all trace back to at least one of them. Further than this we now can never know. Wigan is from “Wig,” signifying a fight in the Saxon, and “en” constituting the plural of that noun. It was the site of a Saxon castle and the scene of a battle between King Arthur and the Saxons. Nine miles southwest of Bolton, and nineteen northeast from Liverpool, it was an incorporated township in 1245, and to-day has a population of about 60,000, including one Lomax family. Coal mining is the great industry, the formations beneath the surface being of great immensity. We are not concerned with that fact, nor with the very large cotton mills here; only that which was familiar to Henry, Richard and Thomas Lumhalgh in 1381 needs attention. The church of All Saints is probably of Saxon origin, long antedating 1381. It is mentioned in the Valor of Pope Nicholas, in 1291. Ten centuries have passed since its cornerstone was laid; the pile was venerable to our Lomasés in 1381. Herein they knelt to prayer and “told their beads,” while the priest chanted in monotone a mass in a foreign tongue and read from a Latin Bible which they were not permitted to examine, and his words they did not understand. In these ten centuries this church has seen the age of simple hardihood, the glorious age of valor and chivalry, the age of bronze when brave men cast aside their armor to don silk attire, the age of iron, when it was customary to chop off the heads of kings, bishops and dissenters, and finally the age of a truer understanding of Christianity. All Saints has been somewhat rebuilt; though the lower part of the tower and the chapel of the Gerard’s or Walmesley’s remains intact. In the restoration all the principal features of the old building have been preserved, and it is still—

“Like romance in stone;
Still to the present does it preach the past
With the more than language! There the moral sigh
O’er the gay splendours of heroic times
May well be heaved, when chivalry prevailed,
And knightly bosoms with heroic pulse
Were beating nobly as became the brave.”

There is a monument in the church to Sir William Bradshaighe (Bradshaw) and his Lady Mabel, who were living in 1315; he in an antique coat-of-mail cross-legged with his sword partially drawn; she in a long robe, veiled, her hands elevated in the attitude of prayer. Henry, Richard or Thomas del Lumhalgh of 1381 could have told us a story of this couple, whom they must have known personally. The tale still lives in Wigan traditions. This knight is said to have been away ten years in the wars, during which time, his wife, thinking him dead, married a Welsh knight. The first husband returned. Mabel favored him, but was whipped therefore by the Welshman, whereupon Bradshaw slew the latter, and was outlawed for a year. Mab's Cross in Wigan is so-called because it is the cross to which Dame Mabel (the Bradshaw pedigree states) "was enjoined by her confessor to do penances by going onest every week barefoot and barelegged to a crosse ner Wigan from the Haghe wilest she lived, and is called Mab X to this day." The interest to us is not in the query, Did Tennyson find his theme for "Enoch Arden" in this Wigan tradition? but rather in the certainty that our Lomases oft knelt at this roadside cross in both fair days and foul, to supplicate and to render thanks to a heaven, that was nearer to them than perhaps they had been told.

With this we leave Wigan; those three Lumhalges doubtless ended their days, as they had lived, within the sight and sound of the thin-toned bell of All Saints, and too, their kin after them likewise. None of them writ their names so large upon the page of local history as to bequeath us further information. The records of the manor, shire and the nation, took due note of them, in exactions, in their time, but nothing further than we have quoted now appears in the important class of remaining records. Everything has been searched; much has perished.

The next glimpse of a Lumhalgh comes ten years later, 1391, in Bury, 5¾ miles northeast of Bolton, viz:—

Patent Roll of King Richard II, in the fifteenth year of his reign (1391); part one, dated at Westminster, (London) July 8. This entry is of a pardon granted by the crown "at the supplication of William Par, Knight, to John, son of Adam del Damme of Midelton in Shalfordshire, for stealing at Bury, on Thursday before St. Wilfrid, 14 Richard II, two bullocks, value 10s. of Richard de Lumhalghs."

The manor rolls, subsidies, etc., for Bury are not sufficiently preserved at the Record Office to afford further information of the family in Bury until forty-four years later, though the continuous residence of a branch of the family there is certain. Some rolls of the court leet of this manor are believed to be at Knowsley Hall, the seat of the Earl of Derby, but are not open to public inspection, nor accessible to a private view in the absence of the owner. In 1435, Sir John Pilkington was lord of the manor of Bury. He held the lands in capite (of the crown), as of the Duchy of Lancaster, and leased them with the mesuages to the actual residents thereon,—farmers, yeomen or tradesmen. In this knight's rent-roll dated Thursday before the feast of St. Valentine, the Martyr, 13 Henry VI (1435) occur the names (in Latin) of these landholders, or tenants:

- "Radus del Lumhalges"
- "Oliverus del Lumhalges"
- "Thomas del Lumhalge de Whetyle"
- "Galfridus del Lumhalges."

The final "ges" is not a syllable apart from the "hal"—the "e" is always superfluous, another "Englishism."

All were descendants out of Haulgh in Bolton, and each man, respectively, a householder; to-day, their descendants in the same Bury number fourteen households or families, all present members of which write their surname

"Lomax." The Pilkingtons had been lords here since 1351, having originated in Pilkington, a parish near to Bury on the south. They held until 1485 when in the Wars of the Roses, casting their favor and fate with the House of York, as against their own House of the Dukes of Lancaster their estates were forfeited, and for this treason, the then chief Pilkington was beheaded. From then till now the Stanleys, Earls of Derby, have held this and other Lancastrian manors.

In the same year of this rent-roll, 1435, the same Sir John Pilkington was chosen a collector of the subsidy granted by parliament to be levied on the inhabitants of the Hundred of Salford. The report of the collection was made out under his direction and he headed it the "Particule accompti de Johannes Pilkington, mil," but failed to give the names of the inhabitants of whom he had collected the tax; only the sums and the names of the places appear in the roll of parchments now in the Record Office. No estimate of the individual wealth of the Lumhalghs then living in Bolton, Bury, Pendleton, Wigan or elsewhere in the Hundred of Salford can thus be had, nor data as to their increase in numbers since 1333 and 1381.

The "de Whytell" added to the name of Thomas del Lumhalghe, in the 1435 rent-roll, merely shows that he lived three miles south of Bury in what is now Whittle, a hamlet in Unsworth parish which was modernly formed (partly) out of Pilsworth. From this fact it is seen that the Lomaxes of Pilsworth were likely descendants of the said Thomas of Whittle, as Whitaker's History of Whalley (ijp. 225) mentions the family in Pilsworth, particularly "Richard Lomax, gentleman, of Pilsworth * *—the owner of a freehold estate at Burnshaw (Beaconshaw) Tower, in the Vale of Todmorden, which by deeds is proved to have been possessed by the family from a very early period." Burnshaw Tower was a fortified house, thirteen miles northeast of Bury, now barely traceable, and Richard Lomax, gentleman, acquired Clayton Hall, by marriage, about 1740, with Rebecca Heywood, the heiress to the estate. This line of Lomax attained to affluence and high social position. Clayton Hall continued in the Lomax possession for several generations; on July 4, 1815, Richard Grimshaw Lomax, the resident thereat, was granted a coat-of-arms, viz:—

"Perpale or and sable, on a bend engrailed with plain cotises ermine, three escallops gules. Crest-issuant out of a crown vallory or, a demi-lion argent, charged on the body with three escallops between the bendlets and holding between the paws an escallop gules."

(This bearing has no reference to any Lomas, or Loomis, before 1815, and to none other since then, save the direct descendants of the said grantee).

No Lomas of Bury or in Lancashire rose to knighthood, to manorial lordship, or to armorial honors up to 1560, hence none figure in the records illustrating such important families. The registers of baptism, marriage and burial at Bury are not now extant prior to 1590, and the manor records not accessible, so the only personal items obtainable of the family at Bury that warrant mention are those of the wills of:—

With 24 more Lomas and Lomax wills of later date; all are original wills filed in the probate registry of Chester, Cheshire; and there are ten other wills dated 1587 to 1677 filed in the Archdeaconry Court of Richmond, Lancashire, and now deposited in Somerset House, London.

None of these testaments afford any evidence leading towards our particular branch of the family which, before the date of any of these wills, had stretched itself across England to the county of Essex; the wills are all too late for further notice, and interesting only as indicating the considerable development of the general family that remained at home in Lancashire, and, as also, the general prosperity of the various members therein. The probate records of Lancashire do not now embrace the wills of any Lomas before that of John Lomas of Heap, in 1576; doubtless there were earlier testaments filed, which are now missing. The MS. collections of the Chetham Society of Manchester have been carefully searched; many Loomis references occur after 1600, but none before, save as hereinafter quoted.

Under the forms of Lomas and Lomax the family in Bury gradually increased in numbers, sharing the steady growth and prosperity there for some generations, until now. None of the living descendants possess reliable information as to their ancestry before 1700. Bury must have always been a pleasant town, and the Presbyterian church had one of its great strongholds there as early as 1666. The name is Saxon, signifying either a castle or a market-town. Bury was a Saxon station, the seat of one of the twelve ancient baronial castles of Lancashire; only the foundations of it now remain, though the early Lomases were familiar with the sight of the whole castle. There appears to have been at least two separate Lomas households in Bury as early as 1400, and probably from these residents descend those of the family who have resided in Bury from that time to the present day. For five hundred years some Lomas undoubtedly has knelt within the parish church of Bury in every one of those years, if not even in every month, or actually on every Sabbath day. This remarkable fact cannot be said of any other church now standing, for the Bolton church was destroyed in 1866, and there have been no Lomases at Pendleton these many years, while at Wigan the old directories fail to name a Lomas resident in various modern periods. Non-conformity also has long since claimed its share of the family in Lancashire. The old parish church is St. Mary's, dating back into the tenth century; in the valor of Pope Nicholas, 1291, its income was valued at £13:6:8 per annum. The building has been "restored" several times, first in 1290, and lastly in 1871-76. The bells were recast in 1722; nearly all the windows are stained. All the ancient memorial inscriptions, tablets and monuments in the church were destroyed in 1558, which fact again robs us of visible Lomas evidence; the registers of baptism, however, are quite complete from 1590, and contain many Lomas entries,—not so the marriage and burial records,—these are all lost before 1812,—an unusual circumstance. The manor house of the Pilkingtons was at Stand in Bury, and the town has been more modernly made notable by the several great inventions in weaving machinery of three of its inhabitants, and by the family of Sir Robert Peel, which founded the great print works here. Bury is situated in the fertile valley of the Irwell, and in common with all the places in the neighborhood of the lofty hills which separate Lancashire from Yorkshire, the climate is humid; more rain falls here than elsewhere in England; the average depth is about forty inches in a year. At the last census the population was above 60,000.

We must revisit Bolton ($5\frac{3}{4}$ miles west of Bury) at this point, the birth-place of the family name. The damage that time has wrought to the subsidy records for Bolton for 1381, effacing that portion of the rolls relating to this parish, is the reason that we have but little light upon the family here. The reason that the family did not rapidly develop here and in the Wapentake of Salford, when the surname was first used, was partly because, as hereinbefore explained, some of the men,—brothers and sons of the first del Lumhalgh—who went to reside in other places called themselves after the names of those other places, instead of Lumhalgh, thus leaving only the issue of one of their number, at first, to perpetuate the name of Lumhalgh in any form. Too, the Bolton line was weakened by the men who went away to Pendleton and Wigan. It is no surprise that the Lumhalghs developed very slowly prior to 1400, to all indications: the surprise is that the male lines did not become extinct, as in many other families of that time. There may have been periods during which the Lomases were absent from Bolton, but their considerable presence there in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, and their large increase in the seventeenth century, and since then, quite gives one the courage to say with the poet:—

“They have been here a thousand years,
And a thousand years they’ll bide.”

Now, let us hark back for four hundred years and on this printed page read some of the very words of a Bolton Lomas, who was born, according to his own statement, as early as 1420.

Shortly after 1500 a dispute arose between the lords of the manors of Middleton and Radclyffe, lying a few miles to the eastward of Bolton, over their respective rights to and upon a stretch of moorland called Cockey Moor. An official inquiry was held by the Attorney General, before a jury of influential men, and the original record thereof has been found in the Muniment Room at Middleton Hall, Lancashire. The inhabitants of Middleton and Radcliff had been accustomed, time out of mind, “to have common” promiscuously in both lordships. Two Lomases were summoned among the 13 witnesses, being adjudged competent because of their age, intelligence and ancient knowledge of the conditions and customs appertaining to the moor. Here then are the words, in part, of these two ancient worthies—all but the sound of their voices; their mode of speech was typical of the time and region. From these words one may imagine the speakers’ portraits, so here are the earliest words-of-mouth of a Lomas that we shall probably ever learn of:—

Of the six witnesses for the Middleton manor, “Lawrens Lomal’s of ye pch (parish) of Bolton of ye age of LXX zers” (70) was the sixth, who “sworne upon a boke afor (the lawyers) to leyde (lead) the meyrez (way) truly betweene aynsworth & Radcliff.”

His testimony was in favor of Middleton, but being so much confounded in the record with that of other witnesses, we pass to the words of the other Lomas witness, one Richard “Lumals” evidently of Bolton; his testimony was, in part, in these words, and directly contrary to the evidence of Lawrence Lumals:—

“Ryc. Lumals of the eygh (age) of lxxxxiii (93)” says  “the Lord Radclyff and hys tenands have occupyett en cokkey mor tyme owtte of mynd uentyll the tyme on Ryc. barton yt that was lord of Medylton mad a pyfold on Cokkey More and pynyd the besse of the tenands of Radclyff and Jamys Radclyff yt was att yt tyme lord of Radclyff sends his son and his heyr to breyke the fold and to take owte thayre bests. And theyn by the space of xxx yer and mor ytt was occupyett pleysable tyll the tyme that Sr Ryc. Assheton late lord of medylton & Ryc. The Lomases also lived under the manorial lordship of Sir Ralph Assheton, reputed a most tyrannical lord, and of whom one of his victims wrote:—

“Sweet Jesu, for mercy’s sake
And for thy bitter passion,
Save us from the axe of the tower
And from Sir Ralph of Assheton.”

A summary of events must conclude the references to Bolton:—

Bolton civic arms: gules—two bends or; crest on a wreath an elephant and castle.

- 1065 (prior to) a part of Bolton parish known as Lumhalgh.
1067 Roger de Poictou, first lord of the manor of Bolton.
1074 Bradshaw Hall erected.
1100 Bolton Manor passes into the hands of “Roger de Mersheya” who sells it in the same year to Ranulph de Mechines, third Earl of Chester, for 240 marks of silver and a pair of white gloves to be presented annually at Easter.
1101 Turton tower erected.
1154 The de Lacys became lords of the manor.
1160 The woollen cloth trade exists in Bolton.
1200 } The surname of del Lumhalgh adopted.
1250 }
1256 Charter granted by Edw. III making Bolton a market-town with a fair.
1301 A tournament of knights held at Turton Tower.
1337 Clothiers (weavers) from Flanders settle in Bolton, introducing also wooden shoes and jannock (oat meal bread). They came to make their fortunes, or as one of them is reported to have quaintly expressed it, with the expectation “that their beds would be good and their bed-fellows better, seeing that the richest yeomen in England would not disdain to marry their daughters to them.”
1351 The manor of Bolton came to the Pilkingtons by a marriage, who retained it till 1485.
1412 Bolton parish church of St. Peter’s supposed to have been erected, though ’tis said that on the demolition of the old church about 1866, evidences were discovered that a church of the Norman period, some 300 years earlier, must have existed on the same site.
1486 The market-cross of stone erected at the church gate. Little Bolton manor-house built.
1509-47 Leland’s Itinerary says: “Bolton upon Moore Market, standith most by cottons and cowrse yarne, divers villages in the Mores about Bolton do make cottons. Nother the site nor the ground aboute Bolton is so good as it is about Byri (Bury). They burne at Bolton some canale, but more se Cole, of wich the pittes be not far of. They burne Turfe also.”
1651 The Earl of Derby beheaded in front of the “Man and Scythe Inn” for treason to the Puritan government.

Baines, the Lancashire historian, says of Bolton:—

“The soil of Bolton parish is generally moory and requires generous tillage. Like in waste mining districts there is a lack of standing timber though some of the valleys are romantic and well wooded; some 2,000 acres of waste land altogether. There are thirty coal mines, and numerous stone quarries, producing flags and slates, lead and carbonate of barytes are also mined here. On the borders of the high surrounding moors winter is very rigorous, yet longevity is common.”

In the Duchy Court of Lancaster in a plea dated 1543, Trinity term, by Robt. deAynsworth vers Laurence Bradshaw and others re right of way and watercourse through lands called the wood and Maplederth in Aynsworth Township, Middleton and Brightmet, near Bolton, the complainant says:—

He is seized of his demesne "lynally" descended from his ancestors of 26 acres in Middleton, —  always had a "broke and other lytil pyrles" of water running through sd. premises. But now, of late, one Laurence Bradsha, a man of great substance, Elys Lummas, and others have several times since the 1st day of December 34 Hen. viii (1542), of covetous minds, for their own lucre, turned the said course of water out of the right course and caused it to run through their own lands to plaintiff's great hindrance. He prays for remedy against the defendants, who are "gretly frynded and alyed." Defendants say: "The matters and surmises in the sd bill were ordered and agreed long before the sd. bill was exhibited, before arbitrators chosen with the assent of both parties, as more at large appears by their award which defendant was always ready to perform. "Ellyce Lummaxe" makes like answer.

Plaintiff replies, denying any such agreement.

Decrees and orders Hen. VIII (Vol. 3, fo. 271):—

It is ordered that as plaintiff has good title to the premises, the defendants shall, at their own costs, before the feast of the Annunciation next to come, turn the said water and pirls into the right course, and into the place where it ran over plaintiff's ground, until defendants can provide themselves with sufficient title to the said water.

In another place in the same court, dated 25 Oct., 1533, reference is made to the locality of Lumhalgh, viz: "John Hargrave of the Lomeshagh." In Lancashire topography no other locality has been known as Lumhalgh. There was "Greenhalgh" and "Fairhalgh" and naturally enough there arose a family of del Haulgh or Halgh, which took its name from its early identity with a haulgh. Probably it derived from the Haulgh in Lancashire with which the Loomis family is linked, or even the Haulgh family may have originally been of the same blood as Lumhalgh. The Haulgh family was long resident at Tonge in Bolton, as is proven by an inquisition post mortem, (Vol. xxii, No. 59), dated 17 James I and touching the demise and estates of one "John Halgh of Tonge," in Bolton; in Royalist Composition Papers for Lancashire—"Robert Haulgh of Mosden"; in inquisitions nonarum for 1341-2; "Henr. del Halgh," of Whalley, and "Alexi del Halgh" of Blackburn, Lancs.; also in a poll-tax list for 1328-80 in the hundred of West Derby, Lancs.—"Rob del Halgh," "Adam del Halgh" of "Lydyate," is mentioned in the same subsidy roll of 1333 with our "Rico de Lmhales," of Pendleton; "Adam del Fairhalghes" of "Oldom," is also taxed in the same Latinized roll, while in the roll for 1381 "Henr del Grenhalgh" is taxed, in Wigan, with our Lumhalghs. Interesting, as well, is the fact that there was a Tonge family that took its name from Tonge in Bolton, while Bolton has become a common surname.

Haulgh, or Tonge-with-Haulgh, as distinct from Bolton center, deserves a word. From Testa de Nevill (folio 405) it is learned that in the reign of K. John, Gilbert de Tonge held one bovate of land of the King, in Tonge, for four shillings; that this place was in the parish of Bolton seems to be proved by a record in Birch's MS. Feodorium, in which, it is said that John, son of Elias Tonge, holds one bovate of land there by the service of four shillings per annum for sake-fee.

Haulgh is mentioned as in Bolton in a charter of Henry II (1154-1189) and in a Lancashire assize roll of 6 Edw. I (1278).

The two most interesting sights in Tonge-with-Haulgh now are Haulgh Hall, "a plain erection," and "Hall-i'-the-Wood." "Lawrens Lumals," who testified about Cokkey Moor, probably saw both of these houses. The former is owned by the Earl of Bradford, while Hall-i-the-Wood is famous as a relic, and once the residence of Samuel Crompton, the inventor therein of the mule, a cotton-spinning machine. Hall-i-the-Wood has been purchased by the corporation of Bolton as a museum for cotton from the raw to the finished article. This old house overlooks the vale containing the "lum" and the "haulgh" from which the Lomas name was taken.

"Hall I'th' Wood, near Bolton."

In this valley, by the "Hall I'th' Wood," the name of Loomis, in its earliest form of "del Lumhalgh," had its origin; here the family, so-named, first lived. This is the stream they knew in its every bend—and stone—the River Tonge; herein is a good, though rather small specimen of a "haulgh"—"the low-lying ground" encircled in the bend of the stream at the left; and here also is a small "lum"—the wooded pit-like banks with deep pools in the water beneath. The view is partly in the Tonge and Haulgh sections of Bolton. The beautiful and very old house is upon the Tonge side of the river; in it the mule (spinning machine) was invented.

That Tonge and Haulgh had residents in Saxon times is suggested by the finding of a barrow (grave) containing two kist-vaens (graves closed at the sides and top with stones, like a chest) in which were an urn of red earth, human bones, a bronze spear-head and armor. ("Kist" is a pure Lancashire Saxon word).

In England the great majority of all of the persons of the name of Lomas, of all times, have ever abided in "time-honoured Lancaster," but prior to 1500, as the reader has seen, the records are too broken from which to erect a consecutive pedigree of generation to generation. Therefore, this narrative is now about to lead the reader into other parts of the realm of England, whither the Lomases wandered. Ere quitting the great and valiant shire of their first three hundred years of domicile, we may observe some facts of history that applied to them in their day. They lived in the feudal days, "when knighthood was in flower," which have since proven so rich a source for the historian, the romanticist and the poet—days distinguished alike for regal pomp and chivalry and the sterner realities of war, particularly so as to their own Lancashire, which then played a greater part in the affairs of the crown than at any time before or since. The prime cause of this was the great strength and position of Lancaster Castle and the earls thereof. It may be noted that John o' Gaunt (named after Ghent in Flanders, the place of his birth), became the fifth earl and the second duke of Lancaster, in right of his wife, Blanche Plantagenet, heiress of Henry, the first Duke. They were the parents of the famous Henry of Bolingbroke, one of the greatest names to conjure with in all English history. To this family, the Lomases looked for all that was considered great in those times, and their imagination and blood were stirred, in loyal impulse by these, their great over-lords, who furnished Shakespeare with so many facts for his plays. It was this Henry of Bolingbroke who, when his cousin, King Richard II, seized the Lancashire estates of John o' Gaunt, wrested the crown of England from the feeble hand of this Richard, and placed himself upon the throne as Henry IV. Then, over a period of sixty years, raged the "Wars of the Roses" whereby the House of York sought to win the throne from the House of Lancaster, the latter reigned until the dethronement of Henry VI in 1461. Every man then was either a Yorkist or a Lancastrian. We imagine the Lomases of Bury and Bolton exulting over the beheading of their manorial lord, Pilkington, for his treason. It is no enlargement upon easy probabilities to believe but that some of them joined the Lancastrian army. The chances are altogether likely that some of them could hardly have escaped being called into that service. Courage of a different sort than that which fights with bullets and cannon was then required. The famous battles of Shrewsbury, Agincourt, Crevant, Verneuil, St. Albans, Bloreheath, Northampton, and the siege of Orleans (raised by Joan of Arc), are all to be thought of in this connection. The names of Lomases will not appear therein because only those of the knights participating have been preserved; but, be it not forgotten, that each knight had his own coterie of bowmen, axemen, and lancers raised from among his dependents or tenants, whom he summoned in war, as in peace.

As to Lancashire lands, the present Loomis descendants must consider that, after the Norman system of land-tenure came into force, the early Lomases were not actual and sole owners of land to any particular extent. Doubtless they so owned while the Saxon influence was maintained, but after the claims of the Normans to the lands became, as they finally did, actually enforced, the family simply held of some lord who in turn held of a man still higher up, till the Norman feudal system began to weaken, by 1400. Carthew's Hundred of Launditch (p. 325) explains this clearly:—

"We do not now realize the fact that the ultimate ownership of the soil of all the land in the kingdom is in the King, by whom it was, or was supposed to be, granted to his great barons to be held by military services, which they were bound to perform at stated times; and under them, by their knights, who were to provide the soldiers and perform the duties for which their superiors were liable; and again, under them, by others, upon the same terms, down to the actual resident occupier or lord of the manor. The latter retained in his own hands sufficient land to grow corn or feed cattle for the maintenance of his own household, while the rest was parcelled out amongst his dependents and vassals, who or whose forefathers had perhaps resided upon it from the Saxon times. Some of these were called villans, from their dwelling in the ville or township; others bordars whose office it was to provide for their lord's bord or table; and some instead of rent in money, were to cultivate the lord's private lands for him, by performing so many days' work—ploughing, carting, sowing, mowing, harvesting, etc., at particular seasons of the year (see hereinafter p. 91 for a Lammase instance of this)—while a sufficient quantity of grass or meadow land was set apart for common pasture."

It is thought that the results of the Norman dominion prevented the family from regaining that freehold possession of the soil which it had before then, and has regained in the last three or four hundred years. The manorial customs to which practically all of the members of the family in Lancashire were subject, between 1300 and 1500, were exacting indeed. They were constantly subject to fines by the manorial lords, who preyed upon the people at every possible point. One example of this alone will suffice, i. e., the right (or better, the might) of heriot:—

"On the death of a tenant the heir male, or on the marriage of a female tenant, the husband should pay a fine of 8 years' rent, and in the former case the lord should be entitled to have for and in the name of heriot, the best beast, or other best moveable chattel of the late tenant."

This applied just the same, even if there was but one cow, horse, ox, hog or sheep. Many a poor widow suffered from the heartless heriot.

A tenant could not remove from one house to another without being fined therefor, nor inherit any property without the lord claiming and collecting a share of it. The records of the manorial courts of England consist largely of such fines and petty exactions upon the people. This is a blot upon the page of chivalry of the lords of the soil. It was far more difficult, before 1600, for a man or a family to rise to a position of affluence or independence than nowadays. Credit must be given to these early ancestors for their loyalty and long patience under conditions that would be deemed intolerable in this brighter day of their abolishment. The Loomis family, however, has come into its reward. It has taken its place among the great families of the world,—all through one man's courage, faith and prescience. And now do not the descendants of Joseph Loomis, the emigrant of 1638, far outnumber and outrank all of the name who have as yet been born to call England their home? The glory attaching to the blood and name of Lomas and Loomis, is part, parcel and product of American individual independence.

Lancashire has told much in little.

(It was thought to give, at this point, a list of all of the records pertaining to this county that the writer has searched, in order that the members of the Loomis Association of America might realize that full effort has been made in their behalf for "Loomis evidence;" but the list is deemed too wearisomely long and hopelessly technical.)

After 1500 the family appears in various parts of Lancashire, not heretofore referred to, and with which this narration need have naught to do. An item indicating about the time when the "Lomax" spelling came into vogue is of value:

Close Roll, No. 1883, 5 James I (1608) Indenture dated 28 July 1 James I, between Gyles Aynsworth of Aynsworth, Lancs, and "Thomas Lommas alias Lomax" of Little Lever, parish of Bolton-in-the-Moor, as to the sale of certain tenements.

Before 1500 the Lomas family had spread over into the adjacent county of Derby, and became firmly established, where it still flourishes to this day. The earliest offshoots from Lancashire, however, are shown by the following quotations from the records:—

Inquisitions post mortem. No. 145, 9 Richard II (1386) (Translation)—“Henricus Lunales alias Dictus Lunhales son and heir of Henry Lunhales, who died seized of 30 acres of land held of the crown in Penbrugge (now Pembridge), Herefordshire.

This line did not develop in Herefordshire.

Patent Rolls, 17 Richard II (1394) part 2, membrane 41—dated 8 Feb. at Westminster. Pardon to Roger de Lumhale of Crosseland (Agbrigg Wapentake, West Riding, Yorkshire, close to the Lancashire border and in the mountains) for the death of William Arkeland of Fossa Crosseland killed there on Wednesday before Palm Sunday in the seventh year. (This item like Roger de Lumhale himself is isolated; no further evidence of his name in any form has been found in the courts of Yorkshire at any time after 1394.)

The next item affords the earliest recorded instance of the “Lomys” spelling—hence is very significant, occurring in Somersetshire, some ninety miles south of county of Lancaster. The name thus introduced into another shire than Lancaster, wherein the dialect was different and the name Lumhalgh or Lomas unknown, the phonetic spelling readily crept into the reports sent to London by the representatives of the crown in Martock whose duty it was to report these evasions of a license to alienate or enter premises.

Patent Rolls 2 Henry VI, part 4, Membrane 13, dated Nov. 28, 1423:—

“Thomas Lomys” and nine others entered into 4 messuages and 48 acres of land in Cote in the pch of Mertok—said grantees entered without license. Now the king for 5 marks paid in the hanaper, pardons the trespasses done in this behalf and licenses the said last-named parties to retain the premises.”

(The name of Martock represents the old pronunciation of ‘Market Oak’ in Somersetshire, and this pardon illustrates the fact that the crown exacted a fine, or the purchase of a license, from a tenant who bought property, or removed from one house to another, similarly as did a lord of a manor.)

Thirteen years later the same Thomas Lomys repeated the same performance in Bower Henton, a tithing in and one mile south of Martock:

Patent Roll 15 Henry VI (1436) 1st Dec. Membrane 7 Thomas Lomes (and 2 others) bought a messuage and a moiety of a virgate of land in Bourhenton, Somerset, held in chief of the king, then granted the same to those he had acquired it of. “whereas the premises were again entered without license; the king for one mark paid in the hanaper has pardoned these premises.”

The subsidy rolls for Somersetshire have been searched for further evidence as to these Lomyses, without result; the only rolls now extant for the period required and bearing names, for the hundred comprising Martock, are temp. Richard II (1366-99) and for 1412. It is determined, though, that this Somerset branch had either become extinct, or removed to some other part of England not long after.

It should be noted that the suggestion which has been made in print that the name of Loomis may derive from Le Mans, a city in France, is one that has been looked into and, of necessity, rejected. The name of Lemman, Lemon (sometimes Loman), as a surname in England, arose from the Anglo-Saxon and Chaucerian word lemman, meaning sweetheart, etc. One “Alan, the son of the Lemman” is mentioned in the Hundred Rolls (1273). “Its primary meaning,” says Lower, “seems to be a person much beloved, or very dear.” Maun-deville’s Travels, page 24, instances this:—

“And he sayde he would ben hir Limman and sche asked him if that he were a knyghte and he seyde Nay, and than sche said that he myghte not ben hir Lemman.”

With respect to the name of Lomaz and some of its variants, appearing in Spanish topography, and possibly also as to persons in southern Europe, that is merely a coincidence having no bearing upon the family of Lomas of England. It is not uncommon to find apparently the same surname applied to persons in racially different countries, who have nothing else in common; the name of Williams, for instance, a surname among several races.

The name of Lunnis (confounded with Lummis), is a contraction of "Londonoys." The name of "Lymesy," of 1272, became "Linsey" in Norfolk; while the surname of "Lamse" (Lamerse) in Rotolus Curiae Regis, 1189-99, for West Wycombe, Bucks, became Lammers. "Lumes" is an English provincialism for beams, and has no connection with the surname of Lomas.

Turning our attention now to Derbyshire and its borders, therein is found a flourishing Lomas colony—the second largest in England. The reader is now on the road of the Lomas descent from Lancashire, through Derby, into the county of Essex, where resided Joseph Loomis, the emigrant to America. It is found to be now impossible to prove a chain of descent complete in every link, from Lancashire across the country to Essex in 1530, for the records necessary to such perfection are non-existent—such as exist being disconnected and incomplete; and no Lomas of the fifteenth century was apparently far-sighted enough to have his pedigree inscribed upon parchment for deposit in any antiquarian collection of MSS. The reader may see plainly, nevertheless, from the evidence, the broad track of the migration into Essex. Derbyshire is the northerly midland county famous for its wooded hills, stone quarries, lovely vales and streams. The branch from Lancashire is first noted at Chapel-en-le-Frith in 1432, in the High Peak Hundred, and six miles north of Buxton. The Lomases may have been influenced to remove from Lancashire, by the Bradshaws who had acquired hundreds of acres in Chapel-en-le-Frith about a hundred years before. The Wars of the Roses, however, which had been disturbing England for several years before 1432, may have made some Lomas acquainted with this charming region. In the forest courts, held in the open air, by itinerant justices, two Lomases are first mentioned:

Pleas of the Forest of Peak 13 Henry IV to Henry VI (1412-1432) Duchy of Lancaster Rent Roll. Belvoir Castle Records (pages 187-265) "Capella le Frith." "Rents of Assize."

"Thomas Lumhales."

"Ric Lumhales."

Descendants of these men are found to-day in the very same Chapel-en-le-Frith, all writing their name "Lomas"; some twenty-one households of them, seventeen being farmsteads. Some of these farmers till the very same acres from which their ancestors drew substance almost five hundred years ago, though not one of them, when inquired of, seemed to be aware of the fact that their ancestors had there dwelt quite as anciently. One of these farmers, "Mr. George Lomas," occupies old Bradshaw Hall, now a farm-house, though both the house and its accompanying three hundred acres have been owned by the Bradshaws from feudal times. King Edward VII is lord of the manor of Chapel-en-le-Frith in right of the Duchy of Lancaster, which owns estates in various parts of England besides Lancashire. As it was only a hundred years after 1432 that our direct line of Lomases had found its way out of this Derbyshire-Stafford colony further to the southeast into Essex, the inquiry in the former region has been confined, mostly, to between 1400 and 1570; no further information of the family in Chapel-en-le-Frith, within this period, has come to hand. In the subsidy rolls, all of which have been searched, only the names of places were entered with the amounts of the tax assessed or collected in each place. Any rolls that may have borne the names of the subsidy-payers are not now extant. Equally unfortunate is the fact that the vital records in the parish church, for the generations before 1620, have gone no man knows where. Thomas and Nicholas Lumhales of this place, about 1432, worshipped in the church of St. Thomas á Becket, which was already more than two hundred years old in their time, it being of proven record in 1224. The loving care of the parishioners has kept the old structure in good order, otherwise,

"But for the ivy's buckler green,
With stems like stalwart arms sustained,
Here else had little now remained
But heaps of stone * * * *"

In a Derbyshire Charter (Bradburne, No. 395) dated 6 Edward IV (1466-7) is recorded a power-of-attorney from Laurence Lumhale and Laurence Parker to Thomas Brewster to take seisin of lands called Malderigge Cardellhay in Bradburne and Harbington, which they held of John, prior, and the priory of Dunstable.

In a court roll of the Duchy of Lancaster for Castleton, Derby, number 427-41, dated Henry VIII (soon after 1504), View of frank pledge, "Ricus lumalls" is presented and fined four pence for not appearing as a juror when summoned. Evidence of the evolution in Derby of the family name from Lumhales, is interesting, i. e.:

Duchy of Lancaster, Court proceedings Vol. XCIII—H. No. 3 27th of Elizabeth, 1585: Nicholas Heathcote in an action of law against Nicholas Lomas over lands in Hartington Manor, Derbyshire.

20th of Elizabeth, 1578 "John Lommas" of Wirksworth, Derbyshire, in an action-at-law. This item keeps pace with a Lancashire spelling of the same time, viz: Duchy of Lancaster, Court proceedings, Vol. XIV No. 7, 5th of Elizabeth 1563 wherein Henry Talbot sues one "Ralph Lommas" as to messuage and lands in "Nother Derwent" Lancashire.

Parish Register of Chesterfield, Derbyshire: "1616 Ralf Lomas of Glasswell and Mary Cresswell" (married) Parish Register of Longstone, Derbyshire: "1641, Henry Lommas and Parnel Mellor, 10th Feb." married.

Court of Quarter Sessions, held at Chesterfield, 1689-1702; "George Lomas of Chapel-le-Prith" fined for assault.

The courts of Chancery have been faithfully searched for Derby, but, as in Lancaster, the Lomascs scarcely went to law at all; only three cases are entered—all after Joseph Loomis's line of the family had gotten fixed in Essex, hence further description is not essential:—

Chas. I Reynardson:

L. 44-22 Henry Lomas of Castleton, Derby, yeoman

L. 48-25 John " Eaves "

L. 52-29 Nicholas Lomas of Thornlers, Derby, yeoman

The probate records for Derby and Stafford contain 21 Lomas wills between 1533 and 1651; all wills filed prior to 1580 have been examined. One of the earliest references is the record of a letter of administration granted to widow Margaret Lumalls of Youlgrave, Derby, where a Lomas family was still residing in 1904:

Litchfield Registry: Derby, Alveton, XIII^d die Februari 1533. Comissa fuit admistraco bonorum Margaret Lumalls vidue poch de Yolgrave Roberto Steyre filio in legibus defunct ad exhib. Inven cit fm pasche p X.

Two other administrations of property recorded at Litchfield in the same reign are chiefly valuable for the spelling of the surname:

1533 "Apud Lichfield xx^{mo} die May. Comissa fuit admistraco bonorum Thome Lumaus poch de Drayton in Hayles (Staffordshire) Elizabeth filie defunct pco q^d Ricus filius et Executor noiate in testo dict defunct. Comissa fuit admistraco bonorum Jacobi Lomaus poch p'dct (Drayton-in-Hales) Elizabeth sorori naturali defunct administratrici bonorum sol jurat."

The registers of the parish church of Alstonfield, Stafford, show that some of the family in the Derby-Stafford group had lived there for some time before 1538, when baptisms, marriages and burials were first recorded in England, the earliest items therein being:—

Burials 1541 "Sept. 19, Margaret, daughter of John Lomas buried."
 " 1542 "Feb. 18, James, son of Margaret Lomas "
 " 1545 April 9, John, son of Emot Lomas "
 " " July 10, Joane, wife of John Lomas "

And so on the entries continue. The will of one of these John Lomas of Alstonfield bears no reference to any of the family in Essex:

Up to the year 1500 no form of the name of Lomas appears of record in England to the east or southeast of the counties of Derby and Stafford, save in one notable exception. In 1496 one Richard Lumhals was sent to be rector of the parish church of Surlingham St. Mary, in the County of Norfolk, directly to the east of Derby. Blomefield's Norfolk (V-p. 465) mentions him:

"1496 William Gore rector of Surlingham St. Mary died the next year. Ric. Lumhalx succeeded him and lies buried by him with this inscription—

"Orate pro anima Domini Ricardi Lumhawkys quondam
 Rectoris istius Ecclesie qui obiit rro die decembr.
 Aº Dni. Mvc riui cuius anime propicietur Deus."

This item affords an instance of another Latinized spelling of the Lomas surname and in a shire to which the name was new. The use of the letter "x" instead of the "s" (pronounced as if written "s") was common in other cases besides "Lomax" and "Lumhalx"; for example, "Blesby" was occasionally written "Blexby." "Lomax" has always been more aristocratic in England than "Lomas" and these two forms are really the truest of all developments from "del Lum halgh." "Loomis" is an accidental variant of that other modification of "Lummys."

In six hundred years of English Lomas history the name never appears as "Loomis," save the exception of the family of Braintree, Co. Essex, hereinafter noted.

This Sir Richard Lumhals was the only Lomas clergyman of record in England prior to 1638. The registers of the English Universities do not mention him; it is not discernible where he was educated, but, at least, his father must have come from Lancashire, or Derby, if the clergyman was not actually born there himself. The rector's use of the letter "x," a forerunner of the Bolton, Lancashire, use of the same letter, and the fact of his being educated for holy orders suggests that his people were of the more prosperous line of the general family, then resident at Bolton. This rector used the prefix "Sr," (Sir)—the only Lomas who has ever had that honor; his name, however, is not found in the official lists of the knights of England. He was a priest of what was then the church of Rome in England; he died officially unmarried, seventeen years later. English priests of his day were not always childless; they sometimes easily and openly circumvented the laws of their church with respect to what may now be held to constitute a marriage. Rector Lumhals bequeathed to a "Lumhalx,"—not necessarily a son, for he appears to have had relatives living nearby (as hereinafter):

Abstract of the will of Sir Richard Lumhals:

In the name of God, Amen:

At South Elmham, Suffolk, a few miles south of Surlingham, Norfolk, one Helias Lumhals, Gentleman, acquired real estate some time prior to 1514, evidently by marriage, or inheritance from other than a Lomas, but no record of its purchase appears in feet of fines for Suffolk, or in deeds. Rector Lumhals was very likely one of the sons of this Helias, Senior, as both were in the same diocese and the city of Norwich was their business and ecclesiastical centre. Helias Lumhals, Junior, sold this property in 1514, as is shown by an enrollment in a close roll. The introduction to this roll is so interesting on account of its having been made at a moment when Henry VIII was out of England and his Queen Catherine was the actual ruler of the country, that the Lumhals deed of sale is here prefaced with its official introduction at the head of the roll:

"Foras much as the iiiith day of July, the vth yere of the regne of oure Souvaigne Lorde King Henry the viiith my Lorde Chauncellour of Englande and other the king's counsaill appoynted by his highness for the tyme of his absence in the parties of beyonde the see be ascertyned that the Kinges Highness on Thursday last past that is to seye the xxxth day of Juyn the yere aforesaide toke passage at his porte of Dovorr towards his voyage into the parties of fraunce and at vii of the clok in the evenyng of the same day applyed and arryved at his toune of Caleys. The Grant by Helias Lumhals is a good specimen of a conveyance of its time:—

Close Rolls 5. Henry VIII 7514 No. 381 Public Record Office, London (Translation):—
Of the writing enrolled for Henry Chauncy:

To all the faithful of Christ to whom the present writing shall come Helias Lumhals, son and heir of Helias Lumhals, late of Southelmham in the county of Suffolk, Gentleman, as also son and heir of Agnes Lumhals late wife of the said Helias, Greeting. Know ye that I the afore-named Helias have remitted released and for me and my heirs for ever utterly quitclaimed to Henry Chauncy of Norwich gentelman and Dorothy his wife, Henry Att Mere, citizen and alderman of Norwich, George Chauncy, Dennis Leventhorpe and John Spelman, being in their full and peaceful possession and seisin, and to their heirs and assigns, to the use of the said Henry Chauncy and Dorothy his wife, and their heirs and assigns for ever, all my right estate title claim demand possession and interest which I have ever had, have, or in any way in the future might have, or which my heirs might have, as well of and in all the lands and tenements, rents reversions and services, with all their appurtenances, in Southelmham aforesaid which late belonged to the aforesaid Helias Lumhals and Agnes his wife, or either of them, of which the aforesaid Helias Lumhals and Agnes, or either of them, or any other person or persons, to the use of the said Helias and Agnes, or of either of them, was or were seised or enfeoffed, as in all other the lands and tenements, rents, reversions, and services, in Southelmham aforesaid, with all their appurtenances, by whatsoever right or title they may have come to me the afore-named Helias Lumhals, in such a way to wit that neither I the aforesaid Helias nor my heirs nor any other person by us, for us, or in the names of us or any of us, can or may henceforth for ever exact claim or vindicate any right estate title claim demand possession or interest of or in the aforesaid lands and tenements rents reversions and services above-said, with all their appurtenances, or in any parcel thereof. But by the presents we are for ever wholly excluded from all action of right estate title claim demand possession and interest, or from seeking anything therein, and I the aforesaid Helias Lumhals and my heirs will by the presents warrant and for ever defend all the lands and tenements, rents reversions and services aforesaid to the aforesaid Henry Chauncy and Dorothy his wife, Henry Att Mere, George Chauncy, Dennis Leventhorpe and John Spelman, their heirs and assigns to the use of the aforesaid Henry Chauncy and Dorothy his wife against all men. In witness whereof to this present writing I have affixed my seal. Given on the first day of February in the fourth year of the reign of king Henry the eighth" [1513.]

Three most important issues arise from this deed: (1) The grantor had a seal—presumably heraldic; (2) What became of "Helias" Lumhals, Jr.? (3) The Christian name of Helias. The latter may be considered first. This name proves the Lancaster or Derby origin of Helias, Senr., the father. Helias is a contraction, phonetically spelled, of the Latin "Elizeus," more modernly appearing both as Elias and Elys and sometimes Ellis. The will (as hereinafter) of Helias Lumhals, Jr., maker of the aforesaid deed, is entered in the Court Calendar as "Elizeus"; on the index margin of the register on which it is recorded the name is written "Heliseus," while the testator himself, in his will, contracts the name to "Elys," as also was done in Lancashire by "Elys Lummas," who, as has been seen on page 70, was sued for diverting a brook from its natural course. "Eliseus" is a scriptural form of the name. Now, it is indeed significant that Elias was a Christian name peculiar to Lancashire and its borders. It was particularly so in early times. This came about because of a Lancastrian hero who achieved fame as a crusader. His name was Elias, or Elizeus, as referred to in Hopkinson's MS. Pedigrees of the North Riding of Yorkshire. This Elias, it is written, "was of such strength and valour that he was reputed a giant and in the old scripts is often called 'Elias Gigas.' He fought many duels, combats, etc., for the love of our Saviour Jesus Christ." Well he might, for his name meant "Jehovah is my God." After his return from the Holy Land, in the eleventh century, his name became popular, and many male infants were christened with it, as Elias, Elyas, Helias or Elys. In Salford Hundred, Lancashire, where the Lomases originated and developed, this name of Elias was especially in vogue; numerous instances of it have been noted, some of the earliest of which are:—

"Helias de Pendlebury" living 1087-1100.

"Elyas de Batheton" living 1230-1246 (Duchy of Lancaster Charter.)

"Elias de Thornbranthewed" of Bolton, Lancs, living 1201-1216 (witness to a charter.)

"Elyas de Plesinton," 1246-47 (Lancs, Assize Rolls.)

"Elias de Tonge" 1300 (Tonge in Bolton, Lancs.)

"Elys Lummas" 1543 (Duchy of Lancaster Plea Roll.)

The records applying to South Elmham, Suffolk, have been searched, in vain, for something more about Helias Lumhals, Senior, and his wife Agnes; the subsidies do not even mention him. He died before parish registers were inaugurated and the rolls of the manorial court therefor are not in the Record Office. There is no gravestone within or without the five old churches of that town to the memory of either Helias or Agnes. Their days there were short; the place may have been her home-town. Their children did not continue to live in the Elmhams. If Helias, Sr., or even Agnes, had only made a will before they died naming their children, we should seize upon it and feel certain, if a younger son was named therein, that that son, after his father's death and the Elmhams property was sold by the eldest son and heir Helias, Jr., had crossed over the frontier of Suffolk county into the adjoining Essex, settling at Thaxted, fifty miles away and close to the Suffolk line.

It is a remarkable fact that at this time, 1496 to 1523, the name of Lomas, in any form whatever, was absolutely unknown in any of these eastern shires of England, save in this family of Helias and Agnes Lumhals; equally significant, moreover, is the incontrovertible fact that the first appearance elsewhere, after 1523, of the Lomas family is in the parish of the said Thaxted, where it is safe to say, there lived and died, (in 1551) the great grandfather of the emigrant, (Joseph Loomis)—and born possibly before the year 1500—exactly in season to have been a younger son of Helias Lumhals, Gentleman, and his wife, Agnes of South Elmham, Suffolk, the first county to the north of Essex, and the county to which several of the immediate relatives of the said great-grandfather removed from Thaxted. It is useless to exclaim—"This must be the line of descent into Thaxted!" It is all likely, plausible, probable, reasonable,—altogether a fair and flawless "deduction" with no other line of the Lomas family extant at the time in that whole east of England. A glance at the map is confirmatory. But proof of it cannot be had, search as one may, and everything available has been searched. The records are broken, incomplete, and in some classes there are no records at all preserved for South Elmham; neither can that claim, belief, or conception of the line of descent be successfully doubted. We state the evidence; the Lomas descendants may judge; whatever is thought for, or against, this understanding of the descent—the palpable fact will ever remain—they were there—at the right time in South Elmham; their surname disappeared for many years from Suffolk and Norfolk with the death, in middle age, of Helias Lumhals, Jr., in 1523, who had removed to Norwich, and it reappears soon after in Thaxted. No sons are named in the will of Helias, Jr., though it is not safe to say that he had none.

South Elmham in Suffolk is a district embracing nine parishes and forms a subdivision of the Hundred of Wangford, anciently called the liberty, manor or township of South Elmham. It is a deanery within itself. Several churches were founded here in Saxon times, the dedication of which to patron saints led to its subsequent division into parishes; of which St. Margaret's became the ville or principal residential part of the township. These parishes are, All Saints, St. George, St. Mary, St. James, St. Margaret, St. Michael, St. Nicholas and St. Peter. Though anciently of large renown South Elmham, aside from its many ecclesiastical antiquities, is now only what, to American eyes, would appear to be a sweet, beautiful countryside. Suckling's History of Suffolk contains forty-eight pages of description of South Elmham. As we are unable to determine at which one of the eight churches in this township, Helias Lumhals, Gentleman, worshipped, or lies buried, further reference to them is reserved. It is said in Fuller's "County Proverbs," that St. Mary's parish (also called Homersfield) anciently contained so many ale-houses as to have occasioned this distich:

"Denton in the dale, and Arbro' in the dirt,—
 And if you go to Homersfield, your purse will get the squirt."

Before engaging the reader's attention altogether with his (or her) Lomas ancestors in Thaxted, Essex, it may be well to present the fact that about a generation after the family became settled in Thaxted, a branch of Lomas, issuing either out of Thaxted, or directly from the distant shires of Lancaster, Derby or Stafford, took lodgment in the town of Tenterden in the county of Kent. This town is nearly as far to the south of London as Thaxted is to the north thereof (about forty miles). There is no especial occasion to mention this fact except that one of the very first of this family in Tenterden was that famous young man, "John Lomas," the martyr, who was burned at the stake in Canterbury for his religious convictions, in the month of January, 1556; and also that it is more logical that he had gone to Tenterden with some relative—his father John, or uncle John, (as the Tenterden records imply), from the comparatively near and only eastern Lomas colony of Thaxted and Pleshey in Essex, rather than from the far distant Lancashire or its borders. It is admissible that, at the least, this great hero was a remote relative of Joseph Loomis's Essex forbears; but in the absence of proof it must not be accepted that he actually was of Thaxted or Pleshey. Thorough inquiry has been made in Kent; the name of Lomas first appears therein at Tenterden in 1552, and the extant records thereof, before this date, are ample enough to justify the statement that this family was then newly domiciled in that region. Further than this we can only quote from the first records there and add the fact that a John Lomas of Pleshey (close to Thaxted) disappears from the Pleshey records soon after 1543:

A little later some of this Tenterden family appear at Addington (near London) just over the Kent border in Surrey, from where the next generation removed into the city of London, as per the many proofs in the London church records and marriage records, and with which our branch of the family is not identified.

The aforesaid John Lomas of Pleshey is first found in a lay subsidy roll, number 108-246, dated 34 Henry VIII, 1543, the same being the record of the assessment of a tax upon the inhabitants of the Hundred of Dunmow, within which the towns of Pleshey and Thaxted are located. This record reads:—

"Plecey"

"Johnes Lamence in bourd li x^s vi^d."

"Bourd," meaning message, or cottage, it is seen that he was not taxed for goods as a merchant would have been, nor upon land as a freehold or copyhold farmer. This John Lomas, therefore, appears to have been a man of some craft, such as a weaver, or maker of something utilitarian. With this he disappears from view; nothing before or after 1543 turns up as to the family in Pleshey. Not so, however, with the name in nearby Thaxted. Therein the Lomases rapidly flourished after implantation, many times figuring in the records. In the subsidy of 1525 (No. 108-202) no Lomas of Thaxted was taxed on goods, land or house, but the church records (as hereinafter) give strong testimony to the certainty that the family had entered Thaxted by, or about, this date, while the manor rolls of the Duchy of Lancaster (of which Thaxted was part and parcel, as a personal possession of the Sovereign) now in the Record Office, London, do not mention any Lomas among the inhabitants up to 1515. These manor rolls, after 1515, are missing from the archives of the Duchy deposited in the Record Office. Thus this fact is the only thing that prevents the reader from knowing the exact date of the first entry of a Lomas into a house, or other property, in Thaxted as a new resident in that town.

We have noticed hereinbefore, that, with every advent of the Lomas family out of Lancashire, or out of Derby, or out of Suffolk and Norfolk into some other shire where the family name was unknown before such advent, the surname has become subject to being written, by the record-keepers of such new parts, in some slightly different spelling than in the region the Lomas traveller had before abided in. Thaxted is no exception, though the dialect and mode of speech of the native Essex folk did not differ so much from that of Norfolk, as from Derby and Lancaster. The majority of the whole population of England could not write its own language in the sixteenth century; almost as many could not read it thoroughly. Reading and writing was then a vocation, a pursuit, followed by a sufficient number of men in each locality to meet the demands for their services. The term "clerk" then signified these writers; their skill with a mere quill exceeded that of to-day, and much of their work was done in Latin and upon parchment. Some of the Lomasas cannot be excluded from this common inability to write or to read. Under such conditions the variegated spellings of their name in the Thaxted records need excite no other thoughts than of curiosity, save in the matter of the instance of "Lammas," (fully elucidated shortly). It has been aptly said that in the olden times some people wrote their names in one way in the morning and in another in the afternoon. A subsidy roll of the Hundred of Dunmow, No. 108-246, dated 1543, reveals:—

"Thaxted" "John Lommance in Bord & Cattall XL^s iiiij^d"

"Thaxted" "John Lommance, Goods X L^s ij^d"

Owing to the term "Goods" doubt arises as to whether he was a farmer or a merchant dealing in live stock; probably he was both, and surely a man in comparatively fair circumstances. No other Lomas of Thaxted was so taxable in this year. There were, however, in 1540, as per the church records, at least three separate Lomas households, or rather, three male adults each having a family, viz: the above John, a William "Lommance," and a Thomas "Lummys." The deaths of William and Thomas are on record in Thaxted; but the absence of John's death-record there, and the fact that the woman who must have been his wife and whose maiden name was either Pasfield, or Jackson, made her will and died as a widow, in Rettendon, Essex, some twenty-five miles away, whereto she had removed, leads to the conclusion that John had gone there also before 1571. He left no will that is now of record in the courts, and the burial records of Rettendon are lost prior to 1600. It will be seen, however, that Alice died quite "full of years" and directed that she be buried in Rettendon and also named her eldest son as John [died in Thaxted, 1588] and his wife as Dorothy, whose marriage to John is recorded at Thaxted in 1568. The will of Alice was written for her by some competent person of Rettendon as follows:—

Archdeaconry Court of Essex (44 Brewer) Somerset House, London.

12 May 1581, John Lamise and William Edgitt, the exors, named in the will, renounced the execution thereof. (Possibly because the testatrix failed to concentrate her bequests.)

“Unto my sister christianx”—these words in this will we take to refer to her widowed own sister, Christiance or Christine [“Kyrsten”] the wife named in the 1567 will of John Lomesse of Thaxted, the grandfather of the emigrant to America, Joseph Loomis. This evidence makes her husband John, cousin of the other (our) John, who died in 1567; and this is in perfect accord with the church records which, as hereinafter, show Alice’s eldest son John as distinct from the older John, the aforesaid grandfather, whose will of 1567 we append in full; and consequently Christine, the grandmother of Joseph Loomis, like her sister, Alice, was born a Pasfield (a creditable name in Essex) or a Jackson, as per the will of Alice. Moreover, this portrays Thomas Lummys, dying 1551, and William Lommance, dying 1540, (apparently in middle age) in the positions of one as the father to John Lommance of the aforesaid subsidy roll of 1543, with the other the father to John Lommys, the grandfather of Joseph Loomis. The evidence towards determining whether Thomas Lummys or William Lommance was the father of our John is this—(1) William Lummys, the younger, in his will, 1573, says: “My brother John’s three daughters.” These daughters are named in the will of Alice, 1580—whereas our John Lummys had no daughters of record. (2) The separate households of 1551 are distinguished at that date (we may assume that much from the records) by the two different spellings of the surname. There is nothing illogical in the idea that these separate households may have so desired this distinction one from the other, especially for the benefit and better identification of the two Johns. Therefore, on the face of the records, it may be believed that “John Lommance” first noted in 1543, and known brother of the younger William, was the son of the elder William Lommance of 1540 and, by the same token, “John Lummys” first noted in 1567 with son John “Lymace” in 1562, was the son of Thomas “Lummys,” who died 1551. We shall leave it that way.

The will of this John Lummys, grandfather of Joseph, the emigrant:

From the baptisms (subjoined) it is seen that this testator was father of the John "Lymace" baptized in 1562, five years before this will, who, we shall prove, removed to the neighboring town of Braintree, becoming the father of Joseph Lummys, or Loomis, and other children.

The early register of the parish church in Thaxted, variously called St. Mary the Virgin, St. John the Baptist, and St. Lawrence of Thaxted, is a book with parchment leaves, well preserved. The records of marriages and burials, which the book contains are as old as exist in any church in England, viz:—from 1538. There is but one imperfection to break the continuity and completeness of these records from that date to the present time. Within modern years some one has cut out of the baptismal register the pages bearing the entries between 1538 and 1558. This loss is serious to the Lomas inquiry, leaving us, as aforesaid, unable to see quite as clearly as is desired the exact relationships, one to the other, of the earliest known members of Thaxted. All the baptisms, marriages and burials from 1538 to 1600, under the general name of Lomas, however written by the several clerks of this parish, are here beneath reproduced verbatim. The first Lomas item given is that of the baptism of our John "Lymace" whose father's will we have just read. As this document proves that there were other children, they must have been older than John, for their baptisms, not now appearing after the baptism of John, 1562, would have been entered upon the pages that were cut out of this register. One of these children, it is imagined, was the Edward "Lomys" who also appeared in Braintree and Bocking, marrying Alicia Perie in Bocking Church, 2 August, 1593, and had four children there, three of whom died very young, the son William surviving. This name of William again recalls the William of Thaxted, the apparent grand-uncle of John of Braintree. Edward and John are the first persons of their family name of record in Braintree-Bocking.

These church records, when dissected and supplemented by other evidence which they have led up to, reveal the outline of the particular family in which we are interested to be substantially as set forth in the chart on p. 86, which see.

Contemplating the Thaxted evidence as a whole, it is seen that the burials do not indicate the presence there, before 1538, of but three adult Lomases besides the William dying 1540,—viz:—the two females, dying in 1541 and in 1549, and Thomas Lummyus who died in 1551. Therefore it may be accepted that there was not more than one generation, if even that, in Thaxted prior to these names of 1540-1551. A search of the manor Court Rolls of the Honor of Clare, for the sessions held at Thaxted was begun at the year 1420 and continued, voluminously, to 1515. No Lomas was mentioned; no mention was expected. The missing Court-Rolls after 1515 have been referred to. The Lay Subsidies and Fines (agreements in the sale of real estate) have been exhausted. The Proceedings in Chancery, Inquisitions, etc., reveal nothing about the family in Thaxted, or Braintree or Lavenham, in the county of Suffolk. By this it is plain that these Lomases, or Lummyses, kept out of the courts of civil law. The Ancient Deeds yielded nothing after a complete search.

Let us dispose of James Lummys, and his brothers. He did not die in Thaxted,—is known only by the mention in his brother William's will, 1573—"my brother James chylidren." What were the children's names, where they lived (evidently not in Thaxted), what was their father's occupation and where he died, are points not disclosed in the probate records of Essex, Hertfordshire or Suffolk. Casting about over a wider area for a clue, it has been found that a James "Lummas" died in Burton Latimer, Northamptonshire, [about forty-five miles from Thaxted] between the years 1578 and 1589, and that he was the first person of that name there, and the only one in the court records of the county. Two of the Thaxted brothers of the aforesaid James settled in Lavenham, Suffolk—a place noted for its church and numerous dwellings of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. As a carpenter and builder William Lummys came to Lavenham from Thaxted, some twenty-two miles. Upon sight of the oldest of Lavenham's quaint houses the visitor quickly realizes the probability that William, the cousin of John Lummys, or "Lomesse," of Braintree, built some of them. The parish registers here begin in 1558 and contain these entries:

(*Warden)

- "Buryalles A. D. 1562:
Ye xxiith July Joane Dautr. of Richard Lummas."
- "Marriage A. D. 1581:

- "Chrystenings A. D. 1583

The will of William Lummys, the carpenter, requires presentation as it helps to illustrate the "quality" of the family:

Probated 4 April 1589.

William Lommance, dying in Thaxted, 1540, left no will or inventory that is now of record, the same likewise of Thomas who died 1551.

As an apparent freeholder of both house and land, John Lummys, or Lomesse, the grandfather of the emigrant stood very well in his native town of Thaxted; but he died young, seemingly under forty. As has been seen (see top of page 84) his will did not name any of his children, possibly because they were so young.

John "Lomesse" must have been a man of few words, unless much indisposed when he sent for Robert Parker to write his will. Houses with or without "garden plots," in his time, were known by names instead of numbers. Of but few citizens could it be said that they owned house or land. The great majority of houses and the most of the land was manorial and Crown property in Thaxted, as elsewhere, and obtainable only upon lease or rental. John Lummys was thus singularly independent. His property must have been sold as his will directs, if not before, for the family had all disappeared from Thaxted records by about 1600. If we knew how many children were in the family, how many grew up and married, and where they went from Thaxted, then we might answer some queries now not answered. But the veil is drawn, and we probably shall never know.

Thaxted, long since shorn of its commercial prestige, is more interesting than Braintree and the average town. Seven miles from the railways, it slumbers on with scarcely a modern building on its slopes. Upon approaching from the south, the traveller's first view discloses what seems to be a small cathedral city centering in a niche, upon a hill, round about a church,—its roofs tiled and mossy, jumbled and impressive in the sunshine. This view from the southward height promises much of modern import; but the promise is broken when the empty market-place meets the eye. The main streets seem quiet, lonesome and mediaeval, particularly by moonlight. Quaint, irregular houses of two and three stories, some with the front of each floor protruding out over the story beneath, lean forward, or upon each other sideways, as if forlorn over departed days.

Nevertheless, there is one object here, which no other Essex town or city can match—the parish church. It is the “bright particular gem” of the Dunmow-Hundred hills. With timbered roofs scarcely equalled in any country parish in the land, the whole structure is just as pre-eminent in beauty. It is “frozen music,”—the love and worship crystallized, of those who made it and worshipped in it. 'Twas none the less the pride and joy of the Lomases than it has ever been to all, both before their time and up to now. Literally, the possession of God this church was to them, and holy in itself. So fine a church frowns upon a Separatist as an ingrate. This edifice, having been more perfect before 1600 than now, the Loomis visitor will hardly be willing to feel that any of his ancestors ever entered herein with an unwilling heart. There is little likelihood that the first Thomas, or John Lummys the elder, ever raised their voices in discordant protest within or without these chiselled walls. John Lummys's handiwork in wood should be in this church somewhere, even now. The last of the stonework had been finished before his day.

Mute evidence of the royal favor and of the prosperity which once were Thaxted's boon, this church shows to-day a need of repair, both in the hearts of men and in its fabric. The vicar states that the parish is poor and, of itself, unable to “restore” the decayed and falling parts of the building. An appeal has been made to the Essex people, and to lovers of architecture, for contributions, so that the church may continue to be esteemed as the finest of the four hundred and thirty-six churches of that shire.

The manors are now owned by the Countess of Warwick and Guy's Hospital, of Warwick, and by the owner of Horham Hall in Thaxted; whereas in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries Thaxted was chiefly the property of the English Kings and Queens, whose influence embellished the church, now called St. John the Baptist.

This church is of the late Perpendicular style, embattled and supported by wide buttresses, terminating in canopied niches. The building consists of chancel and nave, (each with aisles), south transept, north and south porches, somewhat enriched, and a western tower one hundred and eighty-one feet, including the slender crocketed spire. There are eight bells and a clock. Although the style of the architecture is the Perpendicular, the pillars and arches seem to belong to an earlier date—to Henry III or the beginning of the reign of Edward I, 1270. The vicar says that the south porch was added about 1337; and that the north transept and north aisle were built more than one hundred years later. The chancel was the gift of Edward IV. The paintings in the north aisle are of the same period—1461-1483. Entering by the south porch the font, at which the Lomases were baptized, is just inside. This was its position because a baptism being a formal recognition of the individual, the ceremony was performed near the door, and as marking the entrance, spiritually, of the subject into the church. This font is of stone, covered over the top with a spire-like hood of oak, old, costly and carved intricately. The choir stalls, that anciently added more of the beauty of carved oak, have disappeared, save a few portions to be seen in the screen enclosing the tower arch. Fixed on the east wall and north porch are carvings of the Crucifixion. There is a crypt under the chancel, without evidences of embracing interments. The corbels of the nave are chaste and happy in design. A celatura [hood] in the Lady chapel is curious and rare. In the end of the north aisle is the Thomas á Becket chapel. There are no pews, the six hundred sittings being of small chairs, as in a cathedral. Coats-of-arms are carved upon the beams of the ceiling—none having reference to the Lomas family. The stone floor of the church includes some gravestones, none old enough, however, to be in memory of any Lomas. Unhappily the same absence is noted in the burial yard without, though two generations of the family were certainly buried in this ground. Words "in memoriam" should be etched in brass, and the plate affixed to the wall indoors, if permanency is desired,—or better, wrought in a window of stained glass.

The various forms in which the general name of Lomas appears, in the Thaxted church records, have been set forth, showing how the name appears several times as "Lammas" and "Lamas." This form is the name of another family than Lomas altogether and one not of the del Lumhalgh origin at all. The ecclesiastical scribes of Essex were familiar with the word Lammas before any Lomas appeared therein. They sadly confounded the two names, the similar pronunciation being deceptive indeed; and as it has been advanced that the name of Lomas or Loomis might have derived from Lammas [pronounced Lummas] it is advisable to disprove that idea.

Lammas (laé-más) Hlaf, Hlammoesse, Lammasse, Lammesse, Lamasse, Lamese, Lambmes, Lammes, Lamas, Lambmass; "Hlaf" meaning bread, Loaf i moesse—meaning Mass; afterwards popularly apprehended as if Lamb-Mass.

The 1st day of August in the early English church was observed as a harvest festival, at which loaves of bread were consecrated, made from the first ripe corn. Lammas also meant the part of the year marked by this festival. The writings of King Alfred referred to—hlafmoesse; thus showing the word long before the beginning of surnames. The old English chronicles mention Lammasse. Tennyson also used it in the same meaning; "A voice ran round the hills When corny Lammas bound the sheaves." "Latter Lammas" was referred to as a day that will never come; used humorously for "Never." In 369 "Claudius began to reign in Lammesse." Lammas lands were those on which crops had been reaped, after which they were subject to common rights of pasturage until the spring. Lammas-apple, assize, eve, feast, month, night, tide and time—also Lammas land, Lammas field, mead, meadow-ground were common expressions. This is all gathered from various standard dictionaries, as it helps to confirm what record-investigations show, i. e., that the name Lammas, if considered as a variant of Loomis, had no reference to anything of an ecclesiastical origin. As to the parish of Lammas in Norfolk, a Lammas family did originate therein and did develop, at large, into a considerable family before 1540. We have made a thorough investigation of this family to determine if at any time before 1600, in any place whatever, this name became written (in the first syllable)—Lom instead of Lam, (and in the second syllable), mis, mys, or mus, instead of mas or mes. No such instance occurs. The name is always distinct from its earliest times; it is never found corrupted into anything that could be accepted or mistaken for Loomis, Lomas, or any other name. Moreover, Lammas has almost no variant at all; the only other spellings were "Lam-masse," "Lamas," and "Lammesse." It is only fair to quote some specimens of the evidence and so allow any investigator to contemplate the remarkable features of the entries of the Loomis family in the Thaxted registers.

The Norfolk town of Lammas or (La Mers) "on the marsh," took its name from its situation on the Marsh, the churchyard being washed by the river Bure. In the Domesday Book it is called "Lamers." The Lammas family took its name from the town and soon after appeared in London.

Year 1292, Hundred Rolls Vol I. p. 417. City of London—(translation) "Verdict of the twelve jurors of the ward of John Horn. They say (inter alia) that Richard Lammesse, Ralph le Fruter, Peter Cosin * * * * (and a number of others) all of London, and a number of foreigners, have taken wool to parts beyond the seas, but they do not know where nor to whom they were sold, nor what they received for the same. We believe that it was by the King's warrant, and that they traded with the Flemish."

The next item is a fine illustration of the relations existing between landlord and tenant, at this time, as referred to on p. 72, hence it is worthy of being translated and quoted in full:—

Year 1272, Hundred Rolls. II. p. 461. Cambridgeshire:—(Translation.)

"In a sworn return made as to Stanton in this county, the jury return that (among other copyholders) Richard Lammasse holds in villenage in Stanton 5 acres of land and meadow from Nicholas de Cheney, paying him 3s. yearly for the same. Also Richard will plough every Friday from Michaelmas to Christmas 1 ridge, and each work is worth 1d. Item, he will drive to the lord's hall all the sheep he has from Michaelmas to Christmas, value (of this service) unknown; Item, he will thresh at Michaelmas in his lord's barn one trave of corn, worth ½d.; Item, he will harrow for one day with one horse at the winter sowing, worth ½d. Item, at Christmas he will give to his said lord one hen, worth 1d½; Item, he will plough one ridge every Friday from the Feast of the Purification to Easter, each work worth 1d.; Item, he will harrow for one day with one horse at the Lent sowing, worth ½d., and at Easter he will give his lord 10 eggs worth 1d. Item, he will plough one ridge every Friday from Hokeday to the Nativity of St. John the Baptist, and each work is worth 1d. Item, he will hoe the lord's corn for one day with one man, the work being worth ¾d. Item, he will mow, turn, cock, and carry the lord's grass. Item, he will reap his lord's corn for four days with two men all day, food supplied on two days by the lord, and not supplied on two days, and on the food days each man will receive for his food bread worth ½d., and for his meal worth ½d., to wit, on one day fish and cheese without ale and on the other day bread and meat and cheese with ale; and these works are worth 8d. Item, he will carry his lord's corn for one day he himself with one of his associates, with one cart, receiving sufficient food from the lord, and this is worth 1d. Item, he will work when he may be called upon, provided he is able to return to his dinner. Item, in return for these works, he with his eleven associates will receive from the lord one quarter of corn and one sheep worth 12d., and half an acre of meadow called Denhalvaker."

An offshoot of this family in Stanton is later found in the nearby city of Cambridge; also in Ware, Herts.

The next item illustrates also the care taken to prevent merchandise exported from England from being purchasable by a nation with which England was then at war:—

- Year 1350. Patent Roll. 3 Edward VI. Part 2, rot 34, 19:—(Translation) For William Lammas, Pardon for defending himself. The King to all his Bailiffs and faithful subjects to whom etc. Greeting. Whereas we have understood by the record of James Fletcher and John Rust, our coroners in the county of Cambridge and in the liberty of the town of Cambridge, upon view of the body of William Stokedall, late of Cambridge in the county of Cambridge, "cooke," lying dead there, that on the fifth day of July in the second year of our reign, about the fifth hour of the afternoon of the same day, the said William Stokedale and one William Lammas of Cambridge aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, "cooke," were in the kitchen of Queen's College in Cambridge aforesaid preparing supper for their masters, and because the said William Lammas reproved the said William Stokedale for not duly performing his office, the said William Stokedale made an attack on the aforesaid William Lammas with a stick called "a basting styke," which he was then holding in his hands, whereupon the same William Lammas ran away from the aforesaid William Stokedale as far as he could, viz: to the wall of the said kitchen, beyond which he could not get, and the said William Stokedale pursued the aforesaid William Lammas furiously up to the wall, and drew blood from him, with intent to slay him, wherefore the said William Lammas then and there, being obliged to defend himself, on the said day, year and hour, struck the said William Stokedale on the left side of his head, with a stick worth 1d. which he was then holding in his hands, there and then giving him a mortal wound one inch in breadth, of which wound the said William Stokedale at Cambridge aforesaid languished from the said fifth day of July until the seventh day of the same month then next following, and then died there, and that this said William Lammas on the said fifth day of July in the year aforesaid killed the aforesaid William Stokedale at Cambridge aforesaid in the county aforesaid and in the liberty of the town of Cambridge in his own defence and for the preservation of his life, and not otherwise, and not feloniously nor or his malice aforethought, as by the tenor of the record aforesaid, which we have caused to come before us in our Chancery, fully appears. And whereas the same William Lammas surrendered himself in our prison of the Marshalsea before us for this reason, and remained therein, as was certified to us by our well-beloved and faithful Sir Richard Lyster, knight, our chief justice assigned to hold pleas before us, by our command, We, moved by pity, do pardon the same William Lammas the suit of our peace which belongs to us against the same William Lammas for the death aforesaid and grant him our firm peace therein. Provided nevertheless that he shall stand to judgment in our court if any one shall wish to implead him for the death aforesaid. In witness whereof etc. Witness the King at Westminster on the 30th day of January.

Year 1612. Blomefield's Norfolk II 345. Thomas Lammas, rector of Scoulton, Norfolk 1612.

(It was with regret that the present writer was obliged to reject this interesting evidence as not having any direct relation to the men who were of the branch of the Lomas family with which this article is chiefly concerned).

It is already known, of official evidence, that the "Joseph Lummys" ("Lommys"), who resided in the town and parish of Braintree in Essex, England, left that place in the spring of the year of 1638; also, that without any appreciable delay thereafter, he became a passenger of record in a vessel of goodly register, known as the "Susan and Ellen," and that this vessel did depart on the eleventh day in the month of April, of that year, from the port of London, bound for Boston in New England, carrying quite a number of other voyagers with their personal properties.

In this connection it is the writer's duty to deal with facts that have not been made manifest hitherto—with respect to the scenes and circumstances amid which he lived, and as well, to the elements contributing chiefly to his taking leave of England. Thereunto let attention first be directed to the ways and the means by which Joseph Lummys, with his family and worldly goods, had "come up to London" from Braintree. By the sworn deposition, or affidavit, of one Joseph Hills of Charlestown, in the Massachusetts Bay Colony (see herein page 21), made thereat on the 30th day of July, 1639, he, (Hills) being the "undertaker"—the manager or promoter of this particular vessel, voyage or emigration—it is learned that the various parcels embracing the goods of Joseph Loomis (we shall principally refer to him as Loomis hereinafter) were "transported from Malden, in the county of Essex, to London, in an Ipswich hye." This place of "Malden" being Maldon, the Essex port, and an "Ipswich hye" meaning a smart craft of small size and especially engaged, we may retrace the journey of the said Loomis, his family and friends, from London, viz: down the Thames, up the Essex coast, across the Maplin and Foulness Sands, into the wide and long reach of the mouth of the river Blackwater, and continuing thence up the river some ten miles, and so, back to Maldon. This small port was one through which there long had passed commerce and people between England and the Continent. That Joseph Loomis and family attended personally the transportation, from Maldon in this hye, of their eleven separate and varying pieces of baggage and "divers other goods," which the above-noted deposition recounts, may well be believed. The inland Blackwater river, though but a very small stream of only a few feet in width, reaches northwestward from Maldon, to and past "Six Bells Corner" in the end of Bocking parish, by Braintree. But by so devious a route does it flow, that Joseph Loomis, in his journey seaward, only followed it in its lower half, viz: from Witham to Maldon. The "River Brain,"—a mere brook—lightly slips down direct from the southern slope of Braintree to Witham, there uniting with the Blackwater. So it was that the emigrants came out of Braintree by the pleasant highway, paralleling the Brain. They passed through Black Notley, White Notley and Faulkbourne,—all sparse hamlets strung along the gently undulating road, above the stream, yet each little settlement with its handy inn. Thus was reached Witham, then on the great Roman road between London and the northeast. Thence out of Witham, they followed the course of the Blackwater by Wickham Place, through Langford and Heybridge to Maldon. Some fifteen miles in all from Braintree it was, and over a favorite route for bicyclists nowadays. Alternating copses and fields, freshly furrowed for the seed-sowing, marked the way between the snug hamlets and the occasional houses plastered in white or yellow beneath their low-browed roofs of thatch. Some of these houses still exist along the way, and pretty much the same sort of people as of yore still abide in them.

This longest way around, of 100 miles to London, may have been both an easier and a quicker progress than by the forty miles of the shortest highway thereto, by the way of Chelmsford. It should have been less costly a journey than that which necessitated frequent stops at taverns for rest and refreshment. Very well-ordered seems to have been the Loomis's departure. Many a stop was made at gate and door, in those familiar fifteen miles, to give and receive blessings and farewells—the last of earth—repeating what had but just happened in Braintree church and market-place.

Braintree scarce could afford to lose such a citizen as Joseph Loomis; but America needed him more, and he knew it. Just that same need was exactly why he went away. Verily, it was not merely religion, not all prospect of gain, not great dissatisfaction with home,—not any one of these things that chiefly moved him to arise and go to set himself down three thousand miles from the ease of home. Broader than any of these causes was the reason. To help found a new country, with fairer laws and wider liberties, where the ordinary man might be more supreme—that was the Great Idea that possessed him, and many others. As of the non-conformist faction out of the church of England they wanted to dominate the church at home, which power they could not quite attain to there. But deeper than that desire in the breast of Joseph Loomis was the spirit that moved him. He felt himself equal to the task that other men had set. The challenge of their example stirred him. The appeal of Opportunity decided him. It convinced his mind that he was one of "the chosen" for the Great Purpose. And the apparently unlimited possibilities, to him and his, of the natural resources of an unclaimed land, hovered in his imagination. He had all the money that he would require to pleasantly establish his family in America. Let us dismiss, as being insufficient, the idea of "a band of Christians fleeing from persecution"—save with respect to the Mayflower's Pilgrims mostly. To the so-called Puritan settlers, the comforts of religion were vastly more of a necessity and more relished in the New than they had been to them in the Old England. Daily spiritual refreshment kept them to their hard tasks, soothed the longing for a return to the beautiful land they had forsaken, and, in fact, the church was the keystone that held up the arch of the early colonization.

On the point of persecution in England, the writer would like to add the words of a deceased American who was an expert student of English records and history of the seventeenth century, because actual and severe persecution had pretty much died out in Essex before 1632:—

"It is a mistaken notion, although the one usually received, that the early New England settlers were all, or even generally, men properly classed under the denomination of Puritans; and the stereotyped declaration in secular and religious American histories, that the continent was first settled exclusively by bands of men fleeing from severe and unrighteous persecution, and enforced to seek a new home where they might enjoy unmolested their freedom of conscience, etc., is one that involves both an absurdity and a falsehood, and ought at once to be expunged from the record. That many, perhaps most, of the early emigrants were non-conformists, to a greater or less extent, is doubtless true, and that some of them desired a larger liberty of speech than was then permitted them in England may also be admitted; but beyond this, there is no foundation for the frightful picture so persistently presented to the mind of the young American student, whether he stands in his pinafore at the knee of his village school-mistress, or pores over the ponderous volumes of American history at the University. At the risk of being charged with heterodoxy, and a want of patriotism, I venture the assertion, after protracted researches into the family history in England of the earlier settlers, that not one half their number left England on account of religious persecution, or were men and women who could justly be termed puritanic in their notions. The simple fact is that the first colony was composed—as all colonies ever since have been—of a heterogenous admixture of very good people and very bad; with still another, and perhaps, larger class than either of the others, that may be described as neither the one nor the other, but simply indifferent. That the good predominated over the bad is a matter of history; and it is greatly to the credit of the early rulers of the colonies that they were able, from such rude and antagonistic materials to lay the foundation of a nation that has proved so great as it has.

Speaking particularly of the early emigrants from Essex, it is unquestionably true that a large portion of them were actuated by a desire for more religious latitude than they then enjoyed at home; but there was still another and equally large class, for whose motives there may be entertained a respect quite as sincere, and for whose character a reverence quite as profound. These were men in the humbler walks of life, whose circumstances were moderate, whose families were large, and who foresaw, in remaining at home, only a perpetual struggle for existence, without the prospect or hope of elevating their offspring above the level of their own lives. To such men as these the New World opened a vista of positive enchantment. The farmer, tilling laboriously land not his own, and certain only of the conventional six feet of soil, where his own bones would at last be laid, believed that there, after a little season of toil and hardship, and perhaps even of extreme suffering, he would be able to stand under the shelter of his own vine and fig-tree, call broad acres of wood and meadow his own and then, having distributed his possessions, and seen his sons and daughters comfortably settled in life, lay down calmly, satisfied that he had fulfilled his duties as a parent and a citizen.—Col. John L. Chester.

Joseph Loomis was not one of these unfortunate yet ambitious farmers. His wife was the daughter of a man considered as very well-to-do in that time and region; a man whose testamentary bequests of money alone were upwards of fourteen thousand dollars (present reckoning). Loomis is known to have been a woolen draper, a merchant engaged in the purchase of cloth from the many weavers who wove on hand-loom in their cottage-homes. He had a store in Braintree stocked therewith and with other goods which a "draper" dealt in. These products, he sold at large, both wholesale and retail, to tailors and consumers in general: Braintree and nearby towns were centres of cloth manufacture. (The methods of weaving then in vogue are described by S. Baring-Gould).

The scope of the cloth business of Joseph Loomis probably was not confined to Essex, as most of that product was disposed of in a foreign market. The Flemish people are referred to as having "respected wooolsacks much more than Englishmen," and so the weavers of Flanders were induced to settle in England by Edward III, to teach a better style of weaving. Many more of these cloth-makers came into Essex in the latter part of the sixteenth century, settling not far from Braintree in 1570. They influenced the methods and stimulated that manufacture roundabout. Braintree and Bocking were then prominent cloth centres. Norden, the Essex historian, wrote in 1594: "There are within this shire these especial clothing towns: Colchester, Brayntree, Coggeshall, Bocking, Hawsted (Halstead) and Dedham"; and, in an Act passed under Elizabeth, Bocking is referred to, with other places, as a "fayre large Towne * * * * inhabited of a long time with Clothe makers which have made and daylye doo make good and trewe clothe." Later, when Parliament contemplated placing a duty upon Portuguese wines, the cloth makers and dealers sent in a petition to Parliament, objecting thereto,—saying "As our Bays, Says, Perpetuanos, etc., go Nine Tenths of them to Portugal and Spain, if a new Imposition be laid upon wines, the King of Portugal (we cannot but reasonably expect) will then prohibit our Manufactures, * * * * which will prove fatal to us as the Stagnation of the Blood. It will totally destroy the woollen Manufactory of Essex for 50 or 60,000 Families as Spinsters, Weavers and Combers, who are employed therein, etc." Norden also mentions the kinds of cloth. Perpetuanos or "lastings" were a kind of serge; Say was a light crossed stuff, all wool, and Bay was a fine woollen texture with a long nap, a specimen of which is preserved in the Museum at Colchester in Essex. Woollen drugget, or baize, was made in Bocking, and became known as "Bockings."

"John Lummys," the father, and tailor, is shown by his will, dated 1619, to have been a tradesman and real-estate holder in comfortable circumstances, and a citizen of esteem in the church and community. His son Joseph advanced the fortune of the family. Contemplating his means and position in England, and his situation in America, it seems entirely fair to say that he was a prosperous man in England, and of the better class of settlers in New England. Long it has been seen that he was independent in Windsor—and particularly so as to the location of his estate there.

Not driven out of England, not forsaking duties or obligations there, not an enthusiast or Puritanical extremist in religion was Joseph Loomis. He came to America on general principles, after long deliberation. As a practical business man of the world his decision so to do, it will be now agreed, was the apotheosis of wisdom. A study of his life in America prys up no indication that he regretted his transplantation, as did many other settlers, with cause.

No indications of any connection, either remote or near, with any titled, landed or armigerous family, of the Loomis surname in England, have been found, nor is such ever likely to be found. The brave Englishmen who took their very lives in their hands and faced with dauntless courage all the certain dangers and uncertain terrors of the sea and of a hostile shore—aye and brave Englishwomen, too, whose sublime devotion has never since been paralleled, and to which all justice has never yet been done, were not, it is plain to see, of what is claimed as "gentle blood."

Indeed, well it was that they were of sterner mould!

"It is enough to know that the primitive aristocracy of New England was an aristocracy of intellect consecrated to duty, and not of blood: that her peerage and her knighthood were honors direct from the creative hand of God, and not from the touch of a monarch."

Joseph Loomis, John Loomis, the father, "John Lummys," the grandparent, and all of the known men of their family before them, and practically all of the numerous persons found under all forms of the name of Loomis in England, of all times, were of that great middle-class, which may be summed up in the word "yeomen," though some of them wrote themselves down as gentlemen; the only indication of any other prefix or affix is in the person of the Vicar of Surlingham, Norfolk, who wrote his name, "Sr Richard Lumhalx," in 1510. As in the days of the Saxons, when the Lomasas were "neither men of title, nor serviles," so ever since in England, they have maintained the position of "men of property, freemen," merchants, yeomen,—albeit gentlemen, as the word is understood in America. The significance of this word of yeoman may not be quite fully appreciated in America. No misapprehension should be had as to its breadth and value. Let us look at it technically and as anciently applied:—

"The antiquity and consequence of the family of Septuans in Kent (now extinct) is well known in that county. Their pedigree is entered in all the Visitations of Kent from 1530; yet Raymond Septuans, alias Harflete, in possession of the ancient family estate at Ash, in the reign of Henry III (1216-1272), is styled in a deed 'yeoman.'

"So the family of Abkettleby, recorded in the Visitation of the County of Lancaster 1619—John Neale of Abkettleby styles himself in his will, 1606—'yeoman'—though his mother was a Brabazon of honorable descent, sister of the celebrated Sir Wm. Brabazon, vice-treasurer of Ireland, father of Lord Ardell and grandfather of the first Earl of Meath." (From Streatfield MS. in Additional MSS., 33919. fo. 326, British Museum.)

"In a ten-generation pedigree of a Suffolk family, the same persons are sometimes styled 'gentleman,' sometimes 'yeoman,' sometimes 'farmer.' The term 'gentleman' is correct wherever applied, if the family be one having coat-armour." (From the East Anglian.)

"The father of Latimer (Bishop of Worcester 1490-1555) was a solid English yeoman. He had no lands of his own, but rented a farm of four pounds by the year on which he tilled so much as kept half-a-dozen men, four hundred sheep and thirty cows." (From Froude's History of England, Vol. II.)

"* * * the yeomanry or small freeholders and farmers, a very numerous and respectable body, some occupying their own estates, some those of landlords." (From Hallam's Constitutional History of England, Vol. I.)

"* * * the yeomanry, an eminently manly race, * * * formed a much more important part than at present." (Thomas Babington Macaulay.)

"The titles ascribed to individuals in various records do not absolutely mark the status held by the person in society, but rather denote the positions which the scribe considered were held by those of whom he was writing. In the military assessment for the Blything Hundred, Suffolk, 1642, twenty-seven persons in the village of Henstead are styled 'fearmors' (farmers). Even the vicar is so called because he farmed his own glebe.

"Yeoman' denotes vocation and possession." (From the East Anglian, Vol. VIII.)

By a statute of Henry IV it was "enacted that no yeoman shall take or wear a livery of any lord, upon pain of imprisonment and a fine at the King's pleasure." So the dignity of a yeoman's position was not to be thus lowered even by a yeoman himself.

Shakespeare was of yeoman ancestry, and in the First Part of Henry VI, Act II, Sc. 4, he pays respect to yeomanry:—Somerset taunts at Richard Plantagenet—

"We grace the yeoman, by conversing with him."

Warwick corrects him:—

"Now, by God's will, thou wrongs't him, Somerset;
His grandfather was Lionel, duke of Clarence,
Third son to the third Edward, king of England.
Spring crestless yeoman from so deep a root?"

Nothing concerning John Lummys, the father of Joseph, has been known heretofore other than that, as a tailor, he died in Braintree in the year 1619, leaving a will, which is interesting.

The Will of John Loomis of Braintree, England

(The name is spelled Loomis)

It is dated April 14, 1619; was exhibited in the Court of the Commissary of the Bishop of London for the counties of Essex and Hertford on the 29th of May following, and was proved by the executor, his son Joseph, June 21st. The following is a copy of the will verbatim. The words within brackets supply portions where the paper of the original manuscript is torn away, and they are believed to be the words of the original document:

It names wife Agnes, son Joseph, and daughters Ann, Sara, Elizabeth and Jane. Perhaps there was also a son, Geoffrey. These five children had all married by this date of 1619, and had done so when quite young in years.

As to this Geoffrey Lummys, there is no record of him in the court rolls or subsidies for Braintree, or Thaxted, nor for the Hundreds of Hinckford and Dunmow. He was also a clothier and must be considered as a brother of Joseph Loomis, even though there is no extant record of the baptism of either man. Geoffrey Lummys figures in Close Roll, number 2580, part I, for the 22 year of James I (1624) filed in the Record Office, London, as per this abstract:—

Indenture, 16 April 20 James I, between Ezekiel Clarke of ffelsted, Essex, clothier, and Jeffrey Loomys of Brayntree, Essex, clothier, the same being a mortgage deed for £10, with 10 shillings interest, loaned by Jeffrey Loomys on one messuage and tenement with a garden and overcrofte of land adjoining called Baseleyes tente (tenement) in ffelsted church, between the king's highwaie there leading from ffelsted church towards Hartford Bridge, and a field called sixteene acres with their appertances which the said Ezekiel Clarke late had to him and his heires by the grante and ffeoffements of Mary Clarke widowe, his mother by reason of the decease of the said Mary as by deeds of ffeofement thereof made the Seaventh day of August 15th of James I.

John Lummys, the father, as will be proven shortly, had come to Braintree, from his birth-place, when a young man and unmarried. Ere this narration should take the reader away from Braintree over the road to the town of Thaxted aforesaid wherein John Lummys was born, much needs be related of Braintree and vicinity. This information may be taken up under these four heads:—

- (1) A reference to the Lingwood family.
- (2) Some description of the town and market-place.
- (3) Non-conformity in Braintree.
- (4) Notes on the parish church and graveyard.

By the marriage of Joseph Loomis to Mary White (of which more anon) in Shalford Church, or through his father's marriage, he became a "cousin" (meaning either a cousin or a nephew in this instance) of one William Lingwood of Braintree. That fact is evidenced by a letter written by this gentleman, in the year 1651, to "Cousin Clark," of Hartford, Conn., which letter was that of a lawyer and upon a business subject. (This letter suggests a relationship between the Clarkes of Felsted and the Lummyses as well). William Lingwood was of a very good family indeed; one that was both armigerous and "landed." The Lingwoods were recognized by the heralds in the Visitation of Essex in 1634, at which date this William Lingwood was contemporaneous with Joseph Loomis. The family is also honored with mention in Morant's and other histories of Essex. From these authorities it appears that this family may be summarized as:—

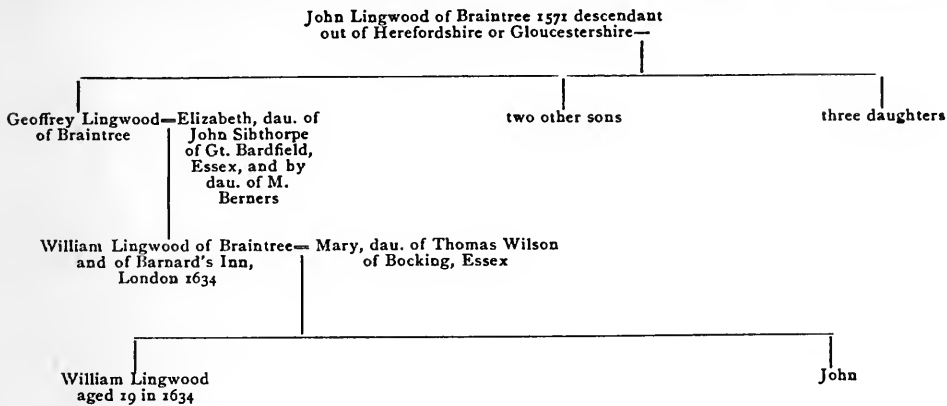

*Shalford Parish Church,
in which Joseph Loomis and Mary White were married, 1614. Robert White and Bridget Algar were married here also.*

Interior view of same church.

In Stisted Church, three miles from Braintree, there is a monument to Elizabeth, wife of William Lingwood, died 1719.

Just how Lingwood and Loomis became "cousins" does not appear. The Braintree church records are lost, and the Bocking records reveal only a part of the Wilsons, notably the above Thomas Wilson, Gentleman, who died 1627. Elizabeth Wilson, daughter of William Wilson, also of Bocking, had married John Goodwin, 1604, in Bocking Church. The church records at Stisted, where some of the Lingwoods lived, have not been examined. Thomas Wilson having been buried in Braintree Church, though residing over the Bocking line, the names of all of his children and of his father's family were recorded among the now lost church registers. When John Lummys came to Braintree he may have married into the Wilson or Lingwood families. Geoffrey Lingwood had two sisters; and when it is considered that Geoffrey Lummys (whose estate was administered, 1636, by John Lunt, the apprentice or successor to John Loomis) was probably a son of John Loomis, though not mentioned in the will, it is easy to believe that this Geoffrey was named after Geoffrey Lingwood, whose son William called Joseph Loomis "cousin." Elizabeth Sibthorpe, who married Geoffrey Lingwood, came to Braintree from Great Bardfield. This town closely adjoins Thaxted, from where John Lummys came to Braintree via Great Bardfield. It is to be expected that this John married a Lingwood or a Wilson in Braintree Church. The records of this church before 1660, were mostly used by the sexton for lighting the furnace fires. This destruction was confessed by the culprit to the present vicar.

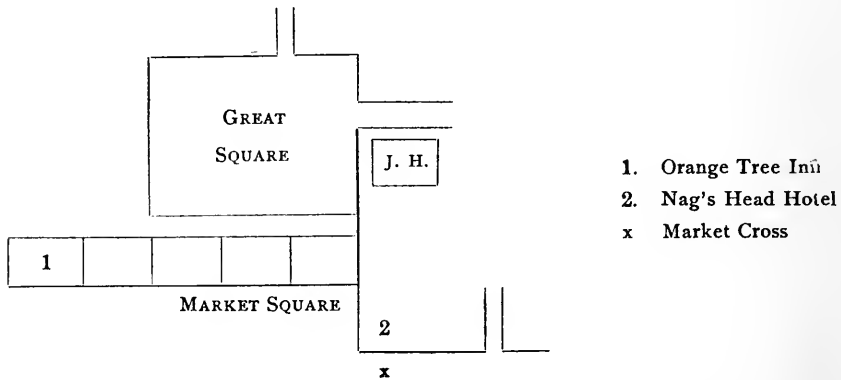

In Braintree town and market-place but little of the antique still exists. The external aspect of the main streets is wholly modern. Relics of two hundred and seventy years ago must be searched out. Prosperity seems to hover most everywhere in this town huddled on a hill that is low and flat-topped. The historian Wright states that before 1530 "The vast crowds of pilgrims going to the shrines of St. Edmund (Suffolk) and our lady of Walsingham (Norfolk) proved a source of emolument to this place, which rapidly increased in population and importance." These shrines were like the modern Lourdes—having relics believed to possess the power of healing, etc.

Thousands of Roman coins and some Roman pottery have been dug up in Braintree and Bocking. With Bocking, the population is now about ten thousand. 'Tis a clear and healthful place of residence. The feudal town "suffered the penalty of prosperity." Only a few of the buildings of the "golden age" of architecture remain; even these are mostly altered. Internally many houses reveal old carving and mantel pieces of oak. The old inns seem to have been the most favored of Time, the destroyer. "The Boar's Head," "The Six Bells," "The White Hart," "The Horn," "The George," "The Wheatsheaf," "The Woolpack" and "The Black Boy," all show evidence of age. Above all there is one fine old house remaining which has very particular interest to the American Loomises. This is the house that was occupied by John Hawkins who, when about to die in 1633, had Joseph Loomis visit him to witness his will. As this will pays to Joseph Loomis the tribute of the words "my loving friend and neighbor," it now may be well believed that Joseph Loomis was more than just this friend and neighbor in Braintree. The proof that he was an eminently prosperous man, and an intelligent one, enjoying social privileges of distinction, locally, is here had in plenty to our view—for who was this John Hawkins? He was no less than a Braintree man, who had risen to commercial eminence and wealth in London, becoming a dignitary of the Grocers' Company there, (then three hundred years old); and he was made an Alderman of the city of London in 1626. This office was then of more significance than it is to-day in America. The house of John Hawkins now faces "Great Square;" a view is given of its garden front. With wealth he built or bought this fine home in Braintree and laid out a beautiful garden behind it. The street front has been remodelled for a large store. The alterations have caused the Tudor mantelpiece of stone, bearing the Arms of the Grocers' Company in one of the spandrels, to be removed,—and also some valuable oak carving. Ornamental ceilings of plaster in the Italian style still remain. Hawkins's place of burial, in the chancel of the church, also indicates his importance. A mural monument is there inscribed to his memory.

It is not merely such things as that Hawkins and Loomis were friends, or that the latter probably was a bearer at the funeral, with which we are the most impressed. The great facts that issue out of the association of these two gentlemen are these:—

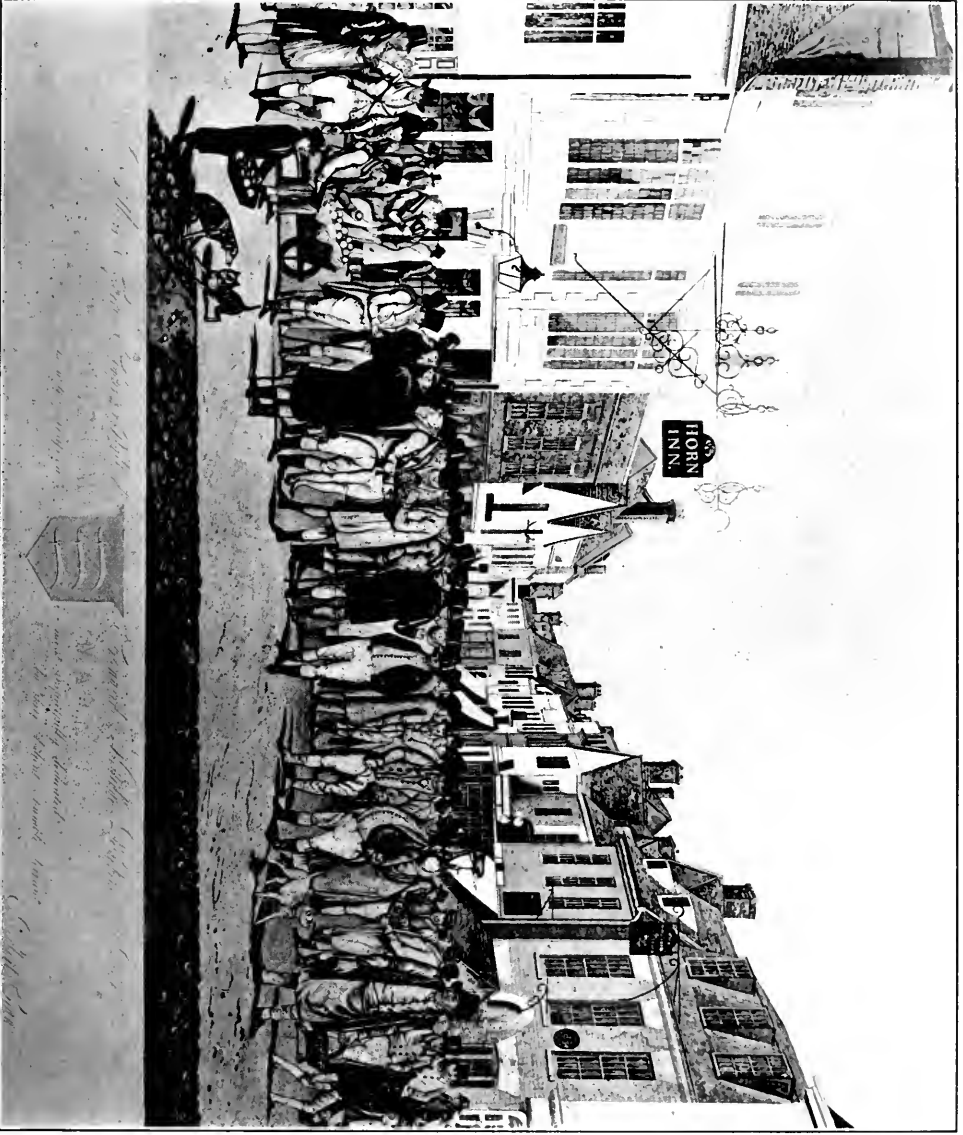

First—May it not be held that a neighbor who is called to witness a will, in the sick chamber, is apt to be one who resides close by? Second—The house of Hawkins stands on the upper side of the market-square, facing west. Some of the property of John Lummys, as his will shows, stood "near the market-cross." This cross is just below the Hawkins house on the south, viz:

Between the corner nearest the market-cross and the Hawkins house there are a couple of good-sized structures; one an old house modernized, while the other is entirely new, but surely replacing some former building. The upper building adjoins the Hawkins house, but has no old features now. The rear of the house is shown slightly, in the picture of the Hawkins place. Like the latter, the other house has a garden extending from the rear eastward, and adjoining the Hawkins garden; but unlike the still open latter, its garden has been built upon modernly. Significant also it is that there was no drive-way, or outlet, from the garden eastwardly, but rather to the south, and thus opening directly out into the square close to where the market cross stood. Now, therefore, one is easily led to conceive that the residential and business premises of Joseph Loomis were between what is now the Nag's Head Hotel and the Orange Tree Inn, and that the other house which John Lummys owned and had rented to John Lunt, his apprentice or successor in the tailoring business stood adjacent. Such locations would have been satisfactory for the vocations of these residents, and business was generally then and still is carried on in the first floor of the houses, while the proprietor resides upstairs. Braintree's business center clusters about the upper side of this square. The modern growth has added stores along the two streets leading westward and northeast from the square or market-place.

Braintree Market Place, England. 16th century.

Issuing out of the square, directly to the north of the Hawkins house, is what is called "Little Square," with narrow, crooked passages leading into it between the buildings. Most of these houses are old and residential. Several of them date from 1600, perhaps older. A photograph shows the corner of one of them with a glimpse of its overhanging front facing the "Gant," or "Gant-way," which name means a thin, slender or narrow foot-way.

Braintree was a part of the Duchy of Lancaster; part of these personal possessions of the sovereign, in Essex, were held of the crown as of the Honor of Clare, by the family seated principally at Clare Castle in the County of Suffolk. A search of the Court Rolls of the Honor of Clare now filed with the Records of the Duchy of Lancaster, in London, has not resulted favorably. The "Book of Reliefs and Fines," number 124,862, from 1377 to 1742, made up from various records remaining in Clare Castle and the Duchy office, does not contain the name of Lomas in any form, which seems peculiar, since every person upon first entering into the occupancy of a building, for the purpose of residence or of business, became subject to a "fine," or tax. This book is fragmentary, in the earlier portion, and also may be from 1600 to 1638, as seems evident. Court Roll 123-1860 (5 Nov. 1591 to 1605) for Braintree names no Lomas, which omission may be taken to indicate that John Lummys, father of Joseph, may have been within this period, in the employ of another man and resident upon that man's premises. The Court Rolls of the Duchy, numbers 123-1860, and 123-1861 for Braintree, give no Lomas evidence, though the Goodwins, with which family the Lomas later became intimately related, are mentioned, viz:

Rentals of the Manor of Markes in Braintree. Philip and Mary, 1st and 2 years (1553-54)

Itm of Mr. Goodinge for iii shoppes in the m^rkett place in B (Braintree) sometyne Jo Turnor undr Mr. Ponder, iiid.

Feet of Fines, the governmental records of the final agreements between querants and deforciantes (buyers and sellers) of real estate, have been searched for the entire period of the residence of the Lomas family in Essex; there is no such record of such Loomis ownership. The lands, houses, business premises, etc., in their occupation were principally held by them (with the possible exception of the house of John Lummys in Thaxted, grandfather of Joseph Loomis), under conditions similar to those of their neighbors, i. e.—by lease for life, or for the period of several lives, or for a lesser term of years, or by yearly rental. They owned the right of occupancy, and could bequeath this right by will; the land and buildings were held by the lord of the manor to whose court leet they, the lessees and tenants were subject, and the lord, in turn, paid a yearly revenue into the Honor of Clare or the Duchy of Lancaster therefor, the first title to the property being vested in the crown.

The Lay Subsidy records in the Record Office, London, which yielded vital results in Lancashire, as has been seen, also favor us a little in Braintree. The first mention in these national taxes of a Lomas occurs in roll number 112-626 for the third and fourth years of Charles I (1628-29). This roll is an assessment upon the taxable inhabitants of the whole Hundred of Hinckford in which Braintree is embraced; the membranes composing this roll are in a fine condition. The subsidy was levied upon goods ("stock in trade") as follows:—

"Brantry.	John Hawkins gent.	viii	li—xxi	s	iiii	d"
"	"Wm. Lingwood gent.	iii	li—viii	s"
"	"Josiph Lomys	iii	li—viii	s"

Subsidy Roll number 112-630 is headed:—

"Payment of the two first subsidies of five entire subsidies granted from the Temporality by Act of Parliament holden at Westminster 4 Chas. I." (1624); and gives:
 Braintree "Goodes," "Joseph Lomays iii li viii^s—viii^s
 John Hawkins vi li xvi^s (xvi^s)

These are the only subsidy rolls now remaining bearing the name of Loomis before 1640; John Lummys may have been similarly taxed, and the roll therefore be now missing; the above items are scant, but brief as they may seem, the figures are eloquent. First it is seen that Joseph Loomis was thoroughly established as a merchant in 1628 in Braintree, and doubtless had so stood for some years before; second, we see herein that the taxable value of his goods—in comparison with those of his friend, the wealthy John Hawkins, (probably then the richest merchant in Braintree), was as large as one-half; also that he was estimated exactly the same as his relative, Wm. Lingwood, whose means and position (inherited) gave to him the rank of gentleman. Loomis doubtless inherited little, and as for the affix "gent," he assumed nothing, as became such a sensible Christian man. The tax paid in 1629 was eight shillings. £3:8:0 in (taxable) goods nowadays seems trifling; but to the assessors of 1629 and to their owner, this sum meant over $150.00, which was a highly respectable showing for a Braintree merchant of that time. The sum represented a formidable pile of "Bays, Says and Perpetuanos." Pennies went as far then as dollars do now; everything was then on a small scale. To an American even the business of the Braintree of to-day would appear as "upon a small scale." By ten years later than 1628 our venturesome ancestor, with due care, could have easily accumulated the fair estate with which he embarked for America.

Joseph Loomis also paid the ship money tax, an act of special legislation. The account of the assessments of this tax is headed:—"An account of the money raifed in the County of Essex for the fetting out of a Ship of eight hundred Tunne appointed by his Maiesties writt to be ready at Portsmouth on the first of March 1636.

In which the Several Summes employed by the Sheriffe upon the inhabitants and the rates of the Whole County are particularly expressed according to an order made by his Maiestie at the Councell Board the 23th of Aprill Last upon occasion of a complaint then exhibited against the proceedings of the Sheriffe in that business. The whole charge being eight thousand pounds." . . .

 "Joseph Loomis, 00 - 09 - 04."

This assessment was the one which caused such an uproar. John Hampden refused to pay and fought the measure in Parliament. This item, and the will of John Loomis (see p. 97) are the only known instances of the name being spelled

"Loomis" in England, and the former is, undoubtedly, the last existing record of Joseph Loomis in England.

Here in this market-place of Braintree, for upwards of seven hundred years, there has been held a "market." This market-day is still a weekly affair. From all the surrounding towns came the people with their produce, horses, cattle, sheep, swine, and the various products of their handiwork, including home-spun cloth, offering them for sale, or in exchange for other commodities. It was on market-days that emigration was talked over. For years after 1630 the chief topic of conversation, aside from business matters, was the news from those who had gone to America and of those who intended to go. It was on these market-days that the visitors absorbed some influence of Braintree's independent spirit and non-conformity. The practical business men readily took to dissent from the "high church" performances of the time. Their fathers and grandfathers had done something along that line too.

Joseph Loomis, on some market-day, must have first met Mary White, who had come to town with her father from Shalford, four miles to the north. Soon after their marriage her parents removed to Messing, where her father died leaving the following will:

Probatu fuit Testamentu apud Kelvedon vicesimo Die Mensis Junii 1617.

Robert White.

This will, supplemented by other records, yields the following facts:

Robert White, yeoman, b. England, prob. at Messing, and there d., and buried June 17, 1617. He m. June 24, 1585, Brydgette, bapt. at Shalford, Mch. 11, 1562, dau. of William Allgar, who d. at Shalford, and there buried, Aug. 2, 1575. (See N. E. Hst. and Gen. Reg. June 1901.)

Robert White lived in Shalford most of the time from his marriage, until a few months before his death. He was a rich man, for those times. He was friendly to the Non-conformists. Shalford is 2 miles south of Weathersfield; here (Shalford) were b. his children; and here baptized; viz.:

1. Daniel.
2. Sarah, m. James Bowtell.
3. Mary, bapt. Aug. 24, 1590; m. Joseph Loomis, Windsor, Conn.
4. Elizabeth, m. William Goodwin, Windsor, Conn.
5. Bridgett.
6. Anna, or Rosanna, m. John Porter, Windsor, Conn.
7. Nathaniel.
8. John, m. Mary Levett, Hartford, Conn.

The Braintree men, through their business abroad, had opportunities to look out upon a world that was wider than their own shire. London was doubtless no strange city to Joseph Loomis. There he must have gone both to sell and to buy. As a wholesale cloth merchant he may have visited the continent,—even Spain and Portugal, since it was that the Braintree-Bocking cloth was largely sold in those countries. Non-conformity developed with Braintree's commercial growth. Both features seem to have started together. Spiritual liberty was likely founded upon the material independence of the individual. Dissent in Essex dates back to 1375, the days of John Wyclif, the Reformer, whose ideas were favored by John o' Gaunt, the over-lord of our early Loomises in Lancashire. In the following reigns the government tried but failed, even with the measures that were severe, to stamp it out. But it was not until Tyndale's translation of the New Testament reached the people that Braintree residents became dissenters, conspicuously. The church and state soon proscribed the translation, and those who were found to possess a copy of it were punished. In 1527 three men and a woman, all of Braintree and of the name of Beckwith, were dealt with for having a copy of the New Testament in English. Some ecclesiastics sought to "corner" the Bible and maintain "trust methods" in disseminating its contents. The repression did little good, for on January 27, 1550, some sixty persons—(it is related by Frederic West) met in a house in Bocking on a Sunday, where arose a great discussion amongst them. The subject thereof was "whether it was necessary to stand or to kneel, to be bare-headed or covered at prayer." These people soon arrived at a remarkably sensible and clear judgment, viz. (that) "the ceremony was not material, but that the heart before God was required, and nothing else." The wonder now is that everybody else could not then see the truth of that utterance. As for the clergy, they would not see it if they could. Moreover, the church determined that nobody should be suffered to express such a sane belief. And so those Braintree-Bocking people, who could think a little for themselves, were denounced as "dangerous," which, in another way, they certainly were. The Sheriff soon appeared and these people of clear insight were brought before the Council. They confessed that they had assembled "for to talk of the Scriptures;" also that they had not attended communion at the parish church for two years. Five of them were condemned to prison, and seven bound over in a penalty of £40 each (over $2,000).

The Baptists of Braintree claim the date of that meeting, in the house at Bocking, 1550, as marking the origin of their church. Between 1553 and 1558, when the persecuting statutes against heretics were revived, during the temporary increase of Papal power in England in the reign of Queen Mary, and while the Bishops Latimer, Ridley, Cranmer and others were being burnt, quite a number of citizens in and around Braintree, also were condemned to death at the stake. These were William Piggott, Stephen Knight, Thomas Hawkes, John Laurence, William Hunter, Richard and Thomas Spurge, Catherine Hutt, William Purchas, Cavell and Ambrose. The burning of these martyrs is described in Fox's Book of Martyrs, wherein is also mentioned the putting to death at Canterbury, of one John Lomas of Tenterden in Kent, heretofore referred to.

All that sort of actual and severe persecution quite came to an end with the death of Queen Mary, 1558. England then ceased to be Catholic, and became nominally Protestant. Non-conformity so steadily increased, however, that under Queen Elizabeth Parliament enacted the following:—

(Statutes of the Realm, 23 Eliz. (1581) C. I. Vol. IV, p. 657—"That every person above the age of xvj yeares, which shall not repaire to some Church Chappell or usual Place of Common Prayer, but forbear the same contrarye to the tenour of a Statute made in the firste yeare of her Maties Reigne for Uniformite of Common Prayer, and being thereof lawfull convicted, shall forfait to the Queene's Matie, for every Moneth after the end of this Session of Parliament whiche he or she shall so forbear, twentie poundes of lawfull English Money; and that over and besides the said Forfeitures, every person so forbearing, by the space of xii Monethes as aforesaid, shall for his or her obstinacie, after certifiat thereof in Writinge made into the Courte commonlye called the Kinge's Bench, or by the Ordinarie of the Dioces, a Justice of the Assise and Gaole Deliverye, or a Justice of Peace of the Countie where suche Offendor shall dwell or be, be bounde with two sufficiente Suerties in the somme of two hundredth pound at the leaste to the good Behavior, and so to continue bound, untill suche tyme as the persons so bounde do conforme themselves and come to the church, accordinge to the true meaninge of the said Statute made in the said firste yeare of the Queene's Maties Raigne."

Absence, from church alone, unaccompanied by any other act, constituted recusancy. Till the Statute of 35 Eliz. (1591) C. I., all non-conformists were considered as recusants; this statute was the first to distinguish the Popish from other recusants. The Protestant recusants continued subject to the statutes before 35 Eliz.

The statute of 35th Eliz. (1591) added imprisonment, and if after 3 months persistence the subject must adjure the realm, and that if he return after banishment or refuse this condition, he should suffer capitally as a felon, without benefit of clergy.

In the third year of Jas. I, 1606, this statute was amended to a fine of £20 per month, and for not receiving the Sacrament £20 for the first year, £40 for the second year and for every default thereafter £60. Non-conformists were not relieved altogether from these statutes until the Act of Toleration, I Wm. and Mary (1689) 1, c. 18.

The act for imprisonment and death was passed probably before Joseph Loomis was born and before his father settled in Braintree. Hence all the legal proceedings that were taken against those who violated this law have no special application to these Lomases, but Joseph Loomis faced a heavy fine for a withdrawal from the parish church. We do not consider that he did withdraw therefrom, but rather continued therein though as one of the dissatisfied minority. Before the last year of Elizabeth, 1603, some of the Essex clergy had become enlightened, which cost some fifty of them their positions. The liberal or Puritan party in the church continued to gain in members for fifty years after 1603, and many Separatist assemblies had become organized. It is, of course, to be expected that John Lunnys was something of a Puritan, though from what is known of him, no hint is had that he was an extremist—a Separatist. His son Joseph undoubtedly, was something of a Puritan sympathizer. Both men probably attended St. Michael's church in Braintree so long as they lived there. There is every reason to believe that they did so. There were small groups of people in Braintree that did not conform at all; but they were not composed of important men like John Hawkins and Joseph Loomis. We cannot conceive the loving friendship of these two men as possible, without religious harmony between them; and Hawkins certainly did not withdraw from the parish church. John and Geoffrey Lommys and their wives must have been buried in the churchyard. The business success of Joseph Loomis is evidence that he lived agreeably with his neighbors. His father-in-law, Robert White, was a communicant of the Shalford or Messing churches until he died. We do not see anything in the Braintree religious conditions as particularly applied to Joseph Loomis, to warrant the belief that he was any such puritanical sort of gentleman as Macaulay so vindictively and unnecessarily described some Puritans were, viz:—

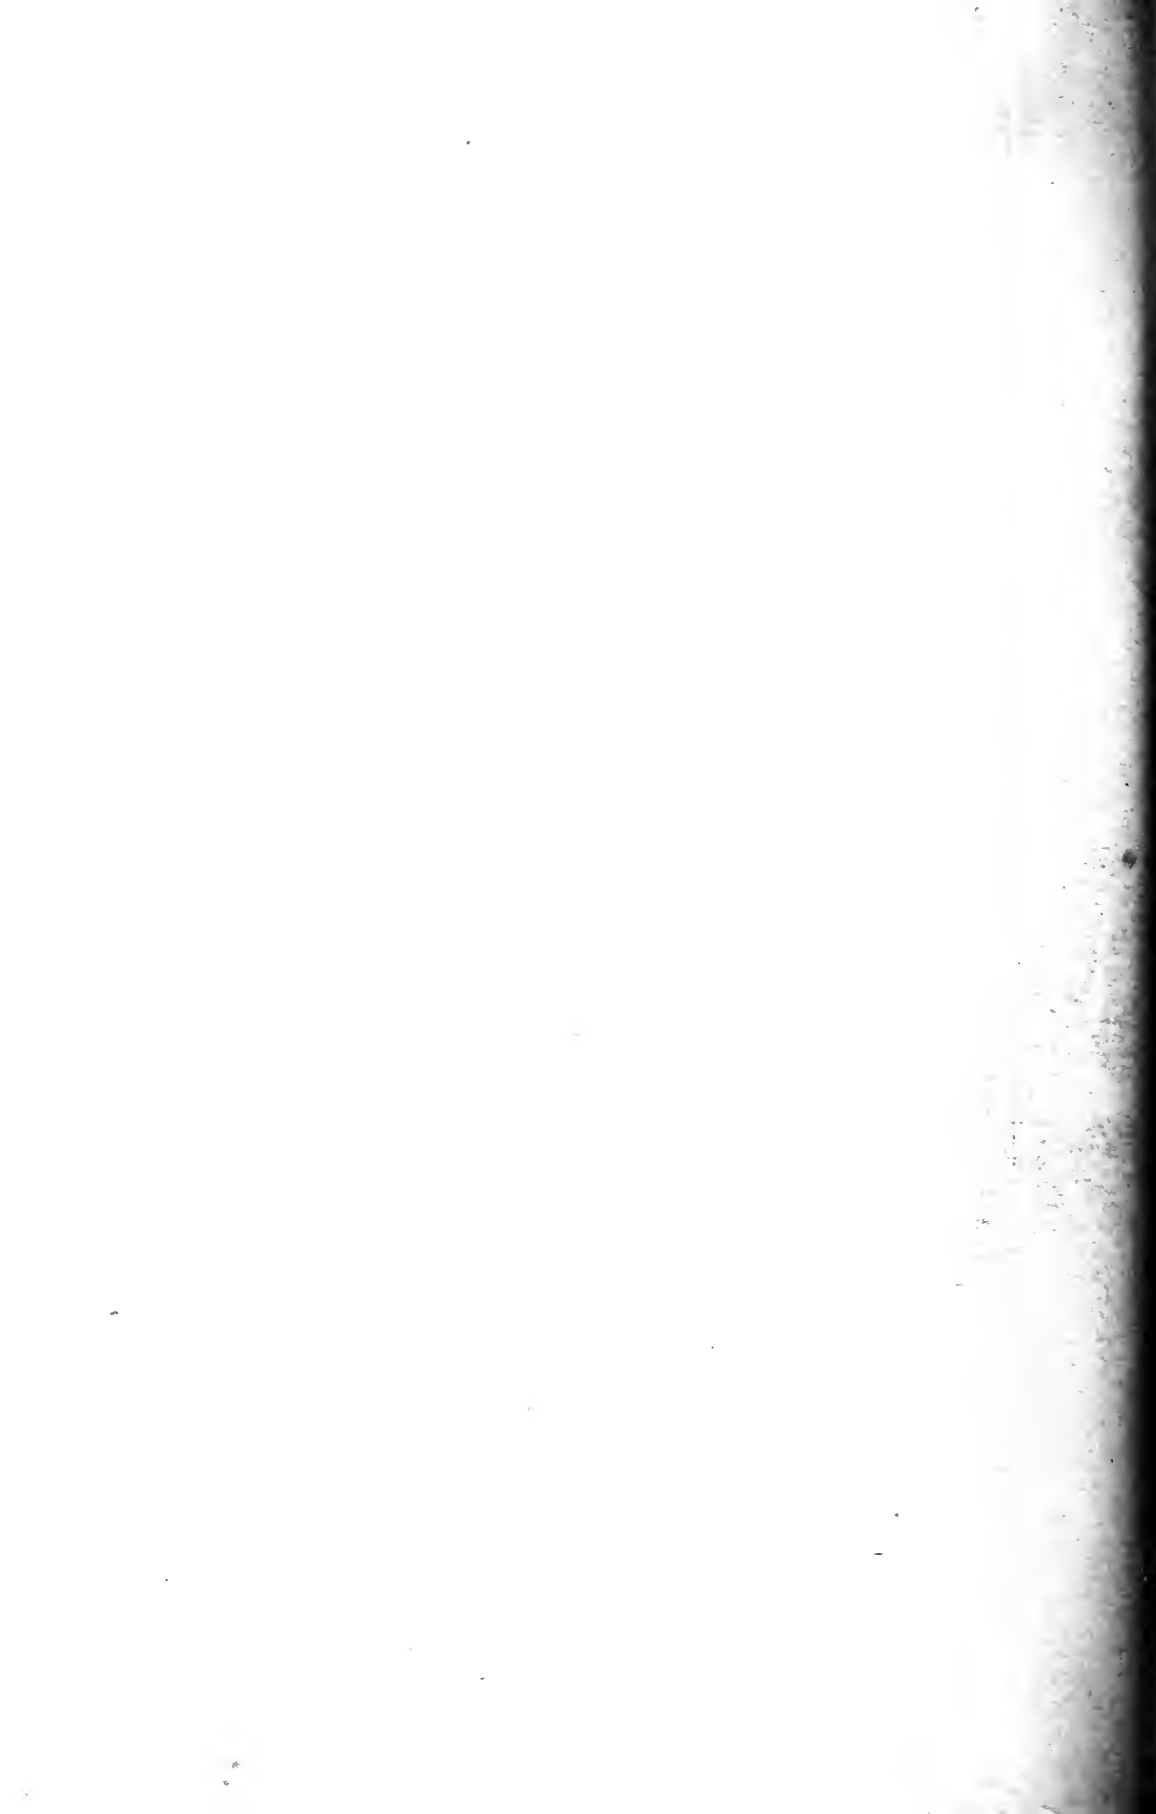

“The dress, the deportment, the language, the studies, the amusements of the rigid sect (the Puritans) were regulated on principles not unlike those of the Pharisees who, proud of their washed hands and broad phylacteries, taunted the Redeemer as a sabbath-breaker and a winebibber. It was a sin to hang garlands on a Maypole, to drink a friend's health, to fly a hawk, to hunt a stag, to play chess, to wear love locks, to put starch into a ruff, to touch the virginals, to read the Fairy Queen. Rules such as these, rules which would have appeared insupportable to the free and joyous spirit of Luther, and contemptible to the serene and philosophical intellect of Zwingle, threw over all life a more than monastic gloom. The learning and eloquence by which the great Reformers had been eminently distinguished for their success, were regarded by the new school of Protestants with suspicion, if not with aversion. Some precisians had scruples about teaching the Latin grammar, because the names of Mars, Bacchus and Apollo occurred in it. The fine arts were all but proscribed. The solemn peal of the organ was superstitious. The light music of Ben Johnson's masques was dissolute. Half the fine paintings in England were idolatrous, and the other half indecent. The extreme Puritan was at once known from other men by his gait, the upturned white of his eyes, the nasal twang with which he spoke, and above all, by his peculiar dialect. He employed, on every occasion, the imagery and style of Scripture.

Entrance to St. Mary's Churchyard, Bocking.

Approach to Weathersfield from Shalford.

Hebraisms violently introduced into the English language, and metaphors borrowed from the boldest lyric poetry of a remote age and country, and applied to the common concerns of English life, were the most striking peculiarities of this cant, which moved, not without cause, the derision both of Prelatists and libertines."

The truth of the whole religious situation in Braintree is revealed in letters written by the vicar of Braintree, about 1628-1631, to Bishop Laud. It is understood quite well in Braintree that Collins, the vicar there, while substantially a conformist, tried to prevent and keep out of all trouble. He sought peace in his parish—possibly preferring peace to principle. But he attempted the impossible when he endeavored to please both parties,—his bishop and his congregation. Among the latter was a strong non-conformist element. When Thomas Hooker was deposed from preaching in St. Mary's church, Chelmsford, in 1629, Collins, being on fair terms with Laud (then bishop), advised mild measures toward Hooker; and Collins added, "My Lord will be careful who succeeds him, for it's the greatest grief of my soul to see how full of whirligigs the heads of the people begin to grow." Two years later, 1631, the whirligigs seem to have gotten into Collins's own head somewhat, he being then reported to the bishop as inclining to the views of the reformers in his own parish. As a modern non-conformist of Braintree has remarked, "Poor old Collins! he wasn't made for a martyr"—so it may now be conceived that this vicar's object might have been the saving of the "living." He held it for fifty-two years, 1610 to 1662, which was remarkable, seeing that he was, at heart, both a Prelatist and a Royalist.

From Collins's letter, in self-defence against the charge of his own non-conformity, written in 1631, to Bishop Laud's Chancellor, it will be seen just what were the conditions for some years prior to Loomis's departure for America; and these conditions surely do not admit of that "picture of persecution" which has been hereinbefore referred to with respect to the causes of the emigration from Braintree; and would it be fair for us to lament or complain at the fines and imprisonments imposed by the English courts of justice upon those non-conformists, who (however noble and inspiring their motives), broke the laws of their country, when these same non-conformists, later in America, inflicted harsher penalties upon the devout Quakers,—a religious people upon whose hands are no stains of blood or of intolerance in American history? Collins wrote:

"My Lord's displeasure pierces deep with me. The complaint which hath provoked him I willingly and wittingly occasioned, to reform the error of sundry on my towne, which would not be persuaded, but that it still lay in me to procure them a toleration of their wonted unconformity which I labored to draw them from. It is no easy matter to reduce a numerous congregation to order that hath been disorderly these fifty years."

Collins continues the letter by saying that these non-conformists in his congregation were prepared, if he had been severe, to leave their homes and go to New England, or elsewhere. That this meant that they were men of means, whose contributions would be missed, and also quite a number of them, is clear for he adds: "What a burden of the poor and other town charges would be thrown upon those that remain." This letter concludes with—"My Lord of London needs not to implore the power of the High Commission to rule me, the least finger of his own hand shall suffice. It makes me add a new prayer to my Litany: 'From this people, good Lord, deliver me!' If I may neither prevail for remission of His Lordship's intention, nor for removal from hence in convenient time, I hope I shall ere long be at rest with the Great Bishop of our souls."

In the life of Dr. Kidder, rector of the little church at Rayne (afterwards Bishop of Bath and Wells), located nearly two miles from Braintree market, occurs a passage that well indicates the marked intellectual and commercial independence of the citizens about Braintree; it shows that they had little esteem for services with "no preaching and dumb ministers." After settling at Rayne he, (Kidder), stated:—

"I soon discovered that the country I was come into was very different from that which I left. The country, indeed, was more agreeable as to my health, but in other things the difference was great. I had lived among a people that were modest and teachable, very conformable to the orders of the Church, and that showed great respect to the clergy; that paid their tithes and offerings exactly. I came to a people that were factious to the greatest degree, that endeavoured to defraud the minister of his dues, that were censorious, and given to separation, and great inveighers against the innocent rites and ceremonies of the Church. I do not say they were all such, but there was much too much of this leaven, and it had infected a great part of this country side."

Conditions continuing contentious, without improvement for the reformers, and discouragement at the growing power of Bishop Laud, all contributed to the cause of the emigration of the so-called "Braintree Company" in 1632, a year after Collins's letter. Laud's accession to the Archbishopric in 1633 made the situation in Braintree still less agreeable for those who did not leave with the first voyagers. These people followed, from time to time, in small groups. Joseph Loomis doubtless felt some force of the threat, that "they who make innovations in religion are enemies of the Kingdom." Business became affected by religious controversy. War was about to quite upset commerce and manufacturing altogether. Joseph needed not much foresight to see that the prospects at home were unfavorable. Several things contributed to his decision to join his kin in New England. He could hardly have had any particular sorrow in leaving, save parting from personal friends. Scarcely any great sacrifice by him was involved, as he saw it, at the time of his departure. That Vicar Collins was sorry to lose him, personally, may be believed. That they parted as friends, forgetting the while their differences of opinion, is also entirely plausible. The vicar's blessing surely was given to Joseph and his family in the last hours of their Braintree days. And that the good-will and "God-be-with-you," regrets of every friend and neighbor, regardless of everything else, filled the last moments in Braintree and the last in England,—no one can doubt it who understands that time and its people.

St. Michael's church. Here for forty years or more Joseph Loomis passed in and out. Here he was baptized between 1585-1592—undoubtedly. Here were proclaimed the banns before his marriage-day,—the wedding having been consummated as per this entry in the parish church of Shalford:—

"Anne Dni 1614

"Joseph Loomys was married unto Marye whight the XXXth Daye of June anno p^r dictæ."

Here without St. Michael's, Braintree, were laid in consecrated ground, Joseph's father, his mother and his probable brother Geoffrey and sister-in-law, Priscilla—all so laid from sight before his sight. No word, no mark, no stone or brass—nothing whatever remains to-day, either within or without the church, to show that any of these people ever here lived and died. Scarce two acres is the churchyard, yet within this space have been placed the thousands of the parish dead for nigh a thousand years. This ground has been buried full over and over again; interment has been put upon interment,—stone upon stone. All is confusion,—hopeless and hapless. And yet all these earlier dead were here taught to believe in the actual resurrection of the body. Their wills expressed that belief and ordered explicitly the disposition of their remains in accordance therewith. Well it is for their church that these dead have not risen in the flesh on earth, as yet! "Dead men pay no tithes," saith the ecclesiastic. The church ever owning the ground, fixed the tenure of a grave subject to its pleasure. Not one single lettered stone in St. Michael's yard to-day will compare in either age or careful preservation with any one of scores of gravestones in Windsor, Connecticut. The English custom of disturbing graves and destroying the older memorials (which has often been the practice outside of the cities—barbarous though it be—), instead of acquiring new land for new needs, is one that will not bear comparison with the nobler methods of the heathen. The gravestone to the memory of Deacon John “Lomas,” 1683, in Windsor (Conn.) churchyard must be the oldest Loomis memorial standing in the world to-day.

Though St. Michael’s is placed meanly, shut in behind business premises, approached by narrow gantways, and requiring a fringe of trees around the yard to hide the surrounding structures, the edifice itself is inviting. Externally it is quite the same as in 1638, being built of small stones of flint set in a mass,—a patternless mosaic. Unlike the soft Portland stone so common in English churches, the vicar says this flint can: “Smile at the tempest and Time’s sweeping sway.”

It is known that there was a Parish Church here in the time of Edward the Confessor (1042) and the Church is named in the Domesday Book (1086) shortly after the Norman Conquest. How long before this the Christian religion was regularly ordered in these parts cannot be ascertained; but we may well believe that there has been a continued succession of ordained clergy here ever since the conversion of the people of Essex to the Faith of Jesus Christ, about the year 600 of our era.

“William S. Maria, Bishop of London, and Lord of the Manor of Braintree, was the Founder of the present Church. He was consecrated June 22nd, 1199, the first year of the reign of King John; he was successor in the See of London to Richard Fitz-Neal, and was sometime secretary to King Richard I. In the time of these two Bishops old St. Paul’s Cathedral (London) was built, besides many other Parish Churches in Essex belonging to the gift of the Bishops of London, of which Braintree was one. * * * * The date of 1199 is given for this church. The market town of Braintree and the origin of the Church of St. Michael are inseparably linked. * * * * The present church consists of the main portions of the original with later additions; most of the first fabric remaining to the present day. The Tower with the Nave Arch, the Belfry Chambers and Windows up to the eaves of the wooden spire in the Nave, the Bases, the Pillars and the Arcades on both sides belong to the time of Bishop William, the Founder. The Chancel Arch of that time was in existence when the Church was restored. The North and South Chancel Chapels were added, the former about 1380-1400—the latter is proved by the Arms in the Carved Oak Roof to belong to the reign of King Henry VIII, and about 1543. The East Wall of the Chancel except the Window, is of the same period as the Tower and Nave. The earliest addition made was in the year 1349, when “Thomas, son of John de Naylinghurst of this town in his testament bequeathed certain funds for the work of the Church going on at that time.” This work can be proved to be the rebuilding of the North Aisle, and in all likelihood the Clerestory of the Nave with a new roof, flatter than the old gabled one. Certain Essex historians have taken this date, 1349, as given in this Will, to show that the Church was first built at that time; but those who understand the divisions of style of English Church Architecture are well aware that the original Tower, Nave and East Wall still remaining agree with the date of the license for the Market and the building of a Church for the town, viz., 1199. Everyone who has studied the subject of Gothic Architecture, and has read the statements of recent writers (see Muray’s Handbook to Essex), knows that the old historians of Essex, Morant, (Wright takes his history from him), Newcourt, Ousely, Tyndal, and Muilman, all follow each other in giving us a wrong date for the foundation of the Church, viz., 1349, instead of 1199. This is fully treated of by the Vicar in the Transactions of the Essex Archaeological Society, Vol. IV, Part IV, 1893. The history of the Bells would form a subject of itself. * * * * During the years which elapsed between 1522 and 1532 the old South Aisle was taken down, lengthened and widened, and a new South Porch was built; soon after this the present South Chancel Aisle was added and made into Jesus Chapel. Other changes were made to meet the prosperity of the times and the increasing religious ceremonies; but most of these were soon after rendered useless by the incoming of the 'Reformation of Religion.' During the Reformation period our Church suffered grievously by being stripped of its ornaments and robbed of its emoluments. The puritanical period which followed did still greater harm to the fabric, either by actual mutilation, or by deliberate destruction, or through generations of neglect. The endowments were nearly all taken away; and those bequests which were formerly made for the Church now went to the maintenance of the ever-increasing poor. To save the old Church from approaching decay, Thomas Trotter, a merchant of London, and native of this place, left a bequest towards the reparation of the fabric, in 1630." [Statement by the Vicar of Braintree.]

Unfortunately the floor of the church in which were old gravestones bearing inscriptions, was concreted over in 1852. Then too the old baptismal font was removed. There are some memorial windows of stained glass, though of wholly modern erection. The tower, which is Early English and almost the same to-day as when built, contains a large single lancet window and a good Early English archway into the nave. The three small round holes in each of the four sides of the tower, near the base of the pointed shaft above, are to let out the sound of the bells, which hang just below. The hood jutting out from the spire, about twenty feet below the top, held the old sanctus bell, but now shelters a clock. The original bell for the clock still exists, and was bought with the "XX" bequeathed by one John Peppis of Branktre, in 1518, "to the charges of a newe clocke bell to be made to serve for the clocke of the Church of Branktre aforesaid."

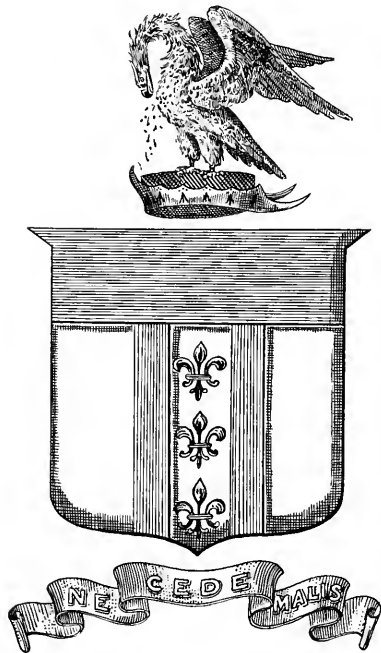

In the old parish chest was found, not long since, a large parchment bearing the names of Braintree residents who died of the plague about the year 1670. This MS. is now framed and fixed to a pillar in the church. The records of baptisms, marriages and burials now exist only back to 1660. Some wood-carving that is old and fine remains, though much has disappeared. On the outside of the church, in the east wall, is a recess with a depressed arch fifty by thirty inches wide, and about three feet from the ground. Near the right end of the sill-stone is a small circular depression, eight inches in diameter, with a drain. It is the vicar's theory that the feet of the pilgrims on their way to the shrines at Bury, St. Edmund's and Walsingham, were here washed by the master of the Jesus Guild.

With this we will leave Braintree, thinking of its ancient people and as a beginning-place of emigration, to which now—

Thither romantic pilgrims shall betake Themselves from distant lands. When we are still In centuries of sleep, thy fame shall wake,
 And thy great memory with deep feelings fill
 These scenes which thou hast trod, and hallow every hill.

We will take the road to Thaxted, over which John Lummys came—if he made his way by the direct route. The journey leads northwest, through the hamlets of Great Saling, Great and Little Bardfield, and Bardfield End Green,—fourteen miles to Thaxted. Thus one traverses an upland still thinly settled, through what is now a farming region, but well wooded in 1600. Topographically the progress is still upward, rising from Braintree's elevation of two hundred feet above the sea-level to three hundred and fifty feet at Thaxted, which is perhaps the highest town in the county of Essex.

Why did John Lummys go to Braintree? Love or business is generally the moving factor in such events. We have seen that he did not marry in Thaxted; as for business, Thaxted was declining, while Braintree ever prospered between 1500 and 1700. The historians of Essex explain how Thaxted, the "ancient Sheffield of England," lost its industries,—the making of cutlery, arms and armor; how its people sought to emulate Braintree by introducing the manufacture of cloth to replace the metal working, and so save their town from commercial disaster. The old chroniclers also recount how the making of cloth was not attended with the success essential to save their town; how they failed to rival Braintree, and how the latter, long established as a center for cloth and kindred trades, profited still more by Thaxted's decline.

To the mind of John Lummys, as a young man in Thaxted, Braintree offered a prospect both near and inviting. If he had served an apprenticeship to a tailor in Thaxted, his removal to Braintree, between 1580 and 1590, seems quite to be expected of a young man of spirit then engaged in that vocation. But the Thaxted records already quoted show that he was left a fatherless boy when in his fifth year; thus is seen why he did not follow his father, as a carpenter or builder; and the leaving for Braintree may have been his own idea. His mother neither died in Thaxted, as a Lummys, nor married there, firstly or secondly.

Authenticity of Loomis Coat-of-Arms

We conclude this narrative of the Lomas family of England with a statement of facts as to the coats-of-arms of "Lomax" and "Lomas."

The family of the Laurence Lomax of Lancashire, who settled at Eye, in the county of Suffolk, about 1561, as a school teacher [Records of Cambridge University] and mentioned in the Loomis Genealogy of 1875, has been dismissed in the foregoing pages from consideration, in Suffolk, in connection with the Lomases of Essex. The descendants of this gentleman [Add. MSS. British Mus. 19140] have been all traced and disposed of in the present search. This is simply another branch out of Lancashire. Members of this family were prosecuted for papacy. Also must be dismissed the descendants of his brother, Roger Lomax of Hemsby and Caistor, Norfolk [Davy MSS. fo. 113 British Museum]. Also for the same reasons must be eliminated from notice, other than heraldic, the family of one Joshua Lomax, mentioned in the Loomis Genealogy of 1875, who long after the Loomises were established in Thaxted, went from Bolton in Lancashire, to become lord of the manors of Childwickbury, Peminston and Hemelhempstead, in the county of Hertford, adjoining Essex [Vol. 377 Augmentation office].

With these aforesaid ineligible there must be also passed by, from present acceptance, their respective coats-of-arms. These bearings were utilized—tentatively it is presumed—to form the frontispiece in the Loomis Genealogy of 1875, viz:—

Laurence Lomax of Suffolk; Per pale, or, sable, on a bend, ermine, cotised, three escallops, gules; crest—a unicorn's head erased, holding in its mouth an olive branch. These arms also are found quartered with the arms of Heydon, viz. argent, gules, a cross quarterly countercharged.

Joshua Lomax of Lancashire and Hertfordshire:—Ermine, a greyhound courant, between three escallops, sable; crest—a demi-greyhound argent, collared gules.

Argent, between two pallets gules three fleur-de-lis in a pale sable, a chief azure: crest, on a chapeau a pelican vulning herself, proper.

The first two of the above bearings have not been further displayed in America because it was seen thirty-six years ago that they did not belong, after 1540, to the branch of the general English family out of which came Joseph Loomis. The third coat-of-arms, not having been then found accredited to any particular branch of the family in England, though it surely does have exactly that specific and exclusive application, if any at all, was deemed the safest for American adoption. To some minds it will be now deemed as a little unfortunate that such adoption of this bearing was occasioned so generally, and so long before a full investigation in England. Such inquiry now confirms the earlier supposition that the two bearings above first quoted have no possible relation to either the ancestors or descendants of our Joseph Loomis. They cannot be considered as ancient enough to apply to Lancashire or Derbyshire before 1540. The third bearing is only mentioned in England in a wholly casual, unofficial and indiscriminate collection of notes, drawn from all possible sources, some authoritative, others conjectural and in many instances from unknown, uncertain and unacceptable sources, and also containing arms that were officially disclaimed and rejected.

This collection printed and issued to the world, at large, solely as a private enterprise, is generally known as "Burke's Encyclopædia of Heraldry." Neither the dates of grant, or of confirmation, of the last-named coat-of-arms, nor to whom granted, nor where granted is given by Burke. Regretfully, it must be said that this item is out of the unhonored flotsam and jetsam on the sea of heraldry, no man knows who sent it adrift; nor when, nor where; like a bottle thrown overboard at sea, it has been washed by the tide upon the American shore, where, as an orphan, it has been well treated. Most reluctantly we are now forced to abandon any claim of title to it "by right of descent" from the English "Lomas" who first rightly or wrongly conceived or acquired it. It may be the bearing of Helias Lumhals, Gentleman, of South Elmham, Suffolk, or of his apparent son or near relative, Sir Richard Lumhals, rector of Surlingham St. Mary; both were in a position to have arms, and the former's affix "Gentleman" would have been properly used, if for no other reason than armorial honor.

It will be remembered in this connection that in that South Elmham deed of 1 Feb., 1513, of which the close roll is a copy, not the original, Helias Lumhals, Jr., wrote: "In witness whereof  I have affixed my seal." The original deed went to the grantees and is not now traceable. We must ask in vain—what was that seal?

So far as official records go, they have been consulted with this following result. At no heraldic visitation of England was this bearing accepted or confirmed, so far as official records now show, and in no instance do we find Joseph Loomis, or any of his proven ancestors in direct record contact with any specific heraldic evidences. The door of the College of Arms is shut upon us, viz:—

Dear Sir:

College of Arms, Queen Victoria St. E. C.

I was in Town yesterday and made the search you required for arms of Lomas. I do not find any grant to that name on our records. The nearest I can find to it is the name of Lomax. Laurence Lomax of Eye in Suffolk bore at the time of the Visitations "On a bend engrailed between two plain cotises ermine 3 escallops gules." There is also a grant dated 4 July 1815 to Richard Grimshaw Lomax of Clayton Hall, Co. Lancs. of "per pale or & sable on a bend engrailed with plain cotises ermine 3 escallops gules—crest issuant out of a crown vallory or a demi lion argent charged on the body with 3 escallops between two bendlets & holding between the paws an escallop gules," and another grant dated 5 May 1860 to Richard Lomax of the Inner Temple of "or, or a bend between 2 fleurs de lys gules an annulet between two escallops of the field "crest"— a demi-lion erased per bend or & gules charged with two fleurs de lys countercharged & holding between the paws an escallop gules within an annulet or."

I am afraid these are of no use to you, but I send them for what they are worth. I do not find any record of the arms attributed by Burke to the family of that name. I of course looked for alternative spellings.

Yours faithfully,

G. WOODS WOLLASTON,

Bluemantle.

The opinion was advanced at the College of Arms upon a call there in person that this bearing might be possibly accounted for in three ways, namely:—

- (1) Granted during the period of the Commonwealth—the Puritan ascendancy—under Cromwell, between 1648 and 1660. All coats-of-arms so granted were principally to non-royalist and non-prelatist applicants. These grants were mostly, if not all, annulled after the Restoration of Charles II, 1660; and the official records of them were destroyed. In no event, however, would a bearing so granted have any application whatever to Joseph Loomis or his descendants.
- (2) Presented to the officials for confirmation at the time of some visitation of the shires by the representatives of the Clarencieux King of Arms, but for want of sufficient proof of title thereto, as presented by the applicant's statement, the arms were "disclaimed," rejected, confirmation refused, etc., or—arms extant but never presented for such confirmation, when the official demand therefore was proclaimed.
- (3) A bearing of some other English family, assumed without proper confirmation, by a Lomas from his mother or grandmother's family; or possibly a bearing of some family extinct, or greatly declined after 1638.

Had any ancestor, in England, of Joseph Loomis, used this coat-of-arms without being able to prove that it was granted to him by the crown or rightfully inherited, he would have been subject to indignities, viz: —

Persons assuming to be gentlemen, but who were not entitled to the honor of bearing arms, were subject to the following indignities, on their names being struck from the former visitations. "Their names being written on a sheet of paper," says William Flower, Norroy King-at-Arms, "with fayre great letters, was carryed by the Bayliff of the Hundred, and one of the Heralds men to the Chiefe Towne of that hundred, where in the chief place thereof, the heralds men redd the names after crye made by the Baylife and the people gathered. And then pronounced openly by the said Bayley Every man's name severally contained in the said bill: that done, the Bayley set the said Bill of Names on a poste fast with wax where it may stand drye, so it be as aforesaid in the chiefest place of the said Towne." Baines' History of Lancashire VI—243.

The displaying privately of these arms of the three fleur-de-lis in America, however, as a souvenir, a trophy, or relic of some yet unknown Lomas, or extinct line of a Lomas branch, is a matter that is not quite open to criticism.

In all other usages the American Loomis descendants should be guided by the report of the Committee on Heraldry of the New England Historic Genealogical Society made to the Council 15 December, 1898, and adopted by the Society at its annual meeting in 1899, viz:—

As there is no person and no institution in the United States with authority to regulate the use of coats of arms, your Committee discourages their display in any way or form.

Prior to the Revolution, as subjects of a government recognizing heraldry, certain of the inhabitants were entitled to bear coats of arms; but only such as were grantees of arms, or who could prove descent in the male line from an ancestor to whom arms were granted or confirmed by the Heralds.

Females did not regularly bear arms, but the daughter of an arms-bearing father could use the paternal coat in a lozenge. When she married, such arms did not descend to her children except by special authority, unless she were an heiress marrying an armiger, and then only as a quartering of her husband's arms.

The mere fact that an individual possessed a painting of a coat of arms, used it upon plate, or as a bookplate or seal, or had it put upon his gravestone, is not proof that he had a right to it.

Proof of right must either be found in the Heralds' records, or be established by authenticated pedigree direct from an armiger.

A coat of arms did not belong with a family name, but only to the particular family, bearing the name, to whose progenitor it had been granted or confirmed; and it was as purely individual a piece of property as a homestead. Hence it was as ridiculous to assume arms without being able to prove the right, as it would now be to make use of a representation of the Washington mansion at Mt. Vernon, and claim it as having been the original property of one's family, unless bearing the name of Washington and being of the line of those who owned it.

The Loomis Family in America

Migration from Dorchester, Massachusetts, to Windsor, Connecticut

BY

MRS. ALBERT HASTINGS PITKIN

HAVING followed Joseph Loomis from Braintree to London, and thence to New England, (Dorchester, Mass.), during the early summer of 1638, as set forth hereinbefore, there remains but one journey more—from Dorchester, Mass., to Windsor, Conn., sometime in 1639. By what route did he and his family make this journey,—a journey more difficult to complete than any heretofore undertaken? Having, in imagination, come with him so far, let us go from Dorchester to Windsor. This established, any descendant of his can retrace the steps from his present habitation, through his ancestors, back to Thaxted, England—a journey, in time, of 400 years. This final part of Joseph's journey is admirably pictured in the following, from the pen of one of his descendants, Sarah H. Loomis, now Mrs. Albert H. Pitkin.

Route taken by the Early Settlers of Windsor from Dorchester

The wide-spread restlessness which obtained in four of the chief settlements of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, within four years after these towns were planted is a curious fact. It was not that these people had repented of coming to America. They had no desire to return to their homes in England. When the first suggestions of removal began to be whispered abroad, it was supposed that the settlements would be near at hand and that the strength of the Massachusetts Colony should not be weakened. But, at length, it began to appear, that the distant valley of the Connecticut was territory to be occupied. In various ways since 1630, this rich and fertile valley had been brought to the notice of the Massachusetts settlers, and had doubtless stirred their imaginations. The word "Connecticut" meant to them, then, only the valley, and the story of its richness, beauty and extent had charmed their thoughts. The real transfer which originated and established the colony of Connecticut took place in 1635 and 1636 but people continued to come for several years in considerable numbers to the valley from England seeking these towns as the places where their kindred and friends had settled. (I. N. Tarbox).

On April 4, 1631, three Sachems from Agawam or vicinity of Springfield, one of whom had for a time, been in the service of Sir Walter Raleigh, visited Gov. Winthrop and bore to the English the first intelligence of the Connecticut river and the way overland to their place of residence. This is the route that is to be particularly considered. As early as Sept., 1633, Mr. John Oldham with three others, travelled through the wilderness to Connecticut to view the country and to trade with the Indians. They appear to have had information from the Dutch of New York of a valuable tract upon the Connecticut river. Mr. Oldham knew the ways of the Indians and their habits and had some knowledge of their language and he was hospitably received. He and his companions seem to have been the first white men who had gone across the country from the Bay to the Connecticut river. When they returned to the Bay Colony they brought back such flattering accounts of the fertility and products of the soil that in 1635 a large company were induced to emigrate thither. The greater part of the companies, came through the woods by land and the remainder by water, and Winthrop tells us of one company of "about sixty men, women and children who went by land to Connecticut with their cows, horses and swine and after a difficult and tedious journey arrived there safe." That which is now a three or four hours trip was then a journey of two weeks. Their household furniture, bedding and winter provisions were sent around by water.

Only a mile or two from their habitation in Dorchester they were in a wilderness with no sign of human life. There were hills to be climbed, streams to be forded, and morasses to be crossed. Their guides were the compass and the north star. Evening by evening they made camp and slept, guarded and sentinelled by the blazing fires. Their toilsome and devious way led them near the mouth of the Chicopee, not far from where Springfield now stands. They at length came in sight of the river, the object of their ardent expectation, and thence down, along the Connecticut was a comparatively straight and easy pathway. The wide, full river, flowing with larger tide than now, was crossed on rafts and rudely constructed boats.

The spirit of adventure and commence was strong in the early American settlers and the English Colonies were not half a century old before roads were opened between the settlements. Already Indians had made trails across mountain and through forest. Some of these were for hunting and some for portage paths, and some were war-paths, over which silent-shod warriors filed into the country of the enemy. These Indians' trails followed still older ones, made by the wild animals, and because of some instinct of direction with which the Creator had endowed these red men and their game, the paths were always the most direct natural routes.

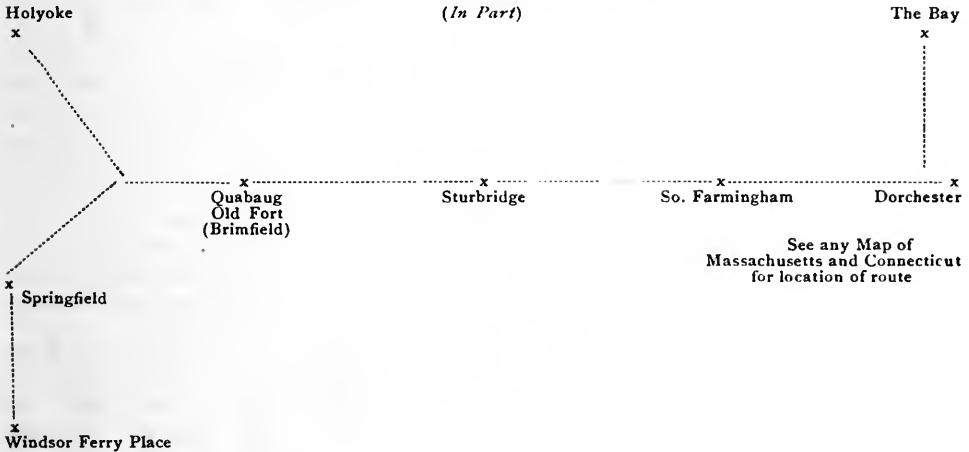

(I quote from the N. E. Gen. & Hist. Register). "From wigwam to wigwam that had hospitable doors always open on the leeward side, the pre-historic people drifted on their long distance paths. A stone mortar for the grinding of parched corn was a halting place. Their trails by constant use became paths. Upon the advent of another race, the marks of the Indian's moccasined feet were very soon covered by the heavy steps of the White Man, and the path of the Indian became the roadway of the pioneer settler."

In the N. E. Historical and Genealogical Register, Vol. LV, page 155, is a copy of the map published in 1642 by Woodward and Safferey which gives the probable route of the early settlers to the valley of the Connecticut. These two men were employed to establish the southern bounds of the Massachusetts Bay patent and the map which they publish bears the date 1642. Written upon the map is the following: "A Description of the bounds of the Massachusetts Bay patent—crossing the Connecticut River at the Windsor ferry place, the house of John Bissell being at the west side and the Widow Gibbs, her house on the east side of the river. Also a description of the most remarkable rivers, brooks, ponds, hills, plains, swamps, situations of Indians, discovered by the way." They followed a well-known way from Boston to Springfield, then passed down the river to latitude 41 degrees 55 minutes and established a bound at the Windsor ferry place. From thence they made their way as directly as possible across country to Providence, noting latitude from time to time, and remarkable things seen. They passed from Shenipsit Pond above Rockville through the location of the villages of Tolland, Willington, Warrentown, Ashford, and Phoenixville. The map is very interesting and will well repay the time spent in investigation.

WOODWARD AND SAFFEREY'S MAP—1642

(In Part)

The four long distance paths from all the seaboard between Boston and New London, that approached each other, as they extended into the interior, were united as one "Great Path," in passing through the valley of the Quabaug and, thereafter reaching "Quabaug Old Fort" stretched away in diverging lines to where the Indians were wont to resort. To-day a person in Oxford or Woodstock, desiring to drive to Springfield by country road, the most direct, will travel along what was once called the "Great Road" in Sturbridge; and Sturbridge is the only place in all the memorable journey of Mr. John Oldham and his associates that can be identified as having been visited. "Quabaug Path" at Oxford Village and "Quabaug Old Fort" at Brimfield are connected by a path still traceable and very direct in its course.

Perhaps it is sufficient to say that writers agree that from Dorchester the route of the early settlers was through the location of what is now South Framingham to Oxford, Sturbridge, Brimfield and Springfield.

There has been transmitted to us from early time, some knowledge indefinite in parts, of the general course of some of the long distance paths used by the Indians.

In the history of Windham County, Connecticut, mention is made of a well-known path of the Indians from Mt. Hope and the Narragansett country to what is now Woodstock, known as the "Providence Path."

In Bowen's "History of Woodstock" we read: "The old 'Connecticut Path' over which the distinguished band of Colonists went in 1635 and 1636 to settle the towns of Windsor, Wethersfield and Hartford passed through the heart of what is now Woodstock. (Stiles Ancient Windsor). This path so famous in the early days came out of Thompson's Woods, a little north of Woodstock Lake, and proceeding across the Senexet Meadow, ran near Marcy's Hill." A footnote on page 52, Vol. I, of Stiles Windsor is as follows: "In regard to the course of the first settlers on their way to the Connecticut, Dr. McClure's manuscript in possession of the Conn. Hist. Soc., preserves the following narrative—'In conversation with the late aged and respectable Captain Sabin of Pomfret, Conn., he related to me the following discovery, viz: About forty years ago he felled a large and ancient oak about the north line of Pomfret, adjoining Woodstock. On cutting within some inches of the heart of the tree it was seen to have been cut and chipped with some sharp tool like an axe. Rightly judging that the time when it must have been done the Indians so far inland were destitute and ignorant of the use of iron tools he counted the number of the annular circular rings from the said marks to the bark of the tree and found there were as many rings as the years which had intervened from the immigration of the Dorchester party to that time. Hence the probability is that they journeyed along the north border of Pomfret and as they traveled by a compass the conjecture is corroborated by that course being nearly in a direct line from Boston to the place of their settlement on the Connecticut river."

Another mention in the grant of the old town of Mendon, date about 1660, called the "Path to the Nipmug Great Pond."

The Rev. J. H. Temple in writing the histories of N. Brookfield and Palmer, locates the "Quabaug Old Fort" on Indian Hill, north of the Great, now Sherman's Pond in Brimfield. This fort was directly upon the great Indian trail from Woodstock to the "Great Falls" at Holyoke, and but a little way South of the trail to Springfield. This fort is named oftener than any other, contemporaneous, of the neighboring defenses. The messengers and agents sent at different times by the English authorities to the Quabaugs for one purpose or another, often mention their stop at "Quabaug Old Fort." Four paths are mentioned as diverging from the fort. The great western path passed north of Steerage Rock to the bend of the Quabaug river; parting there, one branch kept on south of the river to Springfield; the other crossed the river into Palmer and on to the Great Falls of the Connecticut now Holyoke City. One path ran to the falls of Ware river, and still another to the Indian village at W. Brookfield. The character of the country lying between the eastern and western paths for a distance of twenty or more miles, north and south is peculiarly obstructive to an east and west thoroughfare; so much so that even to-day no road has been made or path found in that direction except where the valley of the Quinnebaug furnishes the way. The town of Sturbridge occupies the middle portion of this territory and the river enters from the west about mid-way between the north and south boundaries of that town. The Rev. John Eliot wrote while at Windsor in 1649: "20 myles up the river layeth Springfield where Mr. Moxon is pastor, and this town [Springfield] overland from the Bay layeth; 80 or 90 myles southwest, and is the road way to all the towns upon this river and (that) lye more south-ward." This was the way over which passed all the parties of immigrants and all the intercourse between the Bay settlements and those on the Connecticut river overland previous to 1648.

This was the "Bay Path" of Dr. J. G. Holland's historical novel bearing that title, of which the author writes as follows: "The principal communication with the Eastern settlement was by a path marked by trees a portion of the distance and by slight clearings of brush and thicket for the remainder. The path led through the woods which bore the marks of centuries. This path was known as the "Bay Path" or the "Path to the Bay," and received its name in the same manner as the multitudinous "Old Bay Roads" that led to Boston from every quarter of Massachusetts. It was wonderful what a powerful interest was attached to the "Bay Path." It was the channel through which laws were communicated, through which flowed news from distant friends. It was the vaulted passage along which echoed the voices that called from across the ocean and through which rolled the din of the great world. The "Bay Path" was charmed ground—a precious passage.

We are not accustomed to think of any indebtedness to the Indian, but in no respect do we owe him so much as for leading the way through what otherwise had been a trackless forest. The Indian paths and land-marks became by adoption those of the pioneers who gave to the present generations their homes "in a smiling land."

The Loomis Family in Windsor, Connecticut

The history of Connecticut begins with the year 1630, and that of Windsor with the year 1633. The original town of Windsor was about 46 miles in circumference, lying on both sides of the Connecticut River. It was originally called Dorchester. At the Commissioner's court, Feb. 21, 1637, it was "ordered yt the plantacon called Dorchester shall bee called Windsor."

Seven miles above Hartford, some Pilgrims from Plymouth Colony, in order to prevent the Dutch of New Netherland from getting control of "the finest valley in New England," built a block-house on the site of Windsor near the mouth of the Farmington, in 1633, and began trading with the Indians. This first settlement of Connecticut was made on "the Island," so-called, now owned by the Loomis Institute.

Early in 1639 the people of the three towns of Windsor, Hartford and Wethersfield met in convention and agreed to govern themselves according to a written constitution. By this act they united themselves into a republic, the first in the new world, and which was finally called Connecticut. This republic of Connecticut is believed to be the first state in the history of the world which was created by a written constitution. Moreover in the state thus founded there was no restriction of suffrage to church members. This constitution was inspired by the learned and eloquent Thomas Hooker of Hartford, and through it a democracy in which freedom, equality and individuality are potent factors was obtained.

Here, then, at the very door of our pioneer ancestor, was the birthplace of the written constitution, the full flower of which became the constitution of the United States of America. His sons and their families helped to build this first experimental republic. And from this republic and the town of Windsor have gone out freedom and equality, and sturdy and loyal descendants of Joseph Loomis, until the radiating lines of each reach to the uttermost bounds of these United States.

God gives all men all earth to love,
But since man's heart is small.
Ordains for each one spot shall prove Beloved over all,

wrote Rudyard Kipling; and we may particularize thus:

And this one spot, for you and me
Who do the name of Loomis bear,
Now and for aye, truly shall be
"The Island" home at Windsor fair.

In 1633 Capt. William Holmes with a few other men, sailed carefully up the Connecticut, "pluckily disregarding the threats of the Dutch commandant of the fort at Hartford, and landing at Windsor, erected a frame trading-house that had been hewed and fashioned at Plymouth, Mass., and established the first permanent English settlement in Connecticut." The site of this trading-house is marked by a boulder, erected by the Abigail Wolcott Ellsworth Chapter of the D. A. R., of Windsor; it stands about a mile south of the "meeting-house" on what is called "the island," on land now owned by the Loomis Institute.

The Descendants

OF

(1590-1658)

IN America

"From our Ancestors come our Names, But from our Virtues our Honors."

JOSEPH LOOMIS, son of John and Agnes Loomis, was probably born before 1590, England; married in Messing, Co. Essex, England, June 30, 1614, Mary White, bap. Aug. 24, 1590, (See N. E. H. and G. Register, Vol. 55, pp. 28-29, for copy of Register of Shalford, England, marriages and baptisms), d. Windsor, Aug. 23, 1652.

Mary White was a daughter of Robert and Bridget (Allgar) White of Messing, Co. Essex, England, who were married June 24,

Joseph Loomis was a woolen-draper in Braintree, Essex county, England; sailed from London April 11, 1638, in the ship "Susan and Ellen," and arrived at Boston July 17, 1638, tarrying about 1 year at Dorchester, Mass., it is thought. It is mentioned in the town records of Windsor, Vol. 1, that on the 2nd of Feb., 1640, he had granted him from the plantation 21 acres adjoining Farmington river, on the west side of the Connecticut river, this 21 acres including the site of the first English settlement made in Conn.; (See Records of Abigail Wolcott Ellsworth Chapter, D. A. R.), also several large tracts of land on the east side of the Connecticut, partly from the town and partly by purchase.

He therefore probably came to Windsor in the summer or autumn of 1639, and he is generally supposed to have come in company with Rev. Ephraim Huet, who arrived at Windsor, Aug. 17, 1639. He brought with him five sons, all of whom were freemen, Oct. 7, 1669, and three daughters. His house was situated near the mouth of the Farmington river on "The Island," so called because at every great freshet it became temporarily an island by the overflowing of the Connecticut River. He died Nov. 25, 1658, as appears from the following record:

Found in Original Records, Vol. 2, page 115-116, and in the printed Digest of Manwaring, Vol. I, page 135. He died Nov. 25, 1658.

Inv't. £178-10-00. Taken by Henry Clark, John Moore. Ct. Records, p. 115. 2 Dec. 1658. An agreement for a Division of the Estate by the Children of Joseph Loomis, Dec'd and approved by this Court of Magistrates to be an equal Division. To Joseph Loomis, to Nicholas Olmsted, to Josiah Hull, to John Loomis, to Thomas Loomis, to Nathaniel Loomis, to Mary Tudor, to Samuel Loomis.

This agreement of the children of Mr. Joseph Loomis respecting the division of the Estate of ye father deceased, approved by the Court 2 Dec. 1658: We whose names are hereunto subscribd doe by these presents testify that it is our mutual and joynt agreement to attend an equal division of the Estate of Mr. Joseph Loomis, Our father, lately deceased, wch said estate being distributed in the equal prption we doe by these presents engage to set down Satisfied and Contented respecting any future trouble or demands about the foresaid estate now presented by Inventory to ye Court of Magistrates.

Joseph Loomis, Josiah Hull, Thomas Loomis, Mary Tudor, Nicholas Olmsted, John Loomis, Nathaniel Loomis, Samuel Loomis.

That pioneer Joseph Loomis spelled his name Lomas is conclusively proven by the rare document of which the insert opposite is a photographic copy. Notice, this signature occurred 6 yrs. before his death. This being his own writing it seems as though he held, in his riper years, that it should be written Lomas and not Loomis. If he was descended from, or related to, Helias Lumlals, whose land grant appears on page 78 herein, then possibly his reason for doing so was well-founded. Moreover, his eldest son, Joseph, m. 2ndly, Mary Chauncey, and this grant, on page 78, was a quit claim to Henry Chauncey and others, of Norwich, so that it appears as if the Loomises and the Chaunceys were somehow related—at least, acquainted. This being granted, Mary Chauncey, Joseph's 2nd wife, was very probably a descendant of one of these Chaunceys mentioned in the above land grant, and therefore a distant relative, a "cousin" some degrees removed, of Joseph Loomis. There being no conclusive evidence, we leave the reader to form what opinion he may both as to the spelling of the name and the relationship between Joseph Loomis and Mary Chauncey.

Comparative Genealogical Study of the Progeny of the Five Sons of Joseph Loomis

The following tabulation of the descendants of the five sons of pioneer Joseph, by generations, reveals many interesting and valuable facts. If the genealogy of other families contained such exhibits, a comparison of them would probably give us certain eugenic laws from which important deductions might be obtained.

That being impossible, no such exhibits being available, let us study our exhibit and compare the results with such vital statistics as are available relative to size of families, number who die before the age of 16, number who pass the age of 60 and of 90, per cent who marry, comparative number of sons and daughters, the average age of the whole family, and lastly how the descendants of John excel and of Thomas fall short of the average. Following this tabulation the reader will find a comparison of these tabulated facts with the averages as given in the world statistics on like investigations.

Many of the seventh generation being still alive and active, we cannot complete the statistics for it, nor for the succeeding generation—this labor will fall on a future compiler.

In "The World's Work," Jan. No., 1908, p. 9822, an investigation of English records shows that the fertility in Normal Stock is about 5 per family. Our statistics for 6 generations show 6 per family.

The marriage statistics for the following five countries based on census reports of 1890 and since, show that out of every 100 adults, those single, married and widowed bear the following ratios:—

	Single.	Married.	Widowed.
Belgium	35	55	10
Eng. and Wales	29	61	10
Ireland	41	47	12
Scotland	34	55	11
U. S.	26	65	9

The first six generations of the Loomis family show for every 100 adult, but 16 single, and 84 married. Again statistics in general show that out of every 100 persons born, about 40 % ever marry; in the Loomis family over 70 % married.

In the 1908 issue of the World's Almanac, p. 145, we find that 50 % of all persons born die before the age of 16, that only 1 1-5 % of each 100 born lives to the age of 60, and that the average duration of human life is about 33 years. Another authority says the average age of life is about 35 years.

The statistics of the Loomis Family shows that even under the severe pioneer life of New England and the west, for six generations less than 15 % died before the age of 16, that over 26 % passed the age of 60, and that the average age of all born reaches 51 years; for, as is well known, the average age of women exceeds that of men.

Again the mortality tables of insurance companies show that, out of every 100 persons who pass the age of 10 years, less than 1 person reaches the age of 90 years. But for six generations, over 1½ persons out of every 100 born Loomis passed the age of 90 years.

And what does all this teach? That the Loomis Family as a whole have lived honest, clean and moral lives, otherwise the averages set forth could not have exceeded so greatly those of the world at large. And from this we are justified in inferring that the family has continuously held to high ideals of life, that character and hygienic purity was more than position and dollars, that temperance is worth while, and that right living as set forth in the Ten Commandments means length of years. Of this inheritance let every Loomis boast, for it is worth more than all else. All this tends to independence and liberty, and for these our pioneer Joseph came to America.

Descendants of Each of the Sons of Pioneer Joseph Loomis

The following tabulation shows the number of descendants of each of the sons of Joseph Loomis, by the male line. The contrast between the descendants of John and Thomas is remarkable and affords abundant opportunity for a sociological investigation as why, in John's descendants, males preponderate, and in Thomas's, females.

NOTE.—A few names have been received since the completion of the final numbering, and all such names, so far as possible, occur in the body of this work in the proper serial order with a fractional number prefixed; e. g., see No. 966.1, following No. 966.

*The last residence, or P. O. address, known, follows the statement of the death of the person under consideration; e. g., No. 65, on p. 138, "Simsbury" is held as the last residence of Philip Loomis. And all his children are held as residing at Simsbury unless otherwise credited. The above rule obtains throughout this work.

First Generation

Children of Joseph Loomis of Windsor, Connecticut

"Take ye, the sum of all the Children of Israel, after their families, by the house of their fathers, with the number of their names."—Numbers, I, 2.

Genealogical investigations have been unable to establish definitely the order of the children of Joseph Loomis, and it is considered advisable to give here the conflicting evidence:

POSSIBLE ORDER OF CHILDREN.

1. Mrs. Olmsted	born 1615	married 1640
2. Mrs. Hull	1617	1641
3. Joseph	1618	1646
4. Mrs. Skinner	1620	1638
5. John	1622	1648
6. Thomas	1624	1653
7. Nathaniel	1626	1653
8. Samuel	1628	1653

Probably, however, the order was as follows:

1. JOSEPH, b. 1615. †
2. SARAH, b. 1617; m. Sep. 28, 1640, Capt. Nicholas, d. Aug. 1684, son of James and Joyce (Cornish) Olmsted of Hartford, who came in the "Lion," arriving at Boston, Sept. 16th, 1633. He was Capt. in the Pequod war, 1675. The Olmsted's old family seat in Fairsted, Co. Essex, Eng., still exists. James Olmsted, "first settler," Hartford, Conn., was bapt. at Great Leighs (or Lees Magna), Co. Essex, Eng., Dec. 4, 1580 (parish register.) The name of his wife was Joyce Cornish, m. at Great Leighs, Oct. 26, 1605, bur. Eng. Apr. 21, 1621. James was the son of James, b. 1550, d. Dec. 2, 1595, who m. Beloit Coll., for more than 20 yrs.; and also ancestor of Denison^o Olmsted, (Nathaniel,⁴ Nathaniel,³ Nicholas,² Deac. Joseph¹) b. June 18, 1791, who executed the first state geological survey in this country, and who was a noted meteorologist, a voluminous author and Prof. Nat. Phil., Yale College. 7. Thomas, 8. Mabel. He m. 2nd, Mrs. Mary Lord; he was a military officer and d. Aug. 31, 1684.

3. ELIZABETH, b. a. 1619, in England; m. Windsor, May 20, 1641, Josiah, eldest child of George Hull, of Windsor. Mr. Hull was Deputy to the General Court

†Deac. Joseph,¹ ancestor of Frederick E.^o Church (Joseph,^o Dorothy,⁴ [Olmsted], Samuel,³ Nehemiah,² Deac. Joseph¹) is a symbolic way of saying that Deac. Joseph Olmsted begat Nehemiah Olmsted, who begat Samuel Olmsted, who begat Dorothy

Olmsted, who married a man by the name of Church, who begat Joseph Church, who begat Frederick E. Church. By means of this explanation it is believed the reader will readily translate all such symbolic expressions occurring throughout this work.

*Gideon Wells was a descendant of Gov. Thomas Wells, his mother being the dau. of Gideon Hale. He attended the American Literary, Scientific and Military Academy at Norwich, Vt., where the more important part of his education was acquired. At 21 was writing stories for New York journals and later entered the office of the 'Hartford Times.'

"In 1827 he was elected to the General Assembly from Glastonbury, being frequently elected thereafter as a democrat. Not long afterwards the supreme court of the state handed down a decision in the then famous case of Atwood against Welton, of which the result was to bar Universalists from giving testimony in court, the judges holding that no man could qualify as a witness who did not believe in the doctrine of future rewards and punishments. Wells introduced a bill to eliminate this religious test, but six years elapsed before it was passed.

"He was comptroller of the state for three or four terms and in 1835 married his cousin, Mary Jane Hale, and settled in Hartford. Though the marriage apparently had nothing to do with it, Wells wrote in his diary that he bought and wore a wig in 1841, wearing a wig from that time on until his death.

"He was postmaster of Hartford in Jackson's administration and was in Washington in the navy department for three years under President Polk's administration. He came back to Hartford in 1849 and resumed newspaper work and, late in the 50's left the democratic party for the republican and founded the 'Hartford Press.' He was a member of the republican national committee for eight years and first met Abraham Lincoln in this city on March 5, 1860.

"Lincoln called him to Washington on March 1, 1861, and he assumed his duties as secretary of the navy in Lincoln's cabinet on March 7, 1861. It was his duty to create a navy and how well he accomplished the task is shown by the fact that, when he became secretary the navy had about sixty-five ships and from 600 to 700 men and at the close of the war it had from 600 to 700 ships and about 50,000 men. He made blunders, as when he rejoiced over the capture of Mason and Slidell who were taken from a British ship, and again when he permitted his brother-in-law to accept government contracts.

"He was present at the deathbed of Lincoln but remained in Johnson's cabinet, always having a genuine regard for Lincoln's successor. He returned to Hartford in 1869 and, during the later years of his life wrote various articles for the 'Galaxy' and its successor, the 'Atlantic Monthly,' dying in this city in February, 1878."

Second Generation

"It is a help to mankind, to culture, to piety, to know one's self akin to those who suffered oppression and made noble sacrifices for the sake of conscience, helped to found our great Western civilization, or rallied to the defense of the infant nation when its life hung in the balance."—Congregationalist.

This second generation records the descendants of the five sons of the progenitor, Joseph Loomis, as follows: Nos. 9-20 are descendants of the son Joseph; Nos. 21-33, of the son Deacon John; Nos. 34-44, of the son Thomas; Nos. 45-56, of the son Nathaniel; Nos. 57-66, of the son Lieut. Samuel. This genealogy, recording the male lines of the Loomis Family, does not include within its scope the descendants of Loomis daughters which it is desired to include in subsequent volumes of the female lines.—EDITOR.

1. JOSEPH LOOMIS, b. Messing, Co. Essex, England, a. 1615; m. 1st, Sept. 17, 1646, Sarah, bapt. Feb. 2, 1621, d. Aug. 23, 1653, eldest dau. of Wm. and Phillis (dau. of Richard and Sarah [Osborne] Lyman, who emigrated from High Onger, Co. Essex, Eng., 1631) Hill, of Windsor; m. 2nd, June 28, 1659, Mary Chauncey, who. d. Apr. 22, 1681. Her parentage is not known. The History of the Treman Family in America, p. 1688, places her as the dau. of Pres. Charles Chauncey of Harvard, but this is doubted—at least, no conclusive evidence has ever been found. Neither does Judith Chauncey, spinster, the half-sister of Pres. Charles, mention her in her will dated Dec., 1657, proven March 1, 1657-8 (see Waters' Gleanings, Vol. I, pp. 107-8), wherein she mentions many of her "cousins" and other relatives. Neither does "Pedigree of the Family of Chauncey," compiled by Stephen Tucker, Esq., Somerset Herald in Ordinary, 1884, name a Mary which could possibly have been Mary, wife of Joseph Loomis. On May 3rd, 1643, he had granted him from the Plantation four acres of land, bounded north by land of Joseph Loomis, the elder. In Vol. I, of lands, in office of Sec'y of State of Conn., this entry occurs: Joseph Lumas Jr. owner of land before 1653, at Windsor, Conn. In 1660, by purchase, he acquired land on the east side of the Conn. River. In 1686 he conveyed a part of this land to his son Joseph, and a part to his son John. He was a member of Windsor Troop of horse, in King Phillip's War, 1675-6, (see soldiers in King Phillip's War, by Geo. M. Bodge, 1896), and was granted 6s 8d "on war account." He was a freeman* in 1654, and d. June 26, 1687. 12 ch'n, all b. Windsor.

*OATH OF A FREEMAN.—(See Mass. Col. Rec. I, p. 117.—"I, A. Moreover, I doe solemnly bynde my selfe, in sight of God, that when I shalbe called to give my voice touching any such matter of this state, wherein ffreemen are to deale, I will give my vote & suffrage, as I shall judge in myne owne conscience may best conduce & tend to the publique weale of the body, without respect to p'sons, or fav'r of any man. In 1887 he was app'd executive sec'y of Conn. by Gov. P. C. Lounsbury. In 1886 he was made State Senator. Again his career was so brilliant that Pres. Harrison app'd him U. S. Attorney for the dist. of Conn. in 1892. On Jan. 9, 1901, he was inaugurated the 56th Gov. of Conn., and as Gov., as heretofore, he has won for himself the praise and good will of both parties. One writer has paid him this tribute: "His success is the result of application and ability, and when this is truthfully said of any man it is a saying of which he may well be proud. No man can succeed who does not have qualification or who does not enjoy to a marked degree the confidence of the community. A man must hew his way to the top, but he cannot succeed even so unless he has a character behind the hewing. . . . If (Gov.) McLean had no further record to leave than the one he has already made, Simsbury and Hartford would have the right to enroll him high on its list of worthies, but it is prophesied by citizens of acute observation that he is certain to be chosen to even higher places of usefulness." She d. Aug. 6, 1790. Vernon. Ch'n: 1. Mary, 2. Capt. Alexander, 3. Jabez, 4. Susanna, 5. Dudley B.

616. HAM LOOMIS, b. Westfield, Mass., Nov. 28, 1758; m. 1782(1), Elizabeth Allen, who d. Mch. 21, 1829. Her name is given as Elizabeth Allen, the dau. of "Moses Allen." Her descendants are unable to find anything about Moses Allen's ancestors, but they find a well supported tradition that "Moses Allen" was not Moses Allen, but one Robert McCollach, who served in the army from Jan. 2, 1778, to Mch. 14, 1783, as appears upon the muster rolls of the Continental Line, in Col. Jackson's and Col. Brooks's Regts., as having engaged for the town of Weymouth. Another reference credits him as belonging to Boston and having enlisted for the town of Stoughton. See Vol. 10, of the official publication of "Mass. Soldiers and Sailors in the War of the Revolution." It also appears that at the close of the war, that Regt. of the army of which the said Robert was a member was encamped near Westfield, Mass., and that Robert had a six months' leave of absence, and as the war was practically over, he never reported back for final discharge, and that he changed his name from Robert McCollach to "Moses Allen," fearing that if caught he would be punished for disobeying the order to return. These facts justify us in declaring that the name of "Moses Allen" was assumed, that his right name was Robert McCollach and that he enlisted in the army in 1777 from the town of Weymouth, Mass. Ham was selectman in 1803, for Westfield. He d. Aug. 3, 1827. Southwick, Mass., where b. his 12 ch'n.

When he was married the young men banded together to steal the bride and carry her away and keep her until the bridegroom would pay for a supper and brandy all around. The day of the marriage Asa was to take his bride home on horseback, the usual mode of travel in those days. After starting with her he was overtaken by one after another of the young men on horseback until a dozen or so had collected as if to accompany him. On a given signal the horses were put into confusion in front and about the bridal pair. Just then Trumbull Ives, having been appointed, seized the bride, drew her to the saddle of his own horse and rode away with all possible speed. The bridegroom was a little too expert in tangles and escaped the net laid for him and gave chase for his bride, while the multitude followed with the purpose of aiding the man with the bride to make his escape, but the plans failed in part, for the bride was not taken out of Torrington, but to the Tavern, where supper and liquors were ordered and the kidnapped bride detained until the bridegroom paid the bill. This was not the end of the matter, for Asa sued the while company, all the men were fined, and it was years before all the fines were collected and the matter ended. Orcutt's Torrington. 8 ch'n.

He was with the suffering army at Valley Forge. Tradition holds that he was at one time Sec'y to Gen. Washington, but no

- proof can be found. He was continuously connected with N. Y. State militia from 1794 to 1811, resigning as Lt. Col. He was in business in Providence, R. I., before coming to N. Y., in 1794. Engaged in N. Y. from 1794 to 1826, and afterwards as broker till 1830. He was memb. of N. Y. Sons of Cincinnati. His life is summed up in the following from one of his contemporaries: In manners and character Colonel Loomis was a man of dignity, united with courteousness. A polite regard for the feelings of others, a dominant affability, an habitual flow of good spirits, and a conversational fullness, delighting in interesting reminiscences and pleasant repartee, rendered his company equally agreeable and instructive. Wherever he was a guest every one's path was made smoother, and the social sky was kept clearer. But he never let himself down below the dignified bearing of the school of Washington, to which he evidently belonged. A higher ideal, however, seemed to be his rule of life throughout, and we well remember, when a youth, to have heard the remark from this venerable man that, to his view, Jesus Christ was the most perfect gentleman this world ever saw. He d. Jan. 10, 1836, and was buried in Cherry Valley, N. Y. 4 ch'n.

Y., in the winter of 1799-1800, by ox team, through a wilderness, the distance being abt. 300 miles. It is difficult for the present generation to fully appreciate the trials, wants and privations of the fathers and mothers who broke the way into the early settlements of our country to facilitate the progress of civilization and open the channels and avenues leading to the wealth and enjoyments of the present. 9 ch'n.

May 22, 1849, dau. of Amos and Hannah (Needham) Beard or Baird. He d. North East, Pa., Apr. 15, 1854. Both buried at Ripley, N. Y. Farmer. Whig. Presb'n. Mr. Loomis, at the age of 14, emigrated with his parents to North Granville, Washington Co., N. Y. In Dec., 1799, in company with his brother Oliver, with their families, they commenced their pioneer trip westward, arriving at Buffalo about the 27th of January. Here Mrs. Oliver Loomis gave birth to the 3rd white child born in the village. There being no thoroughfare by land further west they all went into winter quarters until the ice formed upon the Lake sufficient for ox teams. Mr. Loomis and brother procured log tenements for their families, one of which stood upon the same spot upon which Dorshimer's Mansion is erected. There were but three white families and 12 whites, young and old, in the city. On 6th of March they resumed their journey westward upon the ice, the 7th at sundown the little band made a halt at the mouth of Chautauqua Creek and took refreshments. Our beautiful village and Barcelona with all its adjacent country now chequered with beautiful farms and farmhouses with now and then its spiral domes looming up from other villages adjacent, then was nought but a solitary wilderness with scarcely an indication of the human tread save the Indian trail occasionally noticed in its zig-zag windings up and down the borders of the Lake. At midnight they reached their long desired haven, accomplishing in some 4 or 5 months what might be done in 24 hours at the present time. Mr. Loomis settled some 3½ miles south of the village on the station road and like other pioneers following soon after, mistook the value of the lake farms and chose the beech and maple south of the ridge. Afterwards they, with many others, chose another location at the close of the war, settling in the town of Ripley, 4 miles west of our village, where he reared his large family, and remained until deprived of his natural vision; his health impaired he was obliged to retire, spending the last twelve years principally with his daughter, Mrs. O. Nichols, in Westfield. Mr. Loomis embraced the Christian's hope about half a century since and was one of the little band that constituted the only Orthodox church in North East and that in its infancy. Mr. Loomis was a leading member, a man of prayer, his Bible his guide, delighting to contemplate the character of God, as there delineated, expounding the reasonableness of its claims to the anxious inquirer after the truth. He assisted in forming the first Presbyterian church, of which he was a ruling elder, fulfilling its duties until his health became so much impaired as to render it impracticable, but continued his fellowship with that church until his death. Mr. Loomis was one of ten who undertook the responsibility of building a church in Ripley, which, when nearly finished, being burned, they did not lack in courage to undertake the responsibility of building a second. "In consideration of a numerous family, a new farm, means too limited to render it productive, his subscriptions and donations always evinced a large and generous heart, ready to share his proportion with those more ample pecuniarily to bestow towards promoting any Christian object of benevolence; sound in the faith unto the end, when summoned to depart yielded with entire submission to that Savior in whom he had found peace and salvation, leaving 7 sons and 2 daughters with a large circle of friends and relatives to weep over his dissolution but not to mourn as those having no hope." A long letter written by him is well preserved and in possession of his grandson, Charles Joel Loomis. He was Capt. of the militia, 1812-1815, called minute-men. His Regt. was ordered to Buffalo, and during the storming of Fort Erie, he was one of the acting officers in defence of the town from British aggression. On rumor of British vessels seen off shore at Presque-Isle, (now Erie), Pa., the minute men shouldered their rifles and started for Erie. Joel said, "Susie, I go to meet the enemy. If the British land, take old Pete (the horse) and go into the wilderness. I will return home as soon as danger is passed." He was a pioneer settler of Chautauqua Co., N. Y., and was one of the world's best citizens. 9 ch'n.

NOTE.—The Springfield Probate Records show that Sarah K. (or C.), was the dau. of Lyman and Isabel Loomis, and that Isabel was appointed her guardian on Sept. 27, 1853. And the records also show that Isabel d. July 31, 1854, ae. 58 yrs. This seems to show that the name of the wife of Lyman Loomis was Isabel, and not Sarah, as one correspondent gave it.

NOTE.—The Springfield Probate Records has the following entry: George E. Loomis d. Sept. 29, 1864. His next of kin were Roxana Belden, of Chicopee, Mass., mother; Wm. M. Loomis, Nashua, N. H., brother; Emily Cooley, Chicopee, sister; Mary J. Granger, Middlefield, Mass., sister, and Henry S. Allen, Nashua, N. H., half-brother. (Was Nancy [3575] the Mary J. mentioned in Records?)

He served in the State Legislature, 1829 and 1831. He d. at his home in Troy, N. Y., June 3, 1866. The following obituary notice, copied from the Troy (N. Y.) Times.—June 4, 1866—gives a complete resume of his life and labors: "This well known and highly respected citizen died after a protracted illness, yesterday, at the age of seventy-five years. He first engaged prominently in business in Lee, Mass., in the manufacture of powder, about the year 1816. He continued there some 15 years, when he * * * removed to Schaghticoke, and established the powder manufacture there, where it has ever since been continued. * * * He conducted the business, first in his own name, and then in connection with Judge Nicholas M. Masters, and subsequently under the firm of Loomis, Masters & Swift. After 10 years residence in Schaghticoke, he removed—1842—to Troy, and erected and resided in until his death, the unique, spacious, semigothic homestead on the east side of Washington Park.
- "In politics Mr. Loomis started as a Jeffersonian Republican, and when a portion of that party took the name of Democracy, he went with it, and was one of the few who under all the various issues raised, and political transformations effected, 'never fell from grace,' unless his support of Van Buren and opposition to Cass, in 1842, might be regarded as showing dereliction to Democratic duty. As a resident of Schaghticoke, he was always active and influential in support of his party, and was often chosen President of the Democratic county conventions.

"He contributed liberally for party purposes, but, although often urged to do so, he could never be induced to accept a party nomination for office. After his removal to Troy he continued in a less active way to contribute to the support of his party. Yet nothing could induce him to accept the nomination for mayor, frequently tendered him, and not infrequently under circumstances where nomination was equivalent to success. His health had been failing for years and his death was not unanticipated. He leaves a wife and one surviving child, the wife of Hon John Wentworth, representative of the Chicago district in Congress." He affiliated with the Cong., and, in Troy, with the Presb'n church. See Atwater Gen., p. 254, and Wentworth Gen., p. 715. Troy, N. Y. 2 ch'n, b. Lee, Mass.

He helped to revise the Ill. state constitution, 1861. She died at her father's home, Troy, N. Y., Feb. 5, 1870, attended devotedly by her husband. She was the idol of her father, and traveled much with him, and had every advantage money could give her, yet withal cared but little for so-called gay society. NOTE.—The following biographical sketch of Gen. Lee is submitted:

James Grafton Carleton Lee, the husband of Sarah Loomis, was born at Hamilton, Canada. He was educated at Victoria College, Coburg, Canada, as a Civil Engineer. After graduation he came to the United States, 1837, settling at Cincinnati, Ohio, where he married Sarah Loomis.

At the outbreak of the Civil War, Moses DeWitt Loomis a brother of Sarah Loomis, was appointed a Captain and Quartermaster of Volunteers. Young Lee went with him as his clerk. Captain Loomis died in April of 1862, and J. G. C. Lee was appointed Captain and Quartermaster U. S. Volunteers in his place. In 1864, Captain Lee was transferred to the regular army as a Quartermaster, and remained in the army the rest of his life, being promoted Major in 1879, Lieutenant-Colonel in 1892 and Colonel in 1897. He retired from active service on August 12, 1900, and in April, 1904, was appointed a Brigadier General on the retired list of the United States Army.

General Lee served with the Army of the Potomac during the Civil War, being Chief Quartermaster of various divisions, and of the Cavalry Corps. His greatest work, however, was in charge of the Quartermaster's Depot at Alexandria, Virginia. This depot supplied the Army of the Potomac, and on its proper handling depended the welfare of that Army as regards supplies. There had been more or less dissatisfaction with the management of this depot on the part of the Army authorities, and in 1863 on the recommendation of General Rufus Ingalls, Chief Quartermaster

Army of the Potomac, Captain Lee, then twenty-seven years old, was placed in charge of this depot. His employees were numbered in the thousands, his disbursements were millions a month, his duties embraced not only the depot proper, but the charge of all the water transportation on the Potomac River and the adjacent waters. Captain Lee's energy, executive ability, power of impressing men and deriving from them their best efforts, and his tact, made him fully equal to his enormous responsibilities, and from the date of his assignment to the Alexandria Depot there were no complaints from the authorities of the Army of the Potomac as to the workings of this depot. It was his successful work in this capacity that won him his commission in the Regular Army.

After the Civil War, General Lee served all over the United States, and wherever he was stationed there was left a record of duty well done on his part.

When the Spanish War came on, General Lee was made Chief Quartermaster at the Volunteer camp at Chickamauga, Georgia, where his knowledge, experience and executive ability were of untold value to the Government.

Since his retirement from the active service, General Lee makes his home at San Antonio, Texas, in the winter, and Hague-on-Lake George during the summer. Wherever he has lived his public spirit, mental and physical activity, kindly disposition and devotion to the welfare of others, have made him a prominent citizen of the community, and one who has enjoyed the esteem and respect of his fellow citizens.

Cochran, who d. Denver, Col., 1897. In 1836, he rem. from Pa. to Wis. by the Lake route, to the western coast of Lake Mich. Chicago and Milwaukee were then only flourishing Indian trading posts, and to him a pioneer, among the first of the name in Wisconsin, then spelled "Wiskonsan," these posts offered no inducements. But he bought a quarter section of land in what is now the third ward of Milwaukee, but made his home in Franklin Twp., Milwaukee Co. He was one of the gov't surveying party that laid out the thoroughfare called the "Green Bay Road," and it is a notable fact that the only temperance man of the party was the only one who escaped frost bites during the rigorously cold weather, and he was Isaac C. Loomis, an ardent and zealous Washingtonian. About 1843, he removed to Port Washington, Wis., where he settled for a permanent home. Here he was Co. Treas. for several years, postmaster, and during the civil war assistant assessor for the district. At this time his home, as well as homes of other U. S. officials, was raided by a foreign element who resisted the drafting of their men.

He rec'd a commission from Gov. Doty, signed by state sec'y A. P. Field, dated Apr. 19, 1843, making him "Colonel of the 9th Regt., Wiskonsan Militia," hence he was early regarded as a prominent and capable man. After the civil war he made his home in Clarksville, Tenn., but spent his last years, from 1875, in Arkansas City, Kan., where he d. Oct. 9, 1882. A member of the Masonic fraternity. Rep. (abolitionist). Meth. 6 ch'n.

After a period at Lawrence Univ'y, Appleton, Wis., he entered gov't employment, early in the Civil War, as paymaster, under his Uncle J. W. Brigden, of Erie, Pa. Their field was in the Western Miss. division, and they were both on the ill-fated steamer "Ruth" that burned on the river. Loomis and another young man secured a small boat and with great courage and perseverance, went again and again to the burning boat and succeeded in rescuing every person on board. For several years he practiced dentistry in Fond du Lac, Wis. Later he took and completed a medical course in a Medical College of Chicago, and practiced there. In 1876 he rem. to Cal., locating in Alameda, opp. San Francisco. He here spent his remaining days, in his profession, and d. Feb. 9, 1906.

Conn. was the first to change this law when Eng. no longer governed the Colonies, and a man could support any denomination he pleased, by presenting a certificate. In 1818, the law was again changed so that a man need support no denomination. Anson Loomis withdrew from the support of the church in 1819 and soon after joined the Seneca Lodge of Masons." He d. Williams Coll., 1809. He was one of the Five Original Haystack men who brought to fruition the first Foreign Missionary Society in America. A prayer meeting (an outgrowth of a revival of religion) was held every Saturday afternoon in a maple grove near Williams College. One Saturday in August, 1806, a hot and sultry day, there were only five present, all under-classmen. The Five Immortals who met that day as usual at the maple grove were Francis L. Robbins, Harvey Loomis, Byram Green, James Richards, and the originator of the idea, Samuel J. Mills, room-mate of Harvey Loomis. A thunderstorm drove them from the grove, and they retreated to the north of two haystacks and there continued the meeting, and it was at this time and place that Mills first proposed that they carry the gospel to the Heathen of Asia. In 1867 was dedicated the Haystack monument. It stands where they met, and bears the inscription, "The Birth Place of American Foreign Missions," and beneath this inscription are the names of these five immortals. (For a fuller account see p. 497, of The Congregationalist and Christian World, 7 April, 1906). He served as minister of the First Cong. Ch. and Society in Bangor, Me., for thirteen years. He left his home on Sunday morning, Jan. 2, 1825, went to his church, stamped the snow from his feet, brushed the snow from his shoulders, entered his pulpit, and died just as service time came. He was an earnest, sincere and simple man, ever ready to do the simple duty at hand, and by his kindly advice and honest life Bangor was made better. A full account of his ministry and life there is found in the Historical Address, by Rev. Charles H. Cutler, D. D., delivered at Bangor, at the unveiling of an enduring bronze tablet, Oct. 29, 1905, in memory of the Rev. Harvey Loomis. Bangor, Me. Cong. clergyman. She afterwards removed to Torrington, Conn. Projector of, and with his brothers, and brother-in-law, incorporator of The Loomis Institute. Because of the death of his own, as well as those of his brothers and sister's children, he conceived the idea of this Institute, and so "In 1874, James C. Loomis, Hezekiah B. Loomis, Osbert B. Loomis, H. Sidney Hayden and his wife, and John Mason Loomis were constituted a corporate body by the name of the Loomis Institute. This Institute is designed for the gratuitous education of persons of the age of twelve years and upwards, and is to be located on the original homestead of Joseph Loomis* on "The Island," in Windsor, Conn. This homestead is situated on elevated ground on the west bank of the Connecticut river, and commands an uncommonly fine view of the river and valley. Since the death of Joseph Loomis this site has always been in the possession of some one of his lineal descendants to the present time. It is the design of the corporators to do what they can to endow this Institution, and in this they desire the co-operation of all the Loomis family, that the Institution may become a lasting monument to the memory of Joseph Loomis, and a blessing to the town which he selected for his refuge from the annoyances to which Puritans were subjected in the mother country." He d. Sept. 16, 1877. Bridgeport, Conn. 3 ch'n, b. Conn.

*NOTE.—Marshall, in his Ancestry of Gen. Grant, says: "Mr. Joseph Loomis selected as a homestead one of the most desirable places in Windsor. It was located in the north end of what is called the "Island," overlooking the Farmington River, and commanding an extensive view of the surrounding country, including the Conn. valley, the Windsor meadows and the Mts. on the east. No finer location could have been selected by Mr. Loomis. His near neighbors were Henry Wolcott, George Phelps and Matthew Allen, who were the best of the pioneer families."

With his bros. he was one of the incorporators of the Loomis Institute. Four years after the charter was granted and but a short time before his death he penned the following, which was signed by all the living corporators and by Mary H. Loomis:—

"FAMILY TESTIMONIAL."

"Somewhere near the termination of the year 1871, or the beginning of 1872, a sentiment, born of the strong natural love and sympathy between us, and intensified by the loss of all our children, crystallized into a desire to leave some memento of our lives, failing the natural one of succession; and this finally took the form of a free educational establishment, called the Loomis Institute.

"Those of us now living, admonished by the death of our brothers, James and Samuel, that whatever we wish to do, or make known, must be done now; and desiring to make a record of our united sentiments for ourselves, and all who in the future may be interested in the story of the love and tenderness we bear to each other, moving us to stand together, supporting at the close of our lives a common purpose, pledge ourselves to the support, care and personal comfort of each other, and to remain true and signally faithful to the Loomis Institute, acknowledging and accepting the duties incident, cheerfully, lovingly, and devotedly; so that nothing short of death shall divert us from our purpose of mutual support; hoping and trusting that some good may come to posterity, from the harvest, poor though it may be, of our lives."

That the site of the Loomis Institute shall be the original homestead of Pioneer Joseph Loomis must endure the Institution to every descendant of Joseph, for our hearthstone is thereby forever dedicated to one of the noblest of purposes. And may we all share in the sentiment and purpose as set forth in these words, found in Col. John Mason Loomis's will: "Hoping to leave some mark for good upon our race and time, we present to the Loomis Family this their Hearth Stone, and endow it with all we have; inviting them to rally round it as their shrine, from which their boys and girls shall take the highest inspirations for better and grander lives, from the best of their race who have gone before, and, like them, ever keeping the banner of human progress, honor and manhood, to the front." 2 ch'n—b. 2537. COL. JOHN MASON LOOMIS, b. Windsor, Conn., Jan. 5, 1825; m. Aug. 20, 1849, Mary Jane, dau. of Milo and Harriet (Lynde) Hunt. He was educated for U. S. Navy service at the Conn. Literary Institute. As Col. of the 26th Ill. Inf., 1862, serving as brig. and division commander until 1864, he was entitled to and merited a commission of Brigadier General, and the following letter to our Military Annalist, Mr. John H. Loomis (No. 6996), from Major Horatio L. Wait, of Chicago, who was a Paymaster in the service of the U. S. and an old friend of Col. Loomis, explains why it was more honorable to him to be "turned down" than to receive a commission and keep still:

"Concerning the military record of the late Colonel John Mason Loomis, 26th Illinois Infantry, I would refer to the enclosed Memorial prepared by the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States at the time of his death, August 2, 1900, as to the reason why he was not given a commission as Brigadier General when three times recommended therefor by General Grant and General Sherman. I would refer to the fact which you probably know, that many speculators in cotton, during the War of the Rebellion, tried to get cotton through the lines improperly. Colonel Loomis, in the conscientious exercise of his duty, prevented this to such an extent as to excite the spitefulness of many of the larger operators who had so much political influence that they were able to prevent the issuing of a commission as Brigadier General to Colonel Loomis. These facts were told to me by Colonel Loomis, during his lifetime, but the names, dates and other data I am now unable to give in detail, but the main facts speak for themselves. An officer of unusual efficiency, who won the approbation of all his superiors, performed the duty of a general officer, during most of the war on the rank and pay of a colonel—and though thrice recommended for the needed promotion, it was not made for some mysterious reason."

JOHN MASON LOOMIS.

JOHN MASON LOOMIS was born January 5th, 1825, at Windsor, Connecticut. He was descended from an old English family, of which Joseph Loomis, of Braintree, Essex County, England, was the first to come to America, on July 17th, 1638, settling in Boston. Afterwards, in 1640, he purchased a large tract of land in Windsor, Connecticut, which has remained ever since in the Loomis family.

The parents of our late Companion were James Loomis, a native of Windsor, and Abigail Sherwood Chaffee Loomis, of Greenfield Hill, Fairfield County, Connecticut. James Loomis was a merchant and mill owner, who, being a public spirited and patriotic man, of military aptitude and skill, served for many years as Colonel in the First Regiment of Connecticut State Guards. He named his son, John Mason, after a famous officer of the Colonial forces, distinguished for gallantry during the French and Indian War.

As a youth our companion received a thorough academic education and such a business training as was natural in a thrifty and industrious family. He inherited all the martial spirit of his ancestry, and took so active a part in the military affairs of his locality that he attained the rank of Captain in the State Militia at the age of eighteen. He then applied for a position in the United States Navy and received a warrant as Midshipman, but opportunities for active service were so rare then that he awaited orders until further delay seemed useless. Being desirous of seeing something of the world he went to sea in the ship "Huntress," a merchant vessel engaged in the East India trade, visiting China, the Philippines and other countries.

Hon. James Chaffee Loomis,
1807-1877.

On his return he came to Chicago in 1845, then he went to Milwaukee, where he engaged in the lumber business with M. W. Clark & Co.

He was married in 1849 to Miss Mary Hunt, daughter of Milo Hunt, of Sherburne, Chenango County, New York. He leaves her now surviving him as his sorrowing widow.

In 1852 he transferred the main portion of the lumber business to Chicago, establishing it under the firm name of Loomis & Ludington at the corner of Madison and Market streets. He also maintained a branch thereof at Twelfth street bridge.

Soon after settling in Chicago Mr. Loomis began to take an active interest in the organization of the Chicago Light Guard, which became a very popular and efficient military body, of which he was elected an officer. At the breaking out of the War of the Rebellion he clearly foresaw what a serious conflict was inevitable, therefore he promptly exerted himself in the raising of a regiment of carefully selected men. He was so successful in this that it was quickly filled up. Owing to his proficiency in military science he was tendered the command of this fine body of men, which he promptly accepted, and they were mustered into the service of the United States as the Twenty-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, on August 1st, 1861.

Colonel Loomis thereupon bade farewell to his prosperous business and comfortable home, entering upon the arduous campaign which he clearly saw before him with all the earnestness of true patriotism. His varied experiences had given him a keen knowledge of men; his technical skill and indomitable personal courage had in other respects so well fitted him for the undertaking that it soon became manifest that he was a born leader of men, quite equal to all the emergencies of warfare. His command quickly became animated with the spirit of their leader, so that the war record of the regiment became most honorable and brilliant. It participated in fifty-seven battles or skirmishes, and the marches made during the three years of its service amounted to over sixty-nine hundred miles.

When the regiment returned to Springfield, Illinois, for re-enlistment, it was most enthusiastically received, and Governor Richard Yates then said:

"When I selected Colonel Loomis as the commanding officer of the regiment, it was not because he had raised it. I selected him because of his ability to command, for his military talent, and for his devotion to his country; and I was not mistaken in the man. He has proved equal to the emergency. The names of New Madrid, of Island No. 10, of Iuka, Corinth, Farmington, Vicksburg, Jackson, Tunnel Hill, and Chattanooga, which are inscribed upon its battle-scarred flags, and upon those fields which its valor won, afford ample evidence of the valuable service which was performed there. We have watched you through long and tedious marches, through sufferings and trials. In that memorable battle of Tunnel Hill we saw you march undismayed at the head of the army and receive for your valor the praise of your commanding generals, Grant and Sherman."

His fitness for leadership, and his executive ability must have been quickly discerned by his superior officers, for it appears that during his service in the field he was most of the time either acting with his regiment as an independent command or was in command of a brigade or a division. He served in the—2nd Division, Army of the Mississippi.

1st Division, 16th Army Corps.

4th Division, 15th Army Corps, Army of the Tennessee.

With the 26th Illinois Infantry Volunteers he exercised an independent command in Northern Missouri in the year 1861, and until February, 1862.

Commanded the 1st Brigade, 2d Division, Army of the Mississippi in 1862.

Commanded the 2d Brigade, 2d Division, 13th Army Corps, Army of the Tennessee, in 1862.

Commanded the 1st Brigade, 1st Division, 16th Army Corps, Army of the Tennessee, in 1863.

Commanded the 1st Division, 16th Army Corps, Army of the Tennessee, in 1863.

Commanded the 1st Brigade, 4th Division, 15th Army Corps, Army of the Tennessee, 1863, 1864.

Commanded a Division composed of Colonel Burchbeck's Brigade, 11th Army Corps, Army of the Potomac, and his own 1st Brigade, 4th Division, 15th Army Corps, Army of the Tennessee, at Chattanooga, and on the right in General W. T. Sherman's attack on Missionary Ridge.

Commanded the rear guard of the 13th Army Corps, Army of the Tennessee, December, 1862, to January, 1863, from Oxford, Mississippi, to La Grange, Tennessee.

He participated in the engagements at—

Point Pleasant.
Farmington.
Vicksburg.
Mission Ridge.
Holly Springs, Miss.

Island Number 10.
Siege of Corinth.
Smith's Farm.
Jackson.
Relief of Knoxville.
La Grange, Tenn.

Was commandant of post at Oxford, Mississippi.

He was recommended for promotion to Brigadier General by General U. S. Grant, in December, 1862; by General W. T. Sherman in December, 1863, and again by General U. S. Grant, in April, 1864.

For some unexplained reason, to the regret of his many friends, he never received the promotion, to which he was justly entitled.

In the St. Louis Globe Democrat there recently appeared a notice of Gen. H. V. Boynton's address to the Army and Navy Club, concerning the Chattanooga campaign, which stated that:

"The audience embraced distinguished ex-Confederates as well as ex-Union officers, together with many officers of the regular army. Gen. Roger Q. Mills, of Texas, was one of the ex-Confederates present. His brigade was one of the three or four which Cleburne marched to the northern end of Missionary Ridge and successfully pitted against Sherman in the hard fighting for possession of Tunnel Hill.

"When Gen. Boynton had concluded his talk Gen. Mills showed on the map where his brigade had fought.

"There was an incident," he said, "connected with that battle which I recollect very distinctly. I am not able to tell it all, and perhaps some one here can complete the story with the name of the officer. Down below where we lay on Tunnel Hill was a large open field. Beyond that was some woods. A Federal brigade came through the woods and out into the open field. There the troops re-formed their lines. The officer in command was perfectly cool. He took his time, and the troops formed as if they were on dress parade. They were within easy range and we fired into them. They broke and went back into the woods. In a few minutes they came back and formed again in the same deliberate way. When the officer in command had got them formed to suit him, he made them lie down, while he rode up and down the front, as if waiting for orders. Gen. Hardee came up to my brigade while we were firing on them and said: "Stop shooting at those men. It's murder."

"We stopped. Some time afterward I talked with McDowell about Hardee's order, and asked him what he thought of the situation. He said: 'It was not murder; it was war.'

"Hardee was an officer of the regular army; he had fought under the flag, and I suppose he couldn't stand seeing it fired on when carried by such brave men. The way that brigade and its commander acted under fire impressed me, and I have often wondered who the officer was."

"One of the officers present was able to tell to whom Gen. Mills' tribute of bravery applied. He was Gen. Carman. After a careful examination of the map Gen. Carman decided that the brigade was that of Gen. John M. Loomis, composed of the Twenty-sixth and Ninetieth Illinois and the Twelfth and One Hundredth Indiana."

Colonel Loomis resigned from the service April 30, 1864, having so greatly overtaxed his powers of endurance that it became imprudent for him to continue longer in the field.

Upon the return to civil life after the hardships and dangers of his war service, Colonel Loomis displayed in a vigorous manner the same courage and skill that had made him conspicuous in the field. He found that his former prosperous trade facilities had disappeared, and that his old home had been destroyed by fire. He immediately resumed the lumber business, but being without any capital he had to commence at the beginning. By his diligence and good judgment he gradually built up a trade that became so profitable as to make him quite independent.

He acquired an interest in extensive pine lands near Manistee and Ludington, Michigan, which, being wisely developed and their products marketed with good judgment, afforded very large returns. The Pere Marquette Lumber Company was organized by him to carry on this branch of the business, and he remained its president to the time of his death. The sale of the lumber in Chicago was managed by Colonel Loomis and his friend of the war period, John McLaren, under the firm name of John Mason Loomis & Co., up to 1885, when Colonel Loomis withdrew from the active business of the firm. For over forty years he had been a leading figure in this branch of industry, and no man therein had a higher reputation or was more universally respected.

Colonel Loomis, though shrewd and thrifty, was a man of generous nature, ever ready to respond to the calls of charity, and cheerfully gave of his means and time to aid the deserving, or his friends among the old soldiers in their hours of need.

After the great conflagration in 1871, the work of the Chicago Relief and Aid Society became of great importance and assumed vast proportions. Colonel Loomis entered into this with the same zeal and masterly administrative powers that he had shown in war and in business. He gave his time and his means freely to this great work during the time when the utmost energy and discretion were necessary to properly distribute the lavish aid that was contributed from all sources to the stricken community. As one of the officers of this great charity he rendered such efficient services that they were made the subject of especial commendatory resolutions.

The desire of Colonel Loomis to so order his affairs as to be of the most use to his fellow men, and his good judgment in the method of accomplishing this result, is shown clearly in the disposition of his estate.

His widow receives the income thereof during her life, after which the entire property—over one million dollars in value—is to go toward the maintaining of the Loomis Institute at his old home, Windsor, Connecticut, which, as stated by Colonel Loomis, is to be "A shrine from which boys and girls shall take the highest inspirations for better and grander lives from the best of their race who have gone before, and like them, ever keeping the banner of human progress, honor and manhood to the front."

It would seem probable that if the beneficiaries of the Institute do this with the fidelity displayed by the generous donor, that the munificent bequest will not have been made in vain.

Colonel Loomis never lost his interest in military affairs. He rendered efficient services to the State Militia, raising large sums of money therefor when it was in need. He always maintained the most cordial relations with the officers of the regular service, and was instrumental in the organization of the Illinois Commandery of the Loyal Legion, being one of the Charter Members, having been elected for that purpose by the Pennsylvania Commandery, in 1876. He was Vice-Commander from 1880 to 1883, and succeeded Gen. P. H. Sheridan as Commander in 1884.

He was a Comrade of George H. Thomas Post, No. 5, of the G. A. R. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and was a member of Grace Episcopal Church, Chicago.

He was prominent in club circles, being a member of the Chicago, Calumet, Union, Washington Park, and Onwentsia Clubs, and in all respects performed the duties of a good citizen with the fidelity which had ever characterized his acts during a long, active and eventful life.

5719. CORP. LEWIS SQUIRE, b. Branford, 1842, d. (killed) 1864, in U. S. army, at the Battle of the Wilderness. No knowledge came to any of his family as to the manner of his death until 40 years after; the G. A. R. held a reunion in Chicago, at which Edwin Charles Loomis was present, and in relating striking stories at the camp fire, Comrade Castner related, among other things, the following with respect to one Lewis Loomis, which appeared in the Daily Chicago Record the next day. It reads: "Here I was with Loomis a few minutes before he was killed. He was standing upon the inner edge of the breastworks and loading and firing with cool and deliberate aim. Suddenly a tall Georgian leaped upon the opposite side of the breastwork and started toward him. Twice was Loomis wounded, yet he held his ground. Then the rebel soldier and he began a hand-to-hand battle. I tried to shoot the rebel, but as Loomis got in the way I did not dare. Suddenly the big fellow raised his gun and the next instant plunged the bayonet through the body of poor Loomis. Then with the rebel's bayonet still sticking in his body, he managed to plunge his bayonet into the Georgian's body, and the two men fell side by side—dead."

He attended public and private schools, and early identified himself with the manufacturing interests of the state. Removed to New London in 1848. He entered the woolen mill industry at Montville and became the owner of the Rockwell mills at Norwich. Constructed, owned and managed the steam-woolen mills at New London, the first of the kind ever built there. In the marvelous development of the woolen products of Conn. from 1840 to 1870, Col. F. B. Loomis was one of the principal factors. During the Civil War his manufacturing was on a more extensive scale than that of any other individual of the state, employing 1,200 persons day and night for government contracts. During the Rebellion the First Nat. Bank of New London, which he organized, was the Gov't depository for Eastern Conn., the deposits at one time being $4,000,000. Col. Loomis was Pres. of the first war meeting held in the old court house at New London on the eve'g of the ever memorable 12th of Apr., 1861. Pres. 1st Nat. Bank, New London, Ct. From the records of patriotic acts, 1864, we note the following:

"As one instance of the desire to help, which was universally felt, we may mention the offer of Colonel Francis B. Loomis, of New London, Ct., to garrison Fort Trumbull with citizen soldiers for one hundred days at his own expense, thus releasing the veterans, by whom it was garrisoned, to go to the front."

The President replied to this offer as follows:—

My Dear Sir:

Executive Mansion, Washington, May 12, 1864.

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 28th of April, in which you offer to replace the present garrison at Fort Trumbull with volunteers, which you propose to raise at your own expense. While it seems inexpedient at this time to accept this proposition, on account of the special duties now devolving upon the garrison mentioned, I cannot pass unnoticed such a meritorious instance of individual patriotism. Permit me, for the Government, to express my cordial thanks to you for this generous and public-spirited offer, which is worthy of note among the many called forth in these times of national trial.

I am very truly your obedient servant,

F. B. Loomis, Esq.

A. LINCOLN.

Prof. Loomis studied and received his early education under the direction and instruction of his father, and he is reported to have had, even in those early years, a remarkable mind. When a boy of ten years he read the New Testament in the original Greek. He attended for one winter the academy at Munson, Mass. At fourteen years of age he was admitted to Yale College, but did not enter until one year later, owing to his health. He graduated in 1830, with the degree of A. B., and afterwards received the degree of A. M.

Immediately after graduating, in 1830, he was employed at Mount Hope Institute near Baltimore, Md., to teach mathematics. In the fall of 1831 he went to Andover Theological Seminary with the intention of becoming a minister. This intention was not carried out, however, for upon receiving the appointment of tutor of mathematics in Yale College, he returned to New Haven, where he remained for three years and one term. In 1835, he and Prof. Olmsted of Yale College, were the first in this country to discover the return of Halley's comet. In the early part of the year 1836, he was appointed professor of mathematics, natural philosophy and astronomy in Western Reserve College, at Hudson, Ohio. He spent the first year in Europe, principally in Paris, attending lectures of Biot, Poisson, Arago, Dulong, Pouillet and others. Interesting descriptions of what he saw are contained in letters which he sent to the "Ohio Observer" and printed at that time in that publication. He returned to Hudson in 1837, and fitted up an observatory there where he labored perseveringly for seven years. His salary, of $600 per annum, was paid largely in barter, produce, etc., and even this was very much in arrears. It was a subject of congratulation at one time with him that all of his bills more than two years old had been paid. He said in one of his letters that there was not money enough in the college treasury to take him out of the state.

He was employed by the United States Government, 1840-1845, in several scientific matters, including that of determining the difference of longitude between New York City and other important places. He was also the first to determine the velocity of the electric telegraph.

In 1844, he accepted the professorship of mathematics and natural philosophy in the university of the City of New York, and it conferred upon him in 1854 the Doctorate of Laws. While there he prepared his famous series of text books on mathematics, which he did at such times as he could spare from his regular college work. These text books have ever since been extensively used in schools and colleges, and were the foundation of the fortune which he left at the time of his death. Over 600,000 copies have been sold. Some were used in England, and some were translated into the Chinese and Arabic languages.

1. The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that this is essential for ensuring the integrity of the financial statements and for providing a clear audit trail. The text also mentions that proper record-keeping is necessary for compliance with various regulatory requirements.

2. The second part of the document focuses on the role of internal controls in preventing and detecting errors and fraud. It highlights that a strong internal control system is crucial for the reliability of the financial reporting process. The document suggests that management should regularly evaluate and update the internal controls to address any changes in the business environment.

3. The third part of the document addresses the issue of asset protection. It discusses the need for physical and digital security measures to safeguard the company's assets. The text also mentions the importance of having a disaster recovery plan in place to ensure business continuity in the event of an emergency.

4. The fourth part of the document discusses the importance of transparency and communication in financial reporting. It emphasizes that providing clear and concise information to stakeholders is essential for building trust and confidence. The text also mentions that management should be proactive in addressing any concerns or questions raised by investors and other interested parties.

5. The fifth part of the document focuses on the role of the board of directors in overseeing the financial reporting process. It highlights that the board has a fiduciary duty to ensure that the financial statements are accurate and reliable. The document suggests that the board should establish a committee to monitor the financial reporting process and to report to the board on any issues that arise.

6. The sixth part of the document discusses the importance of staying up-to-date on the latest developments in financial reporting. It emphasizes that the financial reporting environment is constantly evolving, and management must stay informed about new standards and regulations. The text also mentions that management should seek professional advice from accountants and other experts to ensure compliance with the latest requirements.

He resigned and went to Princeton for one year, but returned to his old professorship in the university of New York, where he remained until 1860. In that year he was called to the professorship of natural philosophy and astronomy at Yale, in place of Prof. Olmsted, who had then just deceased. For 29 years thereafter he worked incessantly at New Haven, until his death on August 15th, 1889.

He was a member of the U. S. National Academy of Sciences; of the American Philosophical Society, and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences; honorary member of the Philosophical Society of Glasgow; of the Royal Irish Academy; of the Royal Meteorological Society of London; and of the Società Meteorologica Italiana.

The general use of his scientific works in the education of the youth of this country has resulted in his doing more than any other man in establishing the sciences upon such a secure educational basis, that the attacks of those, opposed to scientific study, have been of no avail.

After his sons had completed their college course, they left New Haven, and Prof. Loomis lived in his apartments alone, having as his associates, however, his books, his papers, and his work, to which he was ever devotedly engaged. His printed contributions to science and his publications are of a high order and number 164. They include his admirable series of text books on mathematics, his observations, examinations and treatises on astronomy and meteorology, and his thorough and complete genealogy of the descendants of Joseph Loomis. His industry was untiring. We have an example of it in the observations which he made of the variations of the magnetic needle, which he was studying, while he was a tutor at Yale College. The variations of the needle were not then known with any degree of accuracy. Commonly it was supposed to be constant, according to the saying, "True as the needle to the pole." Tutor Loomis wanted to show the facts, so he borrowed from the college its best compass and installed it on the wall of his room in North College, and made, at regular intervals of one hour apart, observations of the variations of that needle for seventeen or eighteen hours per day for a period of thirteen months. A work which requires a person to be at a given place regularly each hour for seventeen or eighteen hours each day for thirteen months, is most exacting. It only tended to illustrate, however, in Tutor Loomis the method and system, perseverance and industry, with which he was so conspicuously, by nature, endowed. He made the first published charts of the daily motions of the magnetic needle for the United States.

He crystallized the statement of his life work in his inaugural address, at Hudson, Ohio, in 1838, when he said: "It is essential to the best interests of society that there should be a certain class of men devoted exclusively to the cultivation of abstract science without any regard to its practical applications; and consequently that such men instead of being a dead weight upon society are to be ranked among the greatest benefactors of their race." His wonderful investigations in Terrestrial Magnetism, were fully in keeping with this proposition, and in this field, in which he was the leading spirit, he made the most important contributions to human knowledge, and to his patient observations, tabulations and charts the world of to-day is greatly indebted.

In meteorology he was pre-eminent. Whatever progress has been made in the science of the atmosphere, the winds, the storms and the temperature, and whatever of value the reports of these phenomena are to the mariner, the agriculturist and the people in general, is primarily due to him. He invented, and used the system of charts still universally employed by the leading governments of the world, representing by lines the deviation of the barometric pressure from the normal, by a series of lines showing the places at which the temperature was above or below the normal, and by arrows of proper direction and length, indicating the direction and intensity of the wind, etc. To him, more than any other person in the world, is due the establishing of the Weather Bureau of the United States.

Notwithstanding Prof. Loomis' wonderful energy and persistent labor, we find that he had steady nerves, and a keen sense of humor. One day he was teaching the first division of the class of 1873 at Yale in natural philosophy, and was illustrating an air-gun. Placing a small card at one end of the platform, and standing at the opposite end, he spoke about the instantaneity and accuracy, within a certain specified distance and range, of this implement, and raising his arm, he fired, perforating the card about in its center. The class applauded him heartily. Going on with his illustration he made another shot which seemed to have missed the card, at which the whole division shouted. The professor, however, stood immovable, and when the college boys recovered from their hilarity, he said to them: "You will notice, gentlemen, that the second shot was quite as accurate as the first, enlarging a little the orifice made by the first shot." Upon investigation that was found to be true, whereat the laugh was upon the boys, and they most enthusiastically cheered the professor.

His work on genealogy was born of an interest which he could not explain. He agreed with his friends that he thought it strange and was surprised at his devoting so much time to that subject. He, however, realized its ultimate value and importance. He began the collection of materials about forty years before the first volume was published, and although he said in his prefaces to the several editions, that he did the work for recreation, we know from the results obtained, and from his methods of doing work, that it required several solid years of the most careful, systematic, well directed and incessant labor, as well as the expenditure of a large amount of money, voluntarily contributed by him. Nearly all of his vacations during the latter part of his life were spent in that way. He visited Europe four times and devoted considerable attention while there to finding out about the earlier history of the family in England and upon the continent. In 1870 he published the first edition of the male descendants of Joseph Loomis containing 4,340 names. He himself regarded it as a rough draft of a complete edition to be subsequently issued and printed it mainly for his own convenience in making corrections and improvements, and also for the sake of interesting others, and thus obtaining further data from them, so as to make a final edition as correct and complete as it was possible to have it. He soon found what every one else has discovered sooner or later, that he could obtain only limited information by correspondence, and he therefore made visits to various parts of the country, canvassing from house to house to find the names and principal events connected with the lives of the family which he was recording. He examined county maps, tax lists, town and probate records, town, city and county directories, and every other source of information within reach, and, having arranged the name of localities, he visited each family personally. In this way he made a pretty thorough canvass over every part of New England and New York state, over nearly every part of New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Northern Ohio, and of several of the cities in the west. After five years of further work he published in 1875 the second edition of the male branch, in which are given 8,686 names of "The descendants of Joseph Loomis, who came from Braintree, England, in the year 1638, and settled in Windsor, Conn., in 1839."

Not satisfied with his researches in the male branch, he began the stupendous task of collecting the female descendants of Joseph Loomis, taking notably the families of Olmsted, Hull, Skinner, Tudor, White, Laffin, Colt, Buel, Rockwell, Noble, Sheldon, Root, Webster, and many others.

In 1880 he issued a two volume edition containing about 19,000 descendants of Joseph Loomis in the female branches. During the last nine years of his life he was unremitting in his work and left behind him at his death in 1889 manuscripts containing many corrections and additions to both the male and female publications. These manuscripts have been generously placed at the disposal of the annalists, by his son Henry Bradford Loomis, who has shown a deep interest in the new edition of the genealogy. The manuscripts have been of great value, and the thanks of each person interested are due to him for the use which he has permitted the annalists to make of them.

Dr. Loomis gave to Yale University more than $300,000 to endow the Astronomical Observatory, limiting the use of the income to the payment of salaries of persons whose time should be exclusively devoted to the making, and reduction of astronomical observations, and to defray the expenses of the publication of the same. This gift was one of the largest ever made to that institution, and the largest one up to the time it was received. His work for Yale, for science and for his family is priceless.

In June, 1889, when Prof. Loomis left for his vacation he said to his printer in New Haven, to whom he was paying a bill, "When I return at the close of vacation I expect to put into your hands for printing a new edition of the Loomis genealogy." Before the close of the vacation he died.

During all of his life Elias Loomis was of delicate physical constitution and health, and especially during the last ten years thereof, but by husbanding the physical strength which he had, he was able to exercise the remarkable mental faculties, possessed by him to a degree rarely exceeded, we may confidently say, by any one who lived in the 19th century. That his life was a factor in moulding others the following is evidence: "If I have been successful in life," said Chief Justice Waite,

"I owe that success to the influence of Tutor Loomis more than to any other cause whatever."

When Prof. Loomis was asked if there were among his letters or papers, any which he would prefer not to have the public see, he promptly replied: "No, I never wrote a letter which I should be ashamed to see published." This bespeaks a clean mind, clean thoughts and a clean life.

In Memorial Hall at New Haven, there has been placed to his memory a bronze mural tablet, which reads: "In grateful remembrance of Elias Loomis, LL. D., who was graduated in 1830 from Yale College and twenty-nine years here served—1860-1889. An exact scholar, an astronomer of wide repute, in meteorology a pioneer, and a large benefactor of this University. This tablet is placed by a few of his old students to keep fresh the memory of the man and his teaching. 1906."

(The above life-sketch was prepared by Mr. Seymour C. Loomis, of New Haven, Conn., who desires to make acknowledgments for many of the statements made therein to the late Prof. Hubert A. Newton, of Yale University, a life-long friend of Prof. Loomis.)

Hartford, Jan. 28, 1888, dau. of Archibald and Martha ("Patty" Jones) Greenfield, and gr. dau. of Archibald Greenfield, who came from Scotland and settled at Lyme, Conn. He served as special constable and fire warden; was a strong abolitionist and temperance man. Builder. Rep'n. Cong't. He d. Hartford, Feb. 6, 1885. His pastor, Rev. Dr. E. P. Parker, pastor of the So. Cong'l Church of Hartford, wrote concerning him the following:
 Pascal Loomis was born in Windsor, Connecticut, on the 17th of June, 1804. When about seventeen or eighteen years of age, he came to Hartford, Connecticut, as apprentice to General Hayden in the business of carpentry. During the year 1838, together with many others who were the fruits of a great religious revival, Mr. Loomis united with the Second Church of Christ in Hartford (Congregational), in which he continued his membership until his death, which occurred on the 6th of February, 1885, he being then almost eighty-one years of age. His wife (Martha Jones Greenfield) survived him and died in the communion of the same church, in the year 1888 (January 28th). Mr. Loomis was a man of strong character and convictions. He walked uprightly among his fellow-men, and was regarded with that esteem which is ever accorded to those whose conduct is exemplary and whose influence is salutary. He was an active member of his church, loving its various services, and promoting its activities, according to the measure of his ability and means.
 Mr. Loomis developed a peculiarly strong interest in the work and cause of Temperance, and was never weary of labor for the furtherance of that cause. It was the one aspect of Christian activities, which, perhaps, more than any other, enlisted his sympathies, prayers, and efforts.
 When Mr. Loomis died, at a good old age, his familiar and stalwart figure was much missed by the community, and his departure was felt as a bereavement by a large number of persons who had been associated with him in Christian circles, and had conceived for him a sincere respect and affection.

war, and the Union found no stronger adherent during the dark days of the rebellion. He took no uncertain position upon the social evils of the day, his voice and example were ever against them and many were the vigorous blows received at his hands. He was a good business man, and was generous to the poor and needy. He was identified with the progress of education, and was one of the founders of the New Berlin Academy, and for many years its most earnest supporter. The cemetery of St. Andrews Church, of which he was a vestryman, owes much of its beauty to his handiwork. From the various relations of life which he sustained as a physician, a citizen, a neighbor, friend and Christian, the voice of 'Well done' can be heard." New Berlin, N. Y. 1 ch'd.

He became a school teacher at the age of 18, taught 4 yrs. during winter season, and then completed his own education by taking a term each at Worthington and Milan, O., academies. Became Professor of a select school at Pittsburg, Pa., for a short time. He then returned to North East to assume the duties of the farm—his father being in poor health—which he subsequently inherited. Because of letters written by his son Joseph, who was at the front, and who predicted a long continued struggle and asserted that many thousand additional troops would be required, and asked what North East would do for the cause, Dyer, then (1862) 52 yrs. of age, assisted in raising a Co., efforts to accomplish which had been unsuccessfully made by several patriotic citizens. Through his personal popularity and confidence he succeeded in two weeks in enlisting a full company and 20 additional men, and as its captain was sent to the front with Co. C, 145th P. V. I. He was made prisoner at Chancellorsville and taken to Libby prison, from which he was paroled in bad health. His son George L. was a member of his Co., and they helped bury the dead at Antietam. At battle of Fredericksburg Capt. Loomis lost one-half of his Co., the remainder with himself falling prisoners at Chancellorsville. He engaged in brick manufacturing, established a harness manufactory which he conducted for 9 yrs., and was proprietor of a shoe store. Was justice of the peace for 35 years. 3228. HENRY (HARRY) LOOMIS, b. Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 27, 1800; m. 1st, Margaret Peer; m. 2nd, Catherine Adkins. He was the 3rd white child b. within the present limits of the city of Buffalo, and it was under these circumstances: His parents, with his uncle Joel and family were on their way to their new home in the Holland Purchase, now North East, Pa.; in one short hour after reaching Buffalo, and in the only Log Hotel in the city, Mrs. Oliver Loomis presented her husband with a beautiful young pioneer, swelling the number of inhabitants of the city to a baker's dozen, the previous census showing exactly twelve as the total population. The red men of the forest were not unmindful of this eventful occurrence, and in the morning, as first and original proprietors of the city, they held a dance around the log house and formally named the baby "Tishua" (chief of his people). Now one hundred years afterwards, in the same city, an Indian baby was formally named by the Vice President (Roosevelt), he naming it (a girl) "Pan Anna." His parents took up their westward journey again on Mch. 6th, 1800, over the ice, reaching 20 Mile Creek about the 9th following. Here they settled, some 3½ miles south of North East, Pa., on the road leading to Colt's Station. In time "Tishua," born a pioneer, caught the westward fever, and found a home at Union Mills, Ind. 8 ch'n.

ing an Anti-Slavery Society for the overthrow of slavery. Smith, my room mate, and I walked nine miles to attend this Convention. We were in church when the mob, led by Senator Beardsley, rushed into the assembly and drove the young men out of the city. This was the first mob that ever acted in that State or perhaps in this country. This made an Anti-Slavery man of me all my life. . . . I was not then of age, but I was as decidedly aroused, more than ever in my whole life." This Convention was called to form the first Anti-Slavery Society, Oct., 1835, of the State of N. Y., by such men as Garrett Smith, Alvin Stewart of Utica, Lewis B. Tappan, etc.

The following sketch of his life is taken, by permission, from the United States Biographical Dictionary and Portrait Gallery of Eminent and Self-made Men, Illinois Volume, 1876 Ed't.:

JOHN LOOMIS, A. M., Jacksonville, Illinois.

"Prof. John Loomis was born in Westfield, Chautauqua Co., New York, July 20, 1815. He was the eighth child of Joel Loomis and Susanna (Baird) Loomis. The former was born April 10th, 1776, and the latter April 7th, 1780, both at Westfield, Massachusetts.

"His parents were members of the Presbyterian faith, his father being for many years a ruling elder of that church, in which he exercised considerable influence. Nor was his mother less conspicuous for piety, both at home and in society, and both illustrated the character that devoted life to labor.

"As might be expected, such examples moulded the characters and exercised a controlling influence over the habits and after life of the son. At an early age he was designed by his parents for the ministry of the Presbyterian church, and to this end he received a Theological education; but owing to the indisposition produced by excessive study, this idea was abandoned. He became so devoted to library pursuits, however, that a thorough education was the purpose of his life, from which no difficulty could avail to move him. His opportunities for an early education were the common schools, which at that day bore no comparison to what they are now. He was the first boy in the neighborhood who ever studied a geography or an atlas. At the age of 14 he commenced the study of Latin, and under the direction of Rev. Preston, of Ripley, N. Y., preparatory to a college course. At the age of sixteen he entered the academy at Dunkirk, where he remained two years, when his studies were interrupted by an attack of illness which lasted nearly two years, and obliged him to suspend his studies. In the latter part of 1835 he was admitted to Hamilton College, New York, but was again attacked by illness, and obliged to suspend his studies.

"After his recovery he spent another year in the study of Mathematics and Philosophy, under the direction of Profs. Kingsley and E. H. Stoddard, author of the Latin grammar, which proved to be the most profitable and thorough year's study of his life.

"For several years after this he pursued his course, alternating between teaching and study.

"In 1839 he moved to Ohio and settled in Conneaut, where he entered upon his career as professional teacher, which proved to be his life work. Two years later he took charge of Ashtabula Academy, Ashtabula, Ohio, which he retained for two years, where he afforded the highest satisfaction to his patrons, and attained a very distinguished reputation both as a linguist and a mathematician.

"In the spring of 1845 he moved to Illinois and settled in Virginia, Cass Co., where he opened a classical and high school under the title of 'Virginia School of Grades,' thus embodying the fundamental idea of what has developed into the present school system, long before it was advocated or proposed. Here he continued seven years, maintaining a large and flourishing school which was patronized by the principal families of the country for many miles around, as well as from distant parts of the state. His Latin students were among the best prepared for Illinois College, while he himself acquired the reputation of being one of the most profound and successful instructors of the period. The testimonials, both public and private, as to his worth and success as a teacher, are both numerous and flattering. On June 30th, 1847, the Illinois College, one of the most cautious and jealous institutions in the west, conferred upon him the degree of M. A. In 1852 he was elected principal of Winchester Academy, in Scott Co., and entered upon its duties Jan. 1, 1853, and continued in charge of it until the present common school law (graded) went into effect, when both he and his school were adopted and organized into the high school department under the new law. The year following he was promoted to superintendent of all the schools of Winchester, which he also graded and organized under the 'New System,' which was merely an extension of the principles of his Virginia School of Grades. Here he continued, growing in public esteem until 1860, when he was appointed principal of the Walnut Grove School, at Jacksonville; the third time he had been appointed to as many schools in that city. On one occasion to succeed the Hon. Dr. Bateman, who in 1864 was elected state superintendent of public instruction, and more recently Pres. of Knox College.

"During all this time Prof. Loomis was a constant contributor to the press, advocating improvements in all that pertained to public school teachings, establishing county societies, discussing defects in text books and methods of instruction, advising the young teachers, and discussing theories with older ones. During the same period the efforts to organize County Sunday School Societies as a part of the great national system of instruction, which should elevate and make homogeneous the American people, received from him a ready and hearty co-operation.

"In the spring of 1861 he was appointed by the board of trustees of the Illinois Institution for the education of the blind at Jacksonville to the Senior department thereof. This chair he occupied for 21 years, having twice refused to be made superintendent of the institution, preferring to devote his life to the educational, rather than executive pursuits. Here his greatest triumph as an educator has been achieved. As a literary and scientific institution, this ranks among the highest in the state. The curriculum embraces not only the ordinary, but the higher branches of academic studies, and the proficiency of these blind students in the higher mathematics is the astonishment of all who become acquainted with them. The most abstract difficulties of Algebra are mastered and presented without artificial aids, with a facility that is not equaled by students of the same grade with any appliances. They are taught by direct oral instruction, and in the hands of their teacher they become experts. In Geometry they are equally as brilliant, often demonstrating their propositions without reference to diagrams in a manner that seems little less than magical. In Philosophy and the physical sciences the pupils are instructed in a similar manner. The mixed mathematics following the pure, but the range of sciences are presented relatively as a whole. In English analysis and grammar the pupils make equal proficiency and in the principles of Latin they require only time to excel. In Geography the improvement in maps has put these pupils on a vantage ground, and the world which is hid from their sight is often more clearly seen by their mental vision than by others with natural eyes. This institution has long been considered an honor to the state. Its success is due in a great measure to its methods of instruction, and this method is largely the work of Prof. Loomis. His health is now firm and vigorous (1876), and though a veteran in his profession, he is in the fullest sympathy with youth and is younger than his years, and is remarkable for his vivacity and flow of spirits in the school room, as for the skill and energy with which he communicates knowledge. He has been all his lifelong a member of the Presbyterian church, but as a teacher he knows no sectarian lines; the broader views of fraternity and toleration alone are congenial to him. He served successively as elder in the Presbyterian church of Beardstown, Cass Co., Illinois, and Winchester, Scott County.

"He has also superintended the Sunday Schools of the Illinois Institution for the Education of the Blind, almost from the time he became connected with it." He was authority for information for all classes. His Men's Bible class was attended by the prominent lawyers and judges of Jacksonville. A member of the "Union Club" for 25 years. At one time upon the merits of his answer to an abstruse problem (mathematical) in a celebrated case in court the decision was rendered. Educator. Rep'n. Presb'n. He d. Jackson, Sept. 15, 1873, dau. of Henry and Lucinda (Rice) Kennedy; m. 2nd, Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 31, 1874, Emma S., dau. of Grove Sheldon and Eliza (Stanley) Gilbert. He removed from Rochester, N. Y., to Jackson, Mich., abt. 1843. At the age of 16 he opened up a gen. store near Rochester, N. Y. At age of 18 became a dry goods merchant of Rochester. In 1843 became a member of the dry goods firm of Loomis and Dwight in Jackson, Mich. Sole proprietor of the Kennedy flouring mills in 1850. In 1856 became the senior partner of the banking firm of Loomis and Whitwell. In 1871 became Pres. of the Jackson and Ft. Wayne R. R., of the building of which he was the principal factor. In 1877 in N. Y. City, he advised and finally secured a hearing for Chief Arthur, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, which resulted in peace between the railways and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. He was never a politician, yet he was selected by the citizens of Jackson to be its 2nd mayor; a member of its council and chief of its fire dept.; in 1858, he was sent to the legislature; and in all these positions he never used public office to promote private gain. Shams and false pretenses of all sorts were his special abhorrence. And with an independence as absolute as that of the Scotch laird who asserted that "Where McGregor sits is the head of the table," he awarded to others all the rights that he claimed for himself. In literature he was a wide gleaner and a forcible writer, an excellent conversationalist and an independent thinker,—an admirer of the vigorous Scotchman, Carlyle. His latest benefaction was the donation to the city of Jackson of the beautiful tract of land widely known and greatly appreciated as "Loomis Park." In epitome we can say of him he was merchant, banker, R. R. builder and president, editor, benefactor, clean, clear-headed, conscientious, and independent. He d. He is an inventor and manufacturer of gas plant machinery. His inventions in the field of gas machinery are many and valuable, ranking among the most efficient and economical discoveries in this field, as the Patent Office Reports show.

The genial personality of Burdett Loomis, inventor and engineer, is known to a wide circle of acquaintances in this country and abroad.

Born of a family that has produced many able and scholarly men, his native ingenuity and intense activity, has accomplished much that benefits mankind.

In 1881, he organized the Steam Heating Company of Hartford, and in 1882, the first Electric Lighting Company. Owing to the loss and difficulty in transmission of steam heat, he thought of substituting a cheap gas for the heating medium, and invented cheaper methods of gas making which have come into general use for the production of gas for gas engines and fuel purposes.

From 1886 to 1889, he erected the first gas plant that produced fixed clean producer and water gas from all varieties of fuel, delivering it into holders and piping it long distances through ordinary pipe to furnace, gas engine, and houses for domestic use.

The producer gas was generated by drawing the air down through the fires, the resulting gas passing through boilers, which utilized the sensible heat, then through scrubbers and exhausters, delivering a clean, purified gas to the gas holders.

With the down draft principle, all of the tarry and volatile matters in the fuel are decomposed into fixed gases and the apparatus converts all of the fuel into gas, when using bituminous coal, wood, lignite, etc.

When the fires became highly heated, water gas was made by passing steam in an opposite direction through the fire, and delivering it to a separate holder. The producer gas is used for metallurgical work, and with the advent of large gas engines, will be extensively used for power propositions. The water gas is used for manufacturing purposes where high local heat is required, for Welsbach lights, and domestic use.

Illuminating gas was made by mixing with the water gas, gases produced from oil, resins, etc., which was made in retorts.

He has been interested in the organization of many Gas, Electric and Manufacturing Companies. Now at 70 years of age, he is an active member of the firm of Loomis-Pettibone Company, Engineers, New York, and is devoting special attention to the utilization of wood waste for gas making, and the production of by-products, turpentine, etc., and of wood pulp.

When not busy with his many interests, he retires for rest and recreation to his beautiful home in the suburbs of Hartford, Conn., spending his days out of doors among his flowers and shrubs, of which he is an enthusiastic and scientific cultivator. Loving Nature, he studies her wonderful processes and endeavors to turn them to the service and happiness of humanity. His wife adorns the home, and innumerable have been the acts of gracious hospitality enjoyed at this household by its many friends.

He is the president of the "Loomis Family Association" of America, and the publication of this edition of the Loomis Genealogy is due to his planning and financing. To him every Loomis in America is forever indebted for this volume of their ancestral records. His home is at 837 Prospect Ave., Hartford, Conn. 5 ch'n—all b. at Suffield, except the youngest.

7388. SEYMOUR CRANE, b. Nov. 12, 1861; m. New Haven, Conn., Apr. 20, 1892, Catharine Canfield, b. Derby, Conn., June 29, 1870, dau. of Samuel Canfield and Caroline Tomlinson (Bassett) Northrop. She is a lineal descendant of Dr. Nathaniel Taylor of New Milford, Conn., and of John Taylor, of Windsor, one of the pioneer settlers with Joseph Loomis; on her mother's side from Gov. Tomlinson, of Stratford, Conn. He prepared for college at the Conn. Literary Institution at Suffield, and was the valedictorian of his class at that school; graduated at Yale in 1882 with the degree of B. A., and at the Yale Law School in 1884, with the degree of LL. B. cum laude. For the next three years he was associated in practice of the law with Mr. John W. Alling, then one of the leading lawyers of New Haven, and later, for six years with Judge William B. Stoddard. He was Asst. City Clerk of New Haven for two terms, 1885 and 1886, and acting city clerk the latter half of 1886. In 1893 he was appointed executive secretary of Conn., by Gov. Luzon B. Morris, serving for two years, doing for the state executive department, beside the duties of secretary to the governor, the work now done by the attorney general, whose office has since been created by the legislature. While city clerk he compiled and edited the city year book of New Haven for 1884, and also for 1885, which works show the systematic trend of his mind, a qualification which has added much to his success as a lawyer. His practice is extensive and largely in cases involving insurance, and employers' and common carriers' liability, and the law of trusts and estates. His articles and printed briefs cover those branches. He is a member of the Amer. Bar Ass'n and of its committee on Uniform State Laws and of the Amer. Ass'n for the Advancement of Science, and of several other associations and clubs and is now the President of the New Haven Branch of the Sons of the American Revolution. No children. Lawyer. Dem. He was an earnest worker against African Slavery, in fact kept a depot on the "Underground Railroad." It was Rev. Simon B. Loomis, a Meth't clergyman, who introduced the resolution into the Methodist conference in N. Y. State that separated the Methodist Church into the M. E. Church North and the M. E. Church South. And because the Church insisted that he cease agitation on the slavery question, he left that body, preferring independence to a place with sealed lips. His own words, Feb., 1906, in a letter to the editor, are: "My history is of many who are of my age, that engaged in the emancipation of the American Slave; in entering the ministry I believed in preaching against sin, and I saw no sin greater than that of depriving a human being of liberty and all it signifies—hence the church with which I was officiated (Methodist Episcopal) ordered silence. I excommunicated the sect, but remained in the Church of humanity. I became an outlaw to the state commanding the return of the fugitive. I gave the fugitive a welcome and transportation to the shelter offered by the British Lion from the talons of the American Eagle. And now at over 82 yrs. I find no fault with myself as I calmly look back over the rugged Way." He entered the ministry at age of 19, in 1842, and on March 28, 1846, he left the Methodist church, for "he would not be a slave," and has never united with any church since. Clergyman. Rep. Dem. He attended the district school of Columbia, and later the academies of Monson and Amherst, Mass. For several years he taught school most successfully in Columbia and Hebron and was prominent in the literary and debating society of Columbia. At 23 he began the study of law with John H. Brockway of Ellington, and afterwards attended Yale Law School, graduating in 1847. Admitted to the Tolland County bar he immediately commenced the practice of law in Rockville as an associate of Mr. Brockway, being the first lawyer to open an office in that place. In 1851 he was elected to the Gen. Assemb. of Conn., where he distinguished himself as a good speaker and parliamentarian. He was opposed to the repeal of the Missouri Compromise and the extension of slavery into the free states, and was sent as a delegate from Conn. to the National Convention at Phila., Pa., in 1856, at which time the Republican party was organized with Fremont as its candidate for the presidency. He was elected to the Conn. Senate in 1857 and was made chairman of the judiciary committee. In 1859 he was elected congressman from Hartford and Tolland counties and re-elected two yrs. later, thus serving during the closing years of Pres. Buchanan's term, and the opening years of Pres. Lincoln's administration. In congress he was recognized as one of its influential members, strong in debate and conscientious in the performance of his duties, and was chairman of the committee on expenditures in the treasury department and a member of the com. on elections. His service in Congress was in the critical period, just preceding and during the early years of the Rebellion. Mr. Loomis was found among the staunch and able men who faithfully upheld the Union. In 1864 he was elected judge of the Superior Court of Conn., and in 1875 of the Supreme Court of Errors, which position he held until he reached the age limit of 70. In 1891, and in 1893, the general assembly elected him State Referee in important cases. He removed to Hartford about 1892.

A friend said of him: "As a judge he gave the most unbounded satisfaction. His acute perceptive and analytic faculties, good memory, rare power of discrimination, forbearance, patience and courtesy, combined with suitable firmness and dignity, and no pretension or pride of opinion, and withal an honesty and integrity and a conscientious and inflexible fidelity to the duties of his position rendered him a model judge, who commanded the highest esteem."

For a time he was one of the lecturers at the Yale Law School, and in 1896, Yale Univ. conferred upon him the degree of LL. D. He was associated with J. Gilbert Calhoun in editing the "Judicial and Civil History of Connecticut," which was published in 1895.

As a judge of the highest courts in Conn., wherein he served for twenty-seven years, he was respected and loved. His decisions were fair and reasonable and were logical and convincing. His manners were courteous and simple, but he was firm and definite in his views. Judge Calhoun in his obituary sketch of Dwight Loomis, published in the Connecticut Reports, says:

"Judge Loomis brought to the bench an uncommon union of fitting qualities. With a competent knowledge of law and a natural love of justice were joined an accurate legal perception, the habit of thorough investigation, and a rare judicial temperament. He was ready of comprehension, patient in hearing, deliberate of decision, dignified without assumption, considerate of every one, clear in rulings and charges to juries, administering justice with due respect of law but with all practicable kindness, and an impartiality never suspected, for it was beyond reach. He had that industry which answered every call of duty, and possessed no disturbing frailties of temper."

While returning from a hearing as State Referee, he died suddenly, Sept. 17, 1903, of heart failure. At the time of his death he was a member of the Asylum Hill Cong. Ch. of Hartford, and throughout his life was a true Christian. His influence was helpful to all who knew him, and as a citizen he stood for all that was noblest and best. 1 ch'd.

9323. HARVEY WORTHINGTON, b. Feb. 5, 1865. Studied piano under Mme. Madeline Schiller. Studied music under Dr. Antonin Dvorák and was awarded a 3 years' scholarship at the National Conservatory, N. Y. City. He has devoted himself almost exclusively to composition in nearly all its forms, from simple songs for children to grand opera. The development of Indian themes in art music interests him, as well as the possible relation of American folk music to a future development of an Am. School of Composition which shall overcome the thrall of European tradition. He takes great interest in music for children and is striving to produce a class of piano music which aims to make the first hours of study a play rather than a task. He has made a special study of Indian airs, and has been impressed by "the wealth of Indian melody in this country." It is unlike anything to be heard in Europe. He deserves great praise for the ingenuity displayed in these pieces and songs, "which will be widely known and admired some day." He is identified with nearly every school book music concern in the country, and is practically the sole author of Ginn & Co.'s New Educational Music Course. He also writes an occasional magazine article. Has written much piano, vocal and orchestral music. One of the founders of the Brooklyn Philharmonic. Pianist. Composer of music. 421 W. 57th St., N. Y. City.

5487. HON. ARPHAXAD LOOMIS, b. Winchester, Conn., Apr. 9, 1798; m. Salisbury, N. Y., Oct. 5, 1831, Anne P., b. Salisbury, Apr. 17, 1807, d. Nov. 20, 1879, dau. of Dr. Stephen and Bede (Frisbie) Todd. At the age of 3 yrs. his parents removed from Winchester, Conn., to Salisbury, N. Y. His father was a farmer in moderate circumstances, and Arphaxad's boyhood days were spent in assisting his father upon the farm. At the age of 15 he was "hired out" by his father to teach a district school in the town of Norway, eight miles from home, for a term of three months, at $6 a month "and board around," walking home Saturday nights and back again Monday mornings. By teaching winters and attending Fairfield Academy summers, he educated himself. His Academy (intimate) associates were Judge John C. Wright, Rev. Albert Barnes, the distinguished Presbyterian Divine, Hon. Hiram Denio and Hon. Addison Gardner, the last two becoming eminent Judges in the Court of Appeals of the State of N. Y. He began reading law in 1818 at Johnstown, then at Watertown, then at Carthage, and finally ended his course at Sacketts Harbor, and was admitted as an attorney of the Supreme Court in Jan., 1822.

Practicing at Sackett's Harbor for about 2 yrs. he decided to seek another location, and traveling about for same he went as far as Huntsville, Ala.; while at Nashville, Tenn., he called at the "Hermitage," and was hospitably entertained by Gen. Jackson, who gave him the distinguished honor of a horseback ride by his side to attend an old-fashioned Fourth of July celebration. Failing to find a suitable opening he returned home, and finally determined to locate at Little Falls, N. Y., and enter upon the practice of his chosen profession, doing so Mch., 1825.

In 1827 he received the appointment of Surrogate (County Judge) of the county, which office he held until 1837. In 1835 he was app'd first judge of Herkimer Co., and he held this office until 1840. In 1836 he was elected a member of the 25th Congress. The reason he was not returned to the next Congress is, that Herkimer county was not entitled to the member, having had the representative in Congress since 1824,—the 26th being conceded to Lewis Co.

He was a member of N. Y. Assembly 1841-2 and again in 1853. That he was highly honored by his colleagues the following extracts, from the "Memorial Proceedings of the Herkimer County Bar, with a few Obituary Notices on the death of Hon. Arphaxad Loomis," are submitted:

Hon. Geo. A. Hardin, chairman: "He was an earnest antagonist. He was zealous in pursuing a principle. He was fervid in his adherence to justice. His support of the interests of a client was always enthusiastic and honorable." . . .

Judge Earl: "In the constitution of 1846, and in the laws of this state, he left his marks, which will long be visible. He was pre-eminently an original thinker. . . . Upon all questions that attracted public attention, that were interesting politicians and statesmen, he had views of his own, . . . thinking out for himself a correct theory in reference to all questions up for consideration. The life of such a man in any community is a great blessing, and his influence is beneficent and far-reaching."

Hon. George W. Smith concluded his speech by saying: "In my judgment there have been few men, perhaps no man, in the state, who in the particular walk in which he exerted his abilities, in the direction in which he sought to promote the public good, has more decidedly made himself a public benefactor than did Arphaxad Loomis."

Hon. A. M. Mills: "There is one part of Judge Loomis' life, or rather one act, one measure among all the others to which he devoted his attention, and to the success of which he contributed largely, that has been conducive of as much, if not more, good to the people of this country than any other act he ever did. I refer to the provision in the constitution of 1846 (Judge Loomis was a member of the Const'l Convention), by which it became the law of this state, that when the legislature of our state had granted a charter to a corporation for the purpose of carrying on business, that charter was not an irrevocable contract between the state and the corporation; but that it should always remain subject to such modifications as the interests of the people of the state seemed to require and dictate. The chair will remember that by a celebrated case which arose in the east, the Dartmouth College case, (see The Dartmouth Coll. case in 4 Wheat 518), the question has been raised and announced as the law, that when the Legislative power had granted a charter to a company of men, . . . that charter became a contract which was irrevocable and from which the public could not escape. At that early day, with a kind of foreknowledge, Judge Loomis, seeing the importance of the matter to the people of this state, was largely instrumental in having adopted, if not solely the author of the provision which protected the people from that rule of law. In the light of the vast growth of corporate power and interest since that time, it seems to me almost as though Judge Loomis and his compeers, who put into the organic law of this commonwealth the power to modify or recall corporate privileges once granted, must have been forewarned of the necessities to which this generation in which we live would come in respect to this matter. It serves at this day to put us in the position of feeling unbounded gratitude towards Judge Loomis, and it also serves to illustrate his wisdom, his appreciation of and fidelity to the great interests of the people."

Little Falls Journal and Courier said: "He lived longer than most men, and he lived better than most men. Ambitious only for distinction as a true, good, upright, generous citizen; seeking the approval of his own conscience rather than the applause of the multitude; proud of his participation in the improvements of his village and in the reforms in his profession, rather than in any selfish emoluments; firm and steadfast and true in behalf of right, rather than for any more personal choice or prejudice; Judge Loomis has left the most honorable record which it is the privilege of a man to transmit to posterity."

As a member of the 25th Congress he took his seat at the extra session, Sept., 1837, being appointed Chairman of the Com. on Patents. At the regular session 1837-8, he was on the Com. on Private Land Claims. At the 3rd session he was placed on the Com. on Public Lands, and in this place he made such efforts as his position as a new member and a young man enabled him to do; and to his efforts is due the change of policy of the government by which it limited the sale of public lands to actual settlers. For as a member of Congress he helped to originate and worked for the enacting of the homesteading act as mainly used ever since, and now extended to and used in Alaska and the Sandwich and Philippine Islands.

As a member of the N. Y. Assembly, 1841-2, he was chosen chairman of the Judiciary Com. for 1842. The paramount question before the people at this time was the extravagant expenditures and running the state in debt on account of the enlargement of the Erie canal. He was the author of the "people's resolution," so-called; it failed to pass. But Judge Loomis continued to keep it before the people, and after 30 years of effort, he had the satisfaction of seeing adopted an amendment to the constitution of the state, prohibiting it from creating debt without a vote of the people, and this idea and act has since been adopted as a part of the Constitution of every state in this union.

Judge Loomis and Michael Hoffman represented Herkimer Co. in the Constitutional Convention of 1846, Hoffman being chairman of the finance committee and Loomis a leading member of the judiciary committee. Upon adjournment, a prominent member said, as the members were taking leave of each other, that "the finger marks of Mr. Loomis in the constitution as adopted were more perceptible than those of any other member." And the minutes of that Convention reveal that more of his ideas became a prominent part of the constitution than did those of any other member. And since its adoption it has furnished the rule, guide and most of the material for the constitutions of the respective states of the U. S.

The same is true respecting his ideas, as proven by the original memorandum made and kept, in formulating the Code of Legal Procedure, that was adopted, 1846-50, Judge Loomis being chairman of the commission,—a body of reformers, for a great reform they wrought. This Commission had one object in view—to reach, in every legal controversy, a trial upon the merits by the speediest and most direct method. After most arduous and incessant labor by all the Commission the Code was formulated, and became a law. It has substantially been adopted in 43 other states of the Union, and much of it has since been enacted in England and in other countries where the Anglo-Saxon race predominates. This work was the most laborious, as it was the most lasting and beneficial in its results of all the public services which Judge Loomis gave to his state, and to the world at large, and it has served to give him a place among the most learned and most useful lawyers of his time, and ranks him as one of the great law givers of the Nineteenth Century.

In addition to his accomplishments in his profession and in public life, he had rare tastes for the beautiful in art, a marked mechanical skill and inventive turn of mind, which gave him much occupation at several periods of life, and beyond and above these, he acquired unusual attainments in literary and scholarly studies.

It was in Dec., 1818, that he discovered a deficiency in his hearing, which grew gradually so that finally his extreme deafness caused him to retire practically from public life in 1857. He d. Sept. 15, 1885. Little Falls, N. Y. Dem. Presb. 8 ch'n, b. Little Falls.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct. 11, 1899, dau. of Joseph and Dorothy (Green) Goodhue. Robert made many sea voyages with his father, who was a sea-captain. Afterwards he went to Wash., D. C., and became a successful shoe merchant. While there he became interested in politics. In 1866 he removed to Grand Rapids, Mich., and continued in the shoe business until 1881, when he established the insurance firm of R. B. Loomis & Co. He was a deac. of the Bapt. Ch. of Grand Rapids for 40 years, and is there known as the "father of the Rescue Mission." He served three terms in the Mich. State Senate, being Pres. pro tem. of that body twice. He was appointed by Gov. Warner a member of the Co. Board of Auditors and was serving in that capacity at the time of his death. His unostentatious, kindly and well-governed life was an inspiration to hundreds who revered him for the purity of his character, the strength of his religious convictions and the absolute rectitude of life which distinguished him. In the Senate he wielded much influence and the impress of his ability and sterling character is seen in the wise legislation enacted during his service there. Fire Ins. Rep. Bapt. He d.  Sample of New England industry. This handkerchief is made of Sea Island cotton—carded on hand cards, spun on a hand wheel and woven on a hand loom between 80 and 90 years ago; before there were any cotton mills in New England, by my mother.

Y. to Ohio and thence, at the age of 16, to Ia. Attended school but six weeks in all, in a log school house, formerly a council house for the Indians, being built for them by the government. With about 75 other men and 100 head of horses he crossed the plains for California, crossing the Mo. River on Apr. 6th, 1850, and reaching the 1st mining camp in Cal. on Aug. 4, following. Saw many nameless graves marked "killed by the Indians," but escaped a like fate. Met Kit Carson at Ft. Laramie. Spent two years in mining, then with his brothers, Leander and Orrin, engaged in the cattle and butchering business. He left Cal. the spring of 1855, returning home via Panama and New York. Was converted, through the influence of his wife, on Feb. 28, 1858—"that was the great event of my life," he writes. Was licensed to preach and later ordained a Deacon in the M. E. Church. While living in Kansas, he served a term in the legislature, receiving every vote, Rep. and Dem., of the district he represented. This act proves that he was what every man ought to be—a trusted brother. Afterwards he resided in Oregon, and now at Mead, Wash., where he and his wife are living alone. 10 ch'n.

LOVE AND I.

Love and I, in the fields together,
 Love and I, in the golden weather,
 Love and I, o'er the purple heather,
 Hand in hand, went Maying.
 Love and I, through the long lush grasses,
 Love and I, through clustering masses,
 Of odorous vines, where no one passes,
 Hand in hand, went Maying.

Love and I, and the branches o'er us,
 Love and I, and the song-birds' chorus,

Love and I, and the land before us—
 What cared we for the world beside?
 Love and I, knee-deep in the clover—(Love, the inconstant, was ever a rover)—
 Love beside me, violet-eyed.

Love was a flower the fields adorning,
 I was the dew on her lips in the morning,
 Love and I, the whole world scorning,
 Roamed the meadows and summer through.

What cared we for the wind or weather?
 What cared we for hedge or heather?
 Cared we only to be together—
 To be together the summer through.

 New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Hartford, Nov. 13, 1860, dau. of Dr. Daniel Dustin and Cornelia Barnard (Seymour) Hanson, a grad. of Hartford High School, 1880. He was educated in Hartford High School. He entered the Aetna Nat. Bank of Hartford, as messenger in 1865, rose through every position to President and director. Became first Vice-Pres. of the National City Bank, N. Y., Apr., 1899, and resigned Jan., 1905. In Dec., 1905, moved to San Francisco, Cal., to represent large N. Y. interests, and in Apr., 1906, was driven out by the terrible earthquake and fire. On invitation to become Vice-Pres. of the Union Trust Co. he moved to Providence, R. I. A few months later this Trust Co. suspended, and upon reor- ganization, Apr., 1908, was elected Vice-Pres. and manager.

That he is one of more than ordinary ability,—one capable in a remarkable degree, in the banking world, is well set forth in the following taken from the "New York Financier":

"When the National City Bank, under the stimulus of that master of finance, James Stillman, began to exhibit a degree of growth which is yet the marvel of American banking, it was perceived by the president and directors that to secure the best results, to hold and properly handle the enormous volume of business which was coming to the institution, the one essential was to associate with the bank in executive capacities the brainiest men to be had. It was not a question of securing theorists. The country is full of men who have a knowledge of technical banking at their finger ends, but whose ability ends with argument. The National City Bank needed men who could put into practice what the theorists teach. It wanted men who could do things, who had done them, in fact, and who act on the moment with that rare judgment which to an outsider seems like intuition, but which those on the inside recognize as the mere application of experience and knowledge gained by years of practical work. So Mr. Stillman, casting about for a vice-president, offered the position to A. G. Loomis, at the time president of the Aetna National of Hart- ford, Conn., and who, while known to bankers in New York and elsewhere as a most successful executive, was a comparative stranger to the metropolis. Some comment was occasioned by the elevation of an outside man to the active vice-presidency of the largest bank in the United States, but Mr. Stillman and his directors knew what they were doing. They knew that Mr. Loomis was one of the most expert judges of the value of commercial paper in the country; they knew that in this particular specialty, which calls for the most exacting knowledge, the keenest discrimination and a logical sifting of an enormous mass of detail, Mr. Loomis was unsurpassed. He had been buying commercial paper in New York and elsewhere for his bank for many years, and his judgment had been put to the test times without number, results proving the correctness of his decisions in every instance. The National City Bank directors not only considered this, but an examination of the reports of the Aetna National led them to see also that under Mr. Loomis's management that institution had prospered without interruption. When Mr. Loomis became cashier of the Aetna National in 1887, after having progressed by merit alone through the successive grades from the humble clerkship which he held in 1865, the deposits of that institution were about $775,000, and surplus and profits $167,600. The bank rose with Mr. Loomis. In 1891 he was elected to the presidency, and in 1898, or about eleven years after his first promotion to an executive position, the Aetna National had deposits above $3,000,000, while its surplus and profits had expanded to $416,000, and were being added to in a manner most satisfactory to the stockholders. That was a record of which any man might have been proud, and probably Mr. Loomis felt some satisfaction in reviewing his own work, although his intense activity led him to regard always the future, and not the past. It is doubtful whether he ever seriously contemplated an alliance with a New York bank, even though offers had been made to him at various times. But the prospects held out by an executive connection with the largest bank in the United States were not to be lightly cast aside. Mr. Loomis felt that the field was an inviting one, and results prove that Mr. Stillman was as good a judge of men as Mr. Loomis is of values of names and collateral. In his present connection, however, Mr. Loomis's work has broadened to meet the requirements that naturally follow a most difficult position. He has made a name for himself in New York banking circles, and when a man has done that, he has demonstrated that he is of the sort that the world looks up to—a hard worker, clear of thought and unmoved by prejudice or petty motives. From an humble clerkship in a provincial bank to the vice-presidency of a great institution with a capital and surplus of $40,000,000, is a long step, but the fight was won by merit alone. There is something in that to encourage the present American bank clerk who is thinking honorably and ambitiously of his own future."

When he went into this bank in 1899, it had a capital of $1,000,000, surplus of $4,683,000, and deposits of $142,292,000; the capital was increased to $10,000,000 in 1900 and to $25,000,000 in 1902, and now its capital is $25,000,000, surplus over $20,000,000 and deposits over $170,000,000. He resigned as senior active Vice-President and director Jan., 1905. Member of Hartford Club, N. Y. Union League Club, Bohemian Club, San Francisco, etc. Rep. Cong. 3 ch'n.

6169. HON. GEORGE LOOMIS, b. Little Falls, N. Y., Apr. 9, 1824; m. Jan. 13, 1863, Sarah Elizabeth, b. Mch. 21, 1836, dau. of Harvey, Jr., and Julia Ann (Cornwall) Dunham, of Southington, Conn. In 1847 he (with his father and family) resided in Springvale, Fairfax Co., Va. As a boy he was characterized as "always studying." He made some investigations in the field of electricity, and foresaw the electric light of to-day,—as the following sentence from a letter to his brother Mahlon, written Apr. 18, 1847, shows. He says: "You may think these revolving glass cylinders with the jiggery, or more properly, the jugs what hold this latent thunder and lightning, would cost more picayunes than farmers could scratch up of a dry day, but hark ye, boy, we apply this scientific principle to large factories, machine shops, or the like, where night work is required, and in every factory where night work is required they generally in each shop out of the abundance of their motive power might contribute that mite which would transform the dark twelve hours to noonday splendor. And I would produce the glorious Drummond light by common electricity which barrin' the first cost, would be superior in point of economy to the common way of producing it by galvanism. I shall write to Prof. Hare ere long, who can probably inform me; if he can not I'll prove it by dint of hammer and tongs and send you the result if you care the nature of a penny about it." He also was investigating optical lenses, and says in this same letter: "I propose to arrange a telescope so that we may have the advantage of seeing (with) both eyes alike. A man who has had one optic gouged out can see with the telescope as well as your two-eyed man." Query—what effect had this letter on the mind of Mahlon, and was it a factor in his aerial telegraphing idea? The letter shows that these young men were thinking, thinking ahead of their time. Their dreams are now realized in every particular. He completed an academic education in Virginia, and then engaged in teaching, and surveying west of the Allegheny Mts. Having located in Fayette Co., Va., in 1848, he was appointed Co. surveyor. Studied law and admitted to the bar in 1851. A yr. later he rem. to Parkersburg, (now) W. Va. In 1861 he was prosecuting att'y for the counties of Jackson and Roane. First judge of the 6th Circuit of the new state of W. Va., 1862, and served thus for 10 yrs. He also filled the office of Co. Supt. of free schools, in the establishment of which he had so much to do. Also Att'y and Mayor of Parkersburg. State Senator 1875-7. The following quotations from the resolutions of the Wood Co. Bar Association evidence his esteem among his fellow citizens:

"In the death of Judge Loomis the Bar loses one of its most distinguished members and the State and County in which he had resided for more than half a century one of its most honored and respected citizens. At the Bar he was especially noted as an advocate, although he was a lawyer of much learning and ability, and in his prime, figured with great distinction in some of the most important civil cases then pending in the State and Federal Courts. Before the jury he was almost invincible. He was a keen and correct judge of human nature, and knew how, with his masterly oratory, to play with telling effect upon the passions or prejudices of the court or jury. He was a past master also in the field of political debate. . . . He was a man of deep and firm convictions, and always fearless in their advocacy. During the days of civil commotion preceding the War of the Rebellion, and while it was being waged, he was most loyal and patriotic to the Union. He sacrificed every personal interest which interfered with his loyal devotion to his country. His advice and counsel were sought at all times by those then burdened with the duty and responsibility of preserving the government from disunion. He was a man of culture, learning and refinement, polished and dignified in his manner, in language chaste, and a conversationalist of great ability. . . . For fifty years he was an honored and respected member of this Bar, during which period, and for nearly 10 yrs., from 1863 to 1873, he filled with distinction and ability the office of Judge of the Circuit Court, and its record will bear testimony throughout coming time that he was ever fearless, able, and fair in the discharge of his judicial functions. . . . During the period ante-dating the constitution of 1872, and under the law then in force, he was frequently called upon to preside as one of the judges of the Supreme Court of Appeals of W. Va."

And this from the Parkersburg (Recorder?): "The life of Judge Loomis was an open book. The people knew him and loved him because he was true to them. A moral and upright man, he was accorded that high place in the affections of the people to which he was entitled, and which he held to the last. Aside from his legal and literary attainments, which were of the highest order, men loved him, and prized his friendship beyond that of most men. Parkersburg, Wood Co., and the whole state of W. Va., mourn the loss of a good and true man."

And this pen picture of him: "He was a very handsome man, tall, broad-shouldered, spare, of medium complexion. His blue eyes, merry, tender, or brilliant, according to his mood, could be so searching that it was said that witnesses told the truth in spite of themselves, when he gazed at them. He had other tastes besides his business. He sketched,—as the rest of the family did. He wrote both prose and poetry—also like the other members of the family. He invented various articles, some of which were patented. He was absolutely incapable of injustice, and while he believed in punishment for wrong doing, he was filled with a great pity for all who did wrong. In short, he was an ideal Christian gentleman." Lawyer. Rep. Non-sectarian. He d. Terra Alba, W. Va., Apr. 18, 1902. His widow res. Parkersburg, W. Va., where b. their 2 ch'n.

6170. DR. MAHLON LOOMIS, b. Oppenheim, N. Y., July 21, 1826; m. W. Springfield, Mass., May 28, 1856, Achsah, b. W. Sp'fd, Mass., Aug. 13, 1831, dau. of Joseph and Achsah (Colton) Ashley. As a young man he was characterized as "inventing something." He moved with his father's family to Va. From thence he came to Cleveland, O., in Sept., 1848, and began the study of dentistry with a Dr. Wright. The following winter he taught a term of school in Brooklyn Twp., at the center, in Cuyahoga Co., O., teaching four months for $65 and board and washing. The following summer he knew enough dentistry to make a tour of the neighboring counties and do such work as was wanted, "making $50 per month," he says. At the end of his money-making tour he made his way back to Springvale, Va., where he continued his work in dentistry. He practiced in Earlville, N. Y., Cambridgeport, Mass., and Phila., Pa. He invented mineral plate (kaolin) process in dentistry. Patented this and other useful devices. Afterwards he settled in Washington, D. C., where he made his famous discovery of wireless telegraphy in 1865. This he demonstrated, beyond doubt, in 1868, in the presence of Smithsonian officials, by sending many messages between two stations in Virginia eighteen miles apart, and at sea, Chesapeake Bay, between two ships two miles apart. But Dr. Loomis's fate was that of many another who has lived and thought ahead of his time. For his patient and untiring efforts he received the scoffs and sneers of his fellow-men, of which the following from the Springfield, Mass., Republican, of 1869, is a sample:

"Dr. Mahlon Loomis's petition to Congress for $50,000, to test a new scheme of telegraphing, which he thinks he has discovered, seems rather to have staggered the science of some of the Senators. Mr. Sumner, who presented the petition, said he did not know whether it was moonshine or very important. Mr. Wilson thought it best not to sneer at it, as some great men had laughed prematurely when the present magnetic telegraph was proposed. Mr. Pomeroy, of Kansas, never so happy as when voting money into somebody's pocket, enthusiastically supported the Loomis scheme. As Mr. Loomis's petition states that he proposes to dispense with wires, and use the earth for one-half his circuit, as does the present telegraph, and 'the electric element in the atmosphere far above the surface of the earth,' for the other part of the circuit; it is clear that he needs only the use of a couple of telegraph instruments, for instance, in order to test the practicability of his idea. We do not quite see how he will hitch on to the upper 'electrical element,' unless he does it by mental deduction, and we fear Congress can not help him much in that process. In truth, Mr. Loomis is a dreamer, and an illustration of what Pope said of Canning, that 'shallow thoughts intoxicate the brain.'"

His "Loomis Aerial Telegraph" bill for $50,000 capitalization, seriously supported by Wendell Phillips and the newspapers of Washington, was discussed in Congress by Senators Aldrich, Wilson, Pomeroy, Charles Sumner and others, and received the signature of Pres. Grant in 1873.

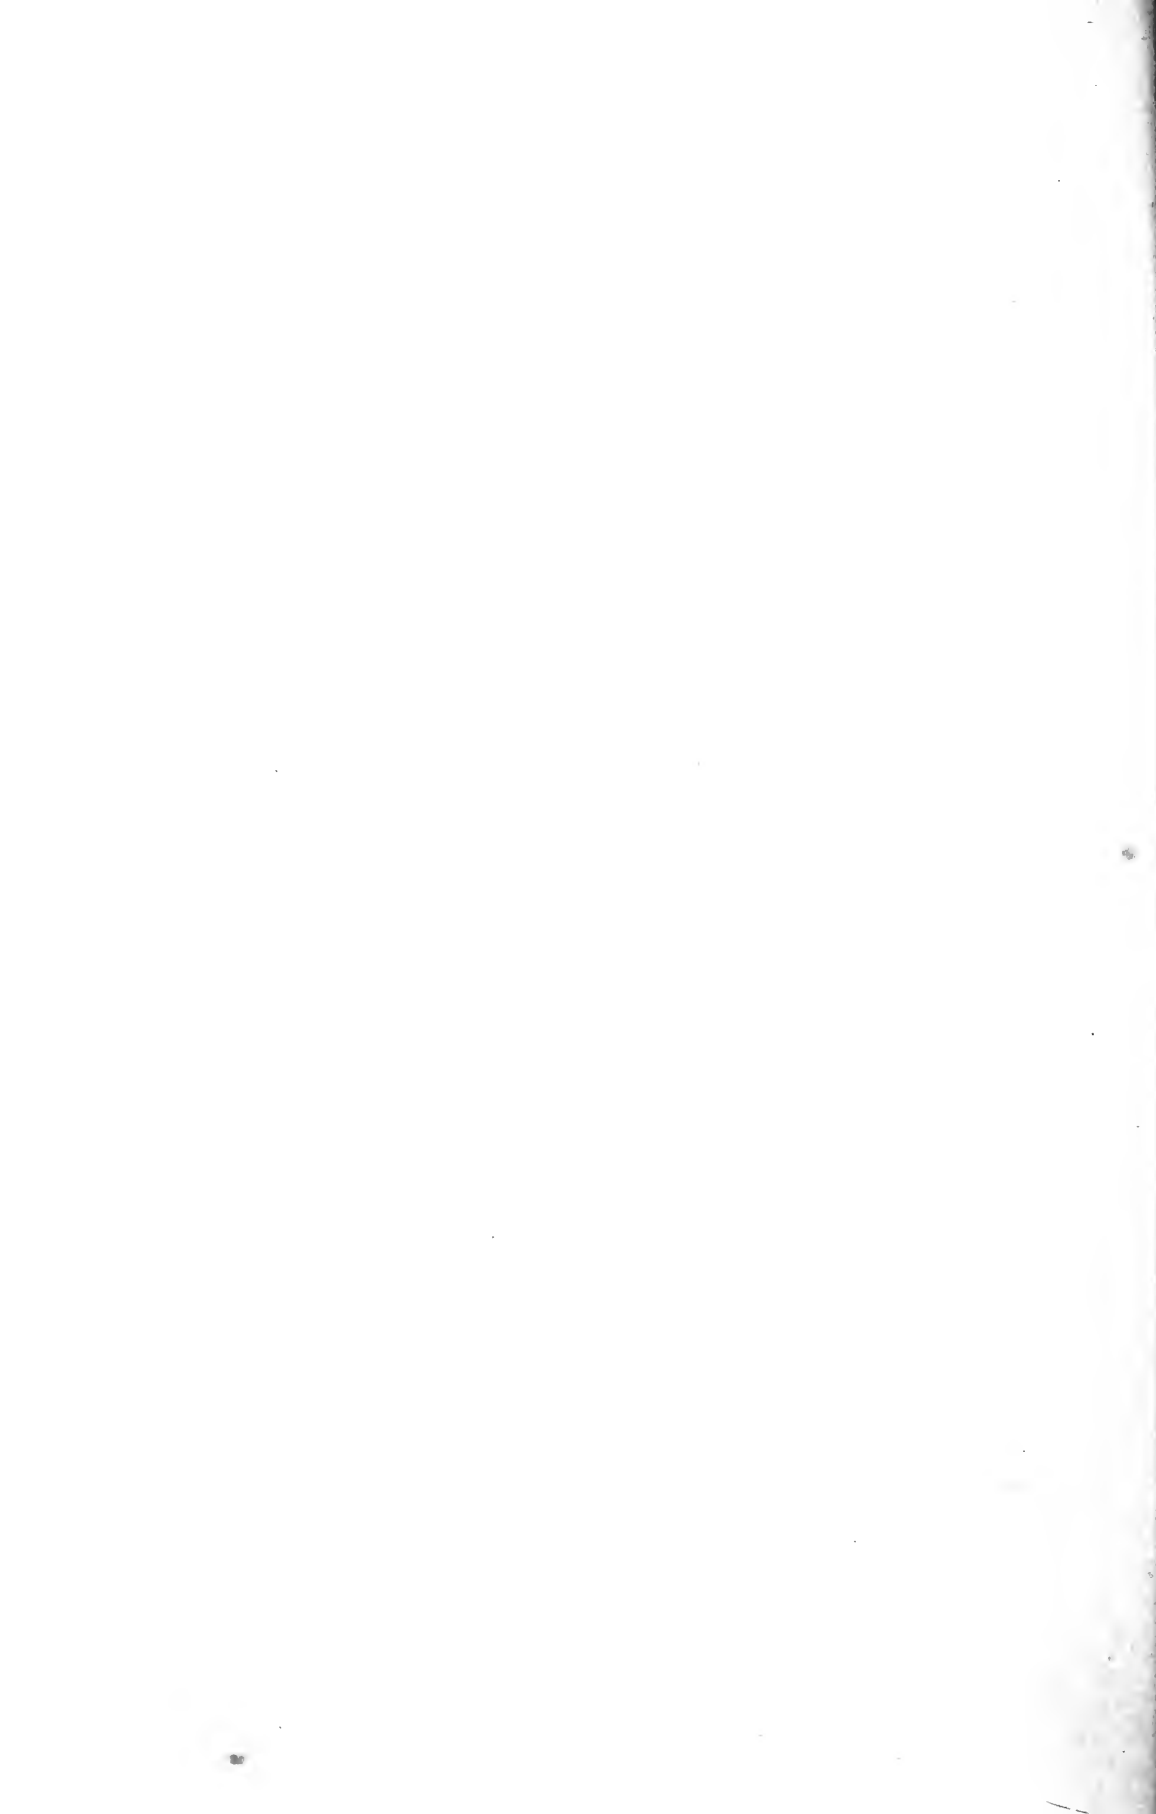

Comment is unnecessary—suffice it to say, the dreamer's dream has become one of the greatest factors of to-day in binding together the nations of the earth into one great brotherhood of men. Money for experiments on a large scale, to be made at Mt. Shasta, Cal., was twice raised, but the promoters were ruined by Wall Street's "Black Friday" and the "Chicago Fire." And passing strange it was that his path must cross both the "Black Friday" crisis and the "Great Fire of Chicago." Was it the "fortuitous concurrence of circumstances," or was the hand of Providence in it? Who can tell? Nevertheless, each of these awful calamities brought all of his plans, through financial failure of the monied men of New York and Chicago, whom he had interested with him, to naught. And Congress, in his application for $50,000, January, 1869, so that he might complete the demonstration, and which Hon. Charles Sumner presented, delayed and deferred action until 1873, at which time his bill passed the Senate, but ultimately the matter was indefinitely postponed, although Dr. Loomis had received letters patent July 30, 1872, which prove that he was an original patentee of the system of telegraphing without wires, in the U. S., and that his system involves every principle claimed to be of recent discovery. "After 1873, until the time of his death in 1886, the struggles of Dr. Mahlon Loomis, single-handed and alone, to win for his discovery a recognition of its worth form an episode in the history of American invention and of human life, both interesting and pathetic." Let justice be done him.

Who is not proud, to-day, to belong to a family which produced a discoverer of the greatest invention of the age—Wireless Telegraphy? For remember his discoveries were independent of and in no way aided by the discoveries of the Scotch inventor, Lindsay, who, in his experiments around Dundee, Scotland, between 1844 and 1853, succeeded in sending messages short distances, and took out a patent for the same. Not Faraday, not Morse, not Marconi, nor any one of a dozen other great physicists, but the Scotchman, James Brown Lindsay, must be credited with being the first man who thoroughly believed in its possibility and utility, and in a sense its discoverer. But had congress supported Loomis, America and not Europe would have produced the man who finally made it a reality in the commercial world. Branly of the Cath. Univ. of Paris gave the world the "coherer" and it made Marconi's system practical. Dentist. Inventor, Scientist. In politics and religion independent. He d. at Terra Alba, W. Va., Oct. 13, 1886. John and Mary W. F. (Jones) Wilder, of Concord, Mass., during the most brilliant period of its literary career. He was a student at the Lawrence Scientific School of Harvard Coll., studying under Prof. Asa Gray, Benjamin Pierce, Louis Agassiz and others. He was appointed a member of the Mathematical staff of the Ephemeris, and when its headquarters were removed to Washington, he, after a year's residence in Florida, went with it and remained in Washington as one of its mathematicians with offices at the U. S. Naval Observatory, being in charge of the nautical almanac office, until 1900. It was said of him when a boy that "he was always writing," and he became known as the poet of the family. In the 1889-90 eclipse expedition to West Africa he was the historian of the expedition, and the result is a large volume entitled "An Eclipse Party in Africa," 1896. Also author of "A Sunset Idyll, and Other Poems," and of nature studies, "Wayside Sketches," 1894, and a volume of Poems, 1903, Astronomer. In politics and religion, Ind't. Amherst, Mass. 1 ch'd, b. He is a grad. of Amherst Coll. and a desc. of Jonathan Edwards. After graduation he was app. to a position at the Naval Observatory, Wash., D. C. He was afterwards app'd Prof. of Astronomy and Director of the Observatory at Amherst, and also Prof. of Astronomy and Higher Mathematics at Smith Coll., at Northampton, 9 mi. from Amherst. Has rec'd the degree of Ph. D., and has been placed in charge of eight scientific expeditions, including, among others, those relating to the transit of Venus, the study of Mars, and eclipses of the sun. Her biography reads as follows: She was b. at Cambridge while her father was still studying at the Lawrence Scientific School of Harvard Univ'y, and connected with the Nautical Almanac office, for the American Ephemeris, under Prof. Benjamin Pierce. Later when its headquarters were removed to Wash., D. C., the young astronomer with his wife and child removed there, where she spent nearly 15 years of childhood and early girlhood. Mabel Loomis attended the famous private school known as the Georgetown Seminary, and completed its course. During the seventies, Washington retained much of the old charm of early days, the country homes round about, in Maryland and Va., still being the scene of much old-time hospitality, and her child experiences of these days are full of picturesque atmosphere. After finishing at the Georgetown Seminary, she spent two or three years at Boston, in the special study of music—piano-forte, singing and harmony, and in art and literature. Returning to Washington, she soon met the young astronomer, David Todd. They were married in 1879, and in 1881, removed to Amherst, where they have lived ever since. Prof. Todd being made chief of numerous astronomical expeditions, Mrs. Todd began to accompany her husband to many and unusual parts of the world. Spending several months in Europe in 1885, they went, in 1887, to Japan, Prof. Todd conducting thither a scientific expedition to observe the eclipse of Aug. 19th. Several other expeditions intervening, they returned again to the flowery kingdom in 1896, sailing there in the schooner yacht Coronet, and making observations of the eclipse of Aug. 29th, from the extreme northern part of the empire, bordering on the Sea of Okhotsk, among the hairy Ainus, aborigines of Japan. Mrs. Todd, on this occasion, reached a point farther north in the Japanese possessions than any foreign woman had ever attained. And here she made special study, ethnological and otherwise, of the Ainu. In 1900, her husband was once more in charge of an eclipse expedition; she accompanied him to Barbary in northern Africa, making headquarters at the rarely visited city of Tripoli, where a wonderful view of the sun's corona (May 28th) was observed through the cloudless desert air. And here she made a study of desert native life, women in the harems and Roman remains. In 1901 Prof. Todd conducted an expedition to a small island (Singkep) off the east coast of Sumatra, where the longest eclipse ever observed occurred on May 18th. On this occasion a complete circuit of the world was made, going via Atlantic and Mediterranean and returning by the Pacific, visiting on the way, Borneo, Siam, the Philippines, China, Japan, and the Hawaiian Islands. In 1905, Tripoli was once more the scene of an eclipse, and as usual she was at hand rendering assistance,—drawing the corona, training amateur observers, making records, as well as writing articles (for the N. Y. Nation, Harper's Weekly, Outlook, Independent and Century) descriptive of the occurrences.

In 1907, Prof. Todd conducted an expedition (taking with him the great 18-inch Amherst equatorial telescope) to the elevated pampa of Chili, for the purpose of studying Mars at opposition, in that exceptionally steady air; and on this occasion Mrs. Todd made a special study, in addition to the main purpose of the expedition, of the remains of old Inca civilization, especially in Peru and at high regions among the Andes. Besides these numerous and unusual journeys, Mrs. Todd has continued her musical studies and painting, and has kept open house more or less, entertaining socially in the college community at Amherst, has written constantly for the Century and other magazines, edited three volumes of the (posthumous) poems of Emily Dickinson, and two of her letters, a volume of sonnets, and revised Steele's Astronomy; and has written the authoritative book on Total Eclipses, and Corona and Coronet. She also gives drawing room talks, and for private Schools and Clubs and Colleges, on popular astronomy, travel and literary subjects, some fifty to eighty each season. She founded the Amherst Chapter, Daughters of the Am. Revolution, and founded also the Amherst Historical Society, of which she is President. She has been a director of the Mass. State Federation of Women's Clubs, has spoken frequently at the Biennial Meeting of the General Federation, and was Chairman of the Committee on Decoration for the Boston Biennial, converting the stage of Symphony Hall into an old French garden, making it correspond with the permanent decoration of the hall, which is modelled upon Versailles. They have one child, Millicent, b. Feb. 5, 1880, a grad. 1902 of Vassar Coll. She has spent a year in Paris, at the Sorbonne, and is a specialist in French Literature and History, and also plays the violin. She frequently accompanies her parents in their expeditions.

6505. LEWIS ALFRED LOOMIS, b. Lansing, N. Y., Oct. 9, 1830; m. Ilwaco, Washington, Feb. 1, 1877, Louisa J., b. Sublimity, Or., Sept. 30, 1854, dau. of Philip and Delilah (Edmiston) Glover. His father died when he was but 12 yrs. old, and he was early thrown upon the world to make his own way. After working at the carpenter trade in N. Y., in 1852 he went to the California gold fields via the then perilous Panama route. After 3 yrs. spent there he went north to the Columbia River.

In the Oregon Indian war of 1855, Mr. Loomis joined the mounted volunteers and served throughout the war, participating with great credit to himself in the battle of the Walla Walla and being present at the capture and death of the Indian Chief Pen-Pen-Mox-Mox. Shortly afterwards he received his commission as 2nd Lieut. of Co. B, 1st Regt., Oregon Volunteers, and served until the end of the war.

During the War of the Rebellion he was engaged in the northern service in the construction corps, where he again rendered distinguished service and went with Sherman on his march to the sea. After the war he went to Michigan, where he remained until 1872, when he returned to Pacific County, in the state of Washington, which he made his permanent home.

In the early days in Oregon the great need of pioneer communities was improved methods of transportation. Mr. Loomis built the first wharf in Pacific County for steamboat transportation in 1874, and thereafter was very active in organizing stage lines, steamboat lines and still later in the construction of the Ilwaco Railway and Navigation Company's Railroad line northward to the Columbia River.

In August, 1890, the Steamboat and Railroad lines of which Mr. Loomis was Pres. were merged into the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company's system and Mr. Loomis retired from active business life. He has been prominent in political matters, always striving for the highest ideals of pure political life and honest government. His home is at Nahcotta, Wash. 5 ch'n, all b. nr. Ilwaco, Wash.

Mr. Loomis is a man of great executive ability as the following sketch shows. After leaving college he entered railroad service in the law department of the Denver and Rio Grande Railway Co.; a little later he was connected with the operating department of the Erie Railroad Co.; in 1894 he was appointed superintendent of the Tioga Division of the Erie Railroad and also Supt. of the Blossburg Coal Co., in charge of their bituminous coal and lumber interests; in 1898 he was appointed Gen. In addition to all this he has acted as Pres. of the Bangor and Portland Railway, of the Lackawanna and Montrose Railway, of the Glen Alden and Lackawanna Valley Coal Co., and of the Arnot Water Co., and as vice-president of the Hoboken Ferry Co., the Morris and Essex Railroad Co., the Syracuse, Binghamton and New York Railroad Co., and the Utica, Chenango and Susquehanna Valley Railroad Co. After his boyhood and common school education in Coventry, Conn., he began teaching in public schools at age of 15, which he continued winters through his academic and college studies. He prepared for college at Holliston Academy, Mass., and graduated from Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., in 1844, with degree of A. B., A. M. in 1847. He was co-founder and associate principal with his brother, Silas Lawrence Loomis, in founding the Adelpian Academy at Brockton, then North Bridgewater, Mass., 1844-50. This was one of the first schools in New England independent of religious supervision and control, and was first opened as follows: "In Aug. 1844, two young men, brothers, Silas L. and Lafayette C. Loomis, just from Coll., came to No. Bridgewater, entire strangers, without letters or money, and opened a school, Sept. 4, with 30 scholars. The second term they had 50 students, the third 96, and it continued to grow. The second year the Unitarian church was procured for the school. An act passed 1847 made it a corporation school called the Adelpian Academy, of which L. C. Loomis was Sec'y and S. L. Loomis, Treas. In 1854, when a high school was established in the town, the Academy was closed."

 "Henry Loomis entered Hamilton College, 1860. Was a classmate of Hon. Elihu Root, whose father was Professor of Mathematics. Enlisted as a private in the 146th Regiment of N. Y. Vols., in August, 1862, and served with the Army of the Potomac to the end of the war. Participated in 24 battles and was wounded twice. Was present at the surrender of Gen. Lee at Appomattox on the 9th of April, 1865.
 "Promoted to 2nd Lieut., Jan. 1st, 1863, to 1st Lieut., Sept. 20, 1864, Brevet Captain, March 12th, 1865. For meritorious conduct in the battles of the Wilderness, Petersburg and the Weldon Railroad, to full Captain, April 1st, 1865. In the Official Records of the War is also the following: '1st Lieut. Henry Loomis, 146th N. Y. Vols., commanded his Regiment upon Col. Grindley taking command of the Brigade, and I especially mention his gallantry and recommend he be appointed Brevet Major.' Signed Joseph Hayes, Brigadier General Commanding.
 "Was mustered out of the service July, 1865, and resumed the course in College, graduating in 1866.
 "Entered Auburn Theological Seminary, 1866; and at the completion of the course was ordained as a missionary to China. But owing to failure of health was prevented leaving for the foreign field until May, 1872. During the interval supplied the Presbyterian Church at Jamesville, N. Y., for one year and was assistant to the Board of Foreign Missions for six months.

"In the mean time the appointment was changed from China to Yokohama, Japan. In July, 1874, organized the first Presbyterian Church in Japan and continued as its pastor until April, 1876, when obliged to return to the U. S. on account of health.

"After five years spent in California (during which time he introduced the culture of the Japanese Persimmon into the U. S.), was appointed Agent of the American Bible Society for Japan. For a number of years Korea was included in the same field, but as the work in both countries increased a separate agency was established in Korea in 1900. During the 27 years of service there has been circulated in connection with the agency of the American Bible Society 1,953,393 copies of the whole or portions of the Scriptures. Of this number 91,100 were circulated during the year 1907.

REV. DR. H. LOOMIS, American Consulate General, Yokohama, Japan,
Yokohama, Japan. June 12th, 1908.

Dear Sir:—It is my pleasure to inform you that I have been instructed by the Secretary of State, U. S. A., to present to you the thanks and high appreciation of the Government of the States for the valuable services which you have rendered to the Department of Agriculture in your investigations and reports concerning the parasite that holds in check the Gypsy Moth in Japan.

The persistence with which you have followed up your observations in this matter, and the earnestness with which you have pressed upon the officials of the United States Government the importance of making a study of the enemies of the Gypsy Moth in Japan, is indicative of the best spirit and type of Americanism and entitles you to the highest consideration of all interested parties and to the especial thanks of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and the people generally of the United States, as well as the commendation of our Government.

I enclose a copy of the letter of James Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture, to the Department of State on this subject. I take this occasion to express to you my personal appreciation of your services and the high regard I hold for you.

9149. LAURUS LOOMIS, b. Gallatinville, N. Y., Dec. 4, 1843; m. Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 18, 1875, Rebecca Augusta, b. Brooklyn, N. Y., Oct. 20, 1851, d. Oct. 14, 1908, dau. of Alexander Fink and Isabella (Whiting) Sparks. At the age of 15 he inherited the great advantage of poverty and a widowed mother which caused hard work and self reliance. At 16 he entered a foreign shipping office in N. Y. City, and two years later he entered the wholesale cotton house of Geo. W. Powers & Co., N. Y. City, at the munificent sum of two dollars per week, and has been engaged in that line of business from that time until this, more especially cotton mills in the south, commencing right after the Civil War, when in their infancy, and now engaged in their sale, and as a stockholder in several, with location at No. 345 Broadway, N. Y. City—goods being shipped to all commercial centers in the U. S., and also to the Chinese Empire and the Levant.

He was instrumental in the matter of Reciprocity with Latin-America, taking a testimonial from New York merchants to Hon. James G. Blaine, which resulted in its extension from Brazil to eight or nine other countries, including Nicaragua, Honduras, Costa Rica, Porto Rico and Cuba.

Also, later, he was the bearer of a petition to the Hon. William McKinley, then Pres. of the U. S., to retain the Philippine Islands, right after the battle of Manila. This petition was signed by many of the leading merchants of N. Y. City, at a time when it was not popular, and when the main idea was to make a coaling port of Manila and "sail away," as it was termed.

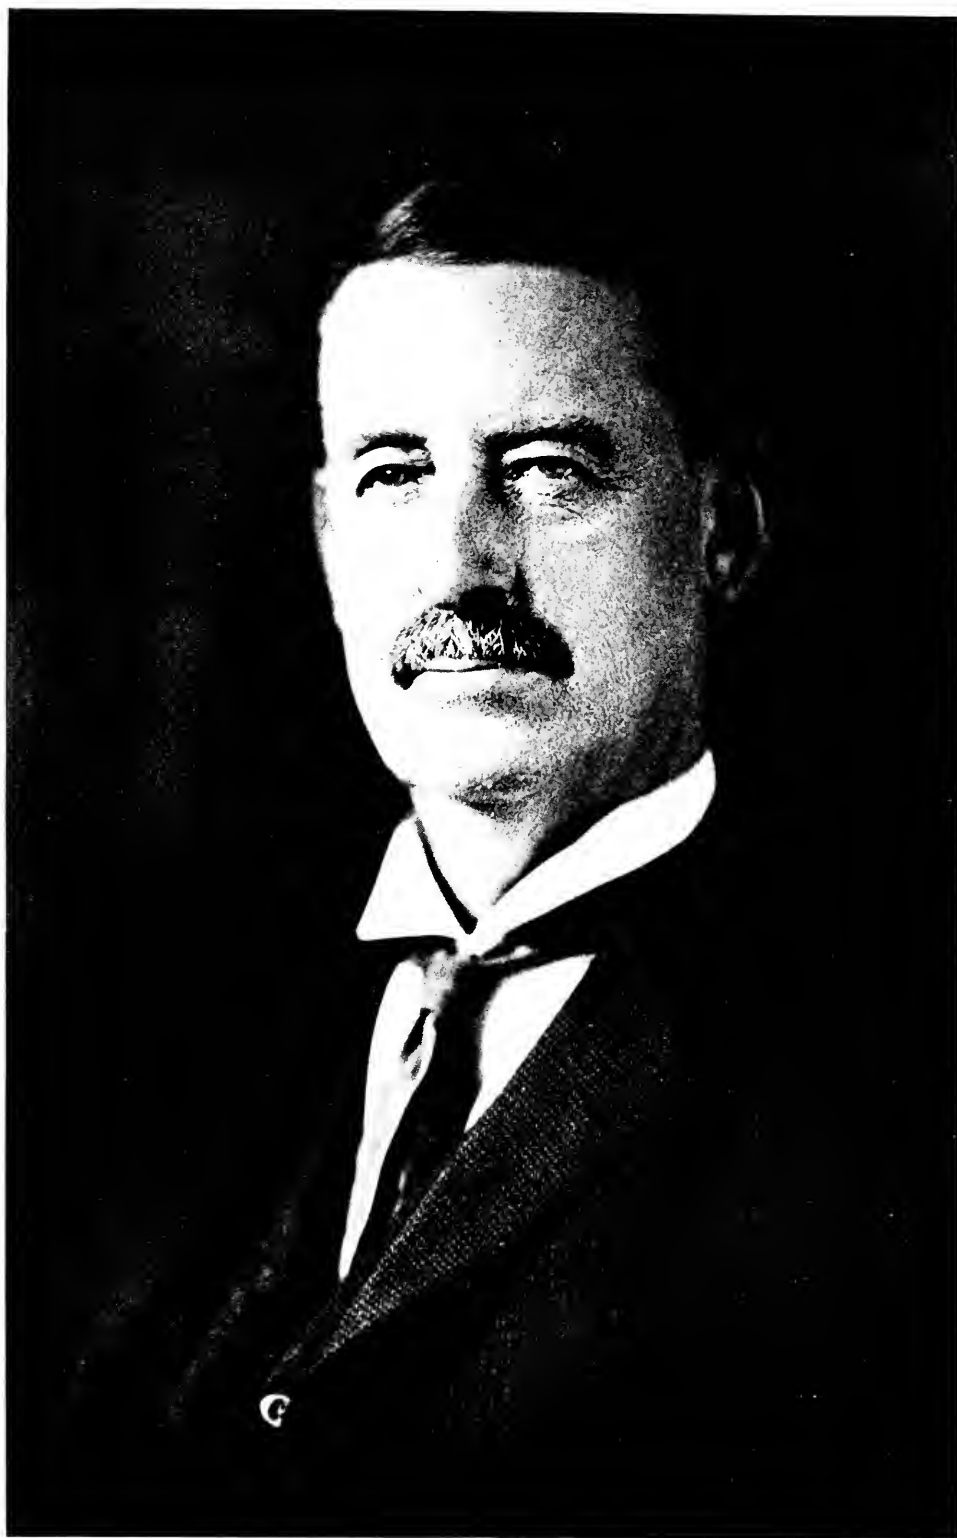

He also engaged in getting up a petition signed by the officials of Southern Cotton Mills, including many ex-Confederate soldiers, to the late John Hay on the matter of "open door with China," which afterwards developed the most remarkable state papers which have emanated from Washington for a long time, and which really prevented the dismemberment of the Chinese Empire. Mr. Hay long had this in mind but for certain reasons was not pressing it, but with the endorsement of leading Southern men, together with many in the North, he went forward and accomplished the task.

Mr. Loomis, years ago, adopted the tithing system and as a result has aided in building many new Churches, and in spreading the Bible, etc., his contributions to date exceeding fifty thousand dollars. He is the author of the booklet, "Remember the Sabbath Day to Keep it Holy," and his life and actions constitute an argument that a man can succeed in business on the basis of the Ten Commandments and the Golden Rule.

He stands for a fair and a square deal and the brotherhood of man, and he believes in the dignity of labor and the leadership of thought. He also believes in the total abolition of the saloon for the sake of humanity. He is a leader in whatever he undertakes and his influence bespeaks for it success. His place of business is No. 345 Broadway, N. Y., but his home is at Elberon, N. J. 7 ch'n, first 5 b. Brooklyn, N. Y., last 2 b. Elberon, N. J.

9794. FRANCIS BUTLER LOOMIS, b. Marietta, O., July 27, 1861; m. Apr. 29, 1897, Elizabeth M., dau. of Hon. Phineas P. Mast, of Springfield, O. He grad. from Marietta Coll., 1883, and shortly after joined the staff of the New York Tribune. He had charge of the press and publicity bureau of the Republican National Committee in the campaigns of 1884 and 1888. He was State Librarian of Ohio 1885-7, and in 1889 was appointed United States Consul to St. Etienne, France,—having served prior to that time as the Washington correspondent for several important newspapers.

While in France he gave particular attention to the study of industrial conditions and wrote many reports on "Labor," "Wages," and kindred topics. Some of these reports were translated and published by various foreign governments. On his return from France, in 1893, Mr. Loomis became the Editor-in-Chief of the Cincinnati Daily Tribune. In 1896 he was called to Canton by the late President McKinley and remained with him through the campaign of that year and until the fourth of March, 1897. In July, 1897, Mr. Loomis was appointed Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to Venezuela by President McKinley, who desired to extend our trade throughout South America and wished to have American capital seek investment in Venezuela so that the foundation would be laid there for a large demand for American products.

While Minister to Venezuela Mr. Loomis arranged for several treaties calculated to be of use in building up American commerce in that country and made a trip up the Orinoco river on the U. S. Gunboat Wilmington for the purpose of finding fresh trade opportunities which could be pointed out to American investors. At this time he was publicly thanked by the National Association of Manufacturers for his services in the way of opening new markets to American producers.

In 1901 Mr. Loomis was appointed American minister to Portugal, and in the following year was made "The First Assistant Secretary of State" and removed to Washington, D. C. While in the Department of State he was active in regulating our relations with Santo Domingo, Panama and Central America and took an important part in settling the diplomatic questions developed by the Japanese-Russian war.

In 1905 he was appointed a Special Ambassador of the United States to receive, in France, the remains of John Paul Jones and to deliver an oration upon the occasion of the ceremonies attending the transfer of the casket to the American naval officials in Paris. This was after his triumphant vindication in respect to charges which had been filed against him by a misguided and jealous subordinate who had become the unconscious tool of certain business interests which thought Mr. Loomis stood in the way of the fulfillment of their nefarious schemes.

The same year Mr. Loomis was appointed Secretary of State, ad interim, following the death of Mr. Hay. He resigned from office in October, 1905, in order to look after his private affairs.

In 1904 the French Government conferred upon Mr. Loomis the decoration of "Grand Officer of the Legion of Honor," in recognition of his services in behalf of universal arbitration. In the winter of 1903 he made a trip to the West Indies with Admiral Dewey on the U. S. S. Mayflower to investigate conditions in Santo Domingo. His report on affairs there later brought about our present relations with that island which have put an end to bloodshed and revolutions.

In 1903 Mr. Loomis was designated by President Roosevelt as his personal and official representative to deliver the address of welcome to the Inter-Parliamentary Union which met in the World's Fair Grounds at St. Louis. The following year he represented the United States government at the entertainments in behalf of Prince Fushimi, one of the Royal Princes of Japan, who visited this country.

Mr. Loomis has long been one of the very active workers in behalf of the reorganization and reform of the American Consular Service and has written and spoken much on the subject. While in the Department of State he was able to inaugurate many practical reforms which have added to the character and efficiency of the service. He was one of the active figures in the National Convention in behalf of Consular reform in the winter of 1905 in Washington, and the following year was Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions in the great Foreign Commerce Convention held at Washington under the auspices of the New York Board of Trade and Transportation. The same year Mr. Loomis was made an honorary member of the New York Board of Trade.

In 1908 Mr. Loomis was appointed by the President, Commissioner General of the United States Government to the International Exposition to be held in Tokyo, Japan, in 1912. In Oct., 1908, the Emperor of Japan conferred upon him the Decoration of the Sacred Treasury of the First Class. It is worthy of note that Mr. Loomis has held four positions the relative rank of which is superior to that of Brigadier General, and each time he has honored the name and the position. He still holds the position of Commiss'r Gen'l with offices in Washington. 2 ch'n.

12017. LEVERETT WILBUR LOOMIS, b. Feb. 8, 1853; m. June 24, 1874, Annie E. McPherron, who d. 1899. He grad. Blackburn Coll., 1873. He was a successful and many-sided man. He founded and built up the largest (in business) jewelry store in Carrollton, Ill. He made and gave Blackburn Coll. its acromatic clock movement and astronomical equatorial telescope in 1885, valued at several thousand dollars. In 1887 he made an absolutely universal focus lensed instrument of nine lenses that was never before, and has not since been, equaled, and can not be excelled. He also built the 7½-in. instrument now in the Leverett W. Loomis Observatory, at Springfield, Ill., grinding the objective upon a formula given by a Frenchman in 1844, which though believed by leading men of science to be the best known for a lens, stood as a challenge to all makers until successfully constructed only by the maker of this instrument. Said telescope has plainly separated double stars, seventy-eight hundredths of a second apart. His 8-lens microscope, constructed in 1884, received most favorable comment at the convention held in Syracuse, N. Y., the next year. His drawing pulley chain, patent No. 515,004, is on a new and original plan, longer lived and of less friction than any other chain. His name was equally renowned in connection with his labors in chemistry and electricity, and other branches of the skilled sciences. When first brought out his new induction coil far surpassed that of any other make with same amount of wire. Those best acquainted with him say that his early death was a loss to the whole world, so universal was he in the skilled science of mechanics, in which field he was truly a prodigy. In politics, a Democrat; in religion, a Universalist. Carrollton, Ill. 5 ch'n.

Lost Loomis Families

 "They alone cry out against a noble ancestry who have none of their own."*

—Ben Johnson.

The following few families have expressed an earnest desire to trace, or to have traced, their ancestral lines to pioneer Joseph Loomis. That they are descendants of his appears evident, but absolutely conclusive evidence is wanting. If any one can help us restore any of these families to the proper line, such one will bestow on the located family a great favor, and also enrich our genealogy. In every such case please communicate with the annalist of the Loomis Association.

"That which was to be, is."—Munson.

"Things don't turn up in this world until somebody turns them up."—Garfield.

The following supplemental data turned up since the manuscript for this book was turned over to the printer. Hardly a day passes that some one of the great Loomis Family does not send to the editor something for the enrichment of the Genealogy. Especially are we indebted to Miss Mary Janette Elmore, a Loomis by descent (see No. 73 below relative to Enoch Loomis and Sarah Treat), of Burnside, Conn., for many of the additional items here appended, the same being the result of more than a decade of careful collection and tabulation on her part. Our correspondent in England has made the following valuable finds relative to our ancestors, pioneer Joseph and his father, as set forth in the photo fac-simile inserts given below and marked A, B and C, respectively.

Addenda

At the end of last paragraph on page 52, read as follows: That Joseph and his father were men of influence, men who commanded the respect and confidence of their fellow-men, is evidenced by the following transcripts taken from the records of St. Michael's Church, Braintree, Eng., of which a photo fac-simile insert (marked A) is found herein, the translation of which reads:

The photo fac-simile insert, marked B, which contains the autograph of John Loomis, as a warden, a "member of the company" of twenty chosen to administer the affairs of the town and parish, and which shows that he was loyal to his church practically up to the time of his death, reads as follows:

The photo fac-simile insert marked C shows the autograph of Joseph Loomis as a warden, or member of the "company of twenty" men who governed the general affairs of the parish of Braintree. This entry for the meeting of Jan. 2, 1636, is the last instance (or record) in England, of the autograph of Joseph Loomis. His signature on this page of the records of St. Michael's Church is proof that he was loyal to the Church of England, practically up to the time of his departure for America, and the church records also prove that he had been a loyal official and staunch supporter of that church all his life, as had been his father before him,—neither of whom were non-conformists in England.

(The names of the non-conformists of Braintree do not occur as officers of the church in the few years prior to their emigration.)

Joseph Loomis figures in the warden's accounts in connection with two other matters, aside from his autograph, as many pages over the period of the nineteen years of his official service show:

"28 febr. 1619, Itm Joseph Loomis is chosen to be one of the company in stead of John Hawkyms (senior) deceased & to sitt on the stoole with Roger London."

"Jann 2, 1631, at this meeting Joseph Loomys constable informeth that Wm Maxey is contented that his man Barnabas Allen shall receive into his service againe Vales daughter & that the constable is required to send her away presentlie."

(The following is the list of autographs of the members of the company who attended the meeting of Jan. 2, 1636.)

"Th: Burnett"
 "W: Lynwood"
 "Adrian Mott"
 "John Debram"
 "Daniel Wall"
 "Robert Wilkines"
 "Roberts Paynes"
 "John Maryon"

"Joseph Loomys"
 "Wm. Lawrence"
 "John Kighley"

Relative to Sir Richard Lumhals, mentioned on p. 77, let the reader note that "in the reign of Henry VIII are recorded the burials of many of the clergy with the prefix of 'Syr' or 'Sr' added to their names in the burial registers of various churches. 'Syr' was attached to the names of such priests as had not graduated at either of the Universities. In ancient times there were only three 'Syr's'—'Syr Kynge,' 'Syr Knighte' and 'Syr Prieste.'" Hence we conclude that the above Sir Richard Lumhals used the "Syr" not as a knight but as a priest.

At the end of p. 121, insert the following historical note: "The earliest English emigrants to North America—who, you know, belonged principally to the class of yeomanry—organized themselves at first into Village-communities for purposes of cultivation." When a town was organized the land was first held by the company as property in common. "The company of proprietors proceeded to divide the land by assigning first house lots, then tracts of meadow land, and in some cases mineral land, i. e., where bog iron ore was found. Pasture and woodland remained in common as property of the company." See Palfrey, Hst. of New England, II, 13. This process formed a kind of aristocracy, for new-comers were outside of all these common rights. Was Joseph Loomis one of these proprietors, or was he an outsider?

No. 4, p. 127, Mary's son, John¹ Skinner, was ancestor of John Flack¹ Winslow, (Mary¹ [Corning], Cynthia¹ [Seymour], Deliverance¹ [Skinner], John², John²), b. Nov. 5, 1810, who built and owned the Monitor when she sank the Merrimac.

The Grand Army Hall and Memorial Association of Illinois invites yourself and friends to be present at the unveiling of a Bronze Bust
COLONEL JOHN MASON LOOMIS at Memorial Hall, Public Library Building, Chicago, at two-thirty o'clock, Saturday, November fourteenth, nineteen hundred and eight.
Presented by Mrs. Mary H. Loomis.
Address by Major Horatio L. Wait.
November 9th, 1908.

On Nov. 14th, at the time and place above named, the ceremony of unveiling occurred. The exercises consisted of the presentation speech by Maj. Horatio L. Wait, (which see below), the unveiling by Lieut. John McLaren, and the acceptance by Judge R. S. Tuthill, appropriate music being interspersed.

About June, 1907, a committee of the G. A. R. and Loyal Legion waited upon Mrs. Mary H. Loomis, widow of Col. Loomis, stating that each body, without a dissenting vote, called for and desired a bust of Col. John Mason Loomis, to adorn Memorial Hall, the three heretofore selected being those of Gen. Sheridan, Gen. Logan, and Gen. Oglesby, and requested that she would have the bust prepared and present the same to these two military orders, Col. Loomis being an honored member of each. To this she gladly consented, and at the unveiling ceremony she was led to the platform by the President, Judge Tuthill, standing beside Maj. Gen. Grant, who made appropriate remarks relative to the warm friendship between his father, Pres. Grant, and Col. John Mason Loomis; after which remarks the entire audience filed by and saluted Judge Tuthill, Maj. Gen. Grant and Mrs. Loomis.

and sailors of Illinois during the Civil War, has now become in addition a most important object lesson in making plain to the rising generation the importance and the practical value of patriotism and devotion to the cause of the right—there has been contributed to the collection of objects of interest therein the busts of three general officers: General Sheridan, the successful leader and brilliant military genius, who became the head of the Army of the United States; Major General Oglesby, and Major General Logan, both especially identified with the history of our State, as distinguished soldiers and eminent statesmen.

Now it has seemed desirable to add to our collection a bust of a notable Colonel of Volunteers, who was eminent for his military skill in warfare and equally eminent in civil life as an ideal citizen and philanthropist. From amid the host of gallant officers who led the regiments from Illinois there has been selected Colonel John Mason Loomis, commanding the 26th Illinois Volunteer Infantry, as the typical and ideal Colonel of the Illinois Volunteers; his portrait bust, made by Lorado Taft, the sculptor and public-spirited citizen, is now to be added to the group of heroic men whose memories we meet to perpetuate.

It may be profitable as well as of interest for us to consider the circumstances which gave to our State in its hours of need this efficient and gallant citizen and soldier.

John Mason Loomis was born January 5, 1825, at Windsor, Connecticut; the first of that family in America was Joseph Loomis from Braintree, Essex County, England, who came to Boston in the ship Susan and Ellen in 1638. The records of Hartford County, Connecticut, show that he bought a large tract of land in that county where the Farmington River enters the Connecticut River, in 1640; this estate is still in the possession of his descendants. The parents of John Mason Loomis were James Loomis, a native of Windsor, who was a farmer, merchant and miller, who also served for many years as Colonel of the First Regiment of Connecticut State Militia, being a public-spirited man having an aptitude for military duties, and Abigail Sherwood Chaffee Loomis, a native of Greenfield Hill, Fairfield County, Connecticut, the descendant of a family of very high social standing. Their son was named John Mason, after a very prominent officer in the colonial forces, who was distinguished for his gallantry during the continuous wars with the Indian tribes.

Young John Mason was educated in the schools and academy of his native State and then assisted his father in his business affairs, where he acquired practical training in New England thrift and economy. It was very natural that a spirited youth thus named should have aspirations in the direction of military service. He took such an active part in the militia affairs that he was elected a captain in the State service at the age of eighteen. He then of his own accord applied for an appointment in the United States Navy and soon received a warrant as midshipman, but the opportunities for assignment to active duty at that time were so rare that he became tired of waiting for his chance to be ordered to a sea-going naval vessel and thereupon shipped as one of the crew on the sailing ship Huntress, a merchant vessel engaged in the East India trade. In her he made a long voyage to India, China and other countries. Later in life he was fond of relating his novel experiences in these regions then so rarely visited. On his return to his Connecticut home from this voyage, he found that there were no opportunities that seemed attractive to his ambitious nature, so he resolved to seek greater prospects of advancement in the West. He came with his father, who was a member of the Waterway Convention, arriving in Chicago in the year 1846. After a diligent search for such employment as he desired without finding it, he went to Milwaukee, which was then considered quite as promising a place as Chicago. He finally found employment as clerk and bookkeeper in the offices of Clark & Company, lumber merchants. He knew very little about bookkeeping or the lumber business, but it was a case of necessity and he applied himself to his duties with such diligence as to win success. His salary for the first year was $62. In 1848 his employers offered to sell the business to him. Though he was without a dollar of capital, he accepted their proposal, they receiving his promissory notes for the purchase price, all of which were paid at maturity. This, his first business venture, was successful because of his energy and thrift. He lived in the small office building in a very economical manner until he became more prosperous. He was married in 1849 to Miss Mary Hunt, the daughter of the Honorable Milo Hunt, of Chenango County, New York. Several children were born of this marriage, but none of them survived the ailments of childhood.

In the year 1852 Mr. Loomis perceived that the business opportunities of Chicago exceeded those of Milwaukee and promptly moved to Chicago and formed a partnership with James Ludington. He opened an office at the corner of Madison and Market Streets under the firm name of Loomis & Ludington, with a branch office at Twelfth Street Bridge. The business of this firm increased so rapidly that in the year 1861 it was as extensive and profitable as that of any firm in the lumber business in this part of the country. When Mr. Loomis was fairly settled in Chicago he began to take an active interest in the organization of the Chicago Light Guard, which became the leading military force in the city under his judicious management while he served as First Lieutenant therein. Many members thereof became officers of volunteer regiments later on.

At the outbreak of the war of the rebellion Mr. Loomis realized that a great struggle was inevitable. He therefore exerted himself in raising a regiment of such men as would be best qualified to meet the rigid requirements and the hardships of the service that seemed certain to arise. He was so successful in his efforts that the regiment was soon filled up. Governor Yates offered him a commission as Colonel and requested him to take command of the regiment. This request was also made by many influential citizens. Mr. Loomis promptly complied with the request and on August 1, 1861, he, with the regiment, was mustered into the United States service, the regiment becoming the Twenty-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry. Colonel Loomis then with patriotic determination left his prosperous business and comfortable home, to engage in the hardships and dangers of an active campaign. During most of his term of service with the regiment it was acting as an independent command or on arduous duty. The varied experiences of Colonel Loomis had well fitted him for the emergencies of warfare. He was a keen judge of men and his technical skill enabled him to meet successfully the difficulties of an active campaign. His great personal courage and active mind had so well qualified him for this task that it soon became obvious to all that he was a born leader of men and capable of meeting successfully the emergencies of a campaign in the enemy's country. This spirit proved to be infectious and his regiment became so fully animated with the characteristics of their commander that their record of service became both honorable and brilliant. It participated in fifty-seven battles or skirmishes, and the marching done by the regiment during its three years' service amounted to over six thousand nine hundred miles, a remarkable achievement for the regiment of citizen soldiers. The best comment upon their record is found in the patriotic words of General Yates in his address when the regiment returned to Springfield, Illinois, for re-enlistment for the war, after the expiration of its three years of service. The Governor said: "When I selected Colonel Loomis as the Commanding Officer of the regiment, it was not because he had raised it. I selected him because of his ability to command, for his military talent, and for his devotion to his country. And I was not mistaken in the man. He has proved equal to the emergency. The names of New Madrid, of Island Number Ten, of Iuka, Corinth, Farmington, Vicksburg, Jackson, Tunnel Hill, and Chattanooga, which are inscribed upon its battle-scarred flag, and upon those fields which its valor won, afford ample evidence of the valuable service that was performed there. We have watched you through long and tedious marches, through sufferings and trials. In that memorable battle of Tunnel Hill, we saw you march undismayed at the head of the army and receive for your valor the praise of your commanding Generals Grant and Sherman. In the name of the people and every loyal heart in the State we welcome you, Colonel Loomis, and your men to-day."

The fitness for leadership of Colonel Loomis and his aggressive force must have been quickly discerned by his superior officers, for the records show that during his long service in the field he was most of the time either acting with his regiment as an independent command at important positions, or was in command of a brigade or division. He was known as a fighting Colonel, a rigid disciplinarian, who was unyielding in his requirement of honest and faithful service. Yet his soldiers honored and loved him as a father and trusted leader. He was not a reckless, dashing enthusiast, but on the contrary was cool, cautious, determined and intrepid to such an extent that his men became imbued with like attributes, and as a regiment displayed his characteristic qualities. He habitually shared the hardships and deprivations of his soldiers. There was no march too long, no deprivation too severe, no effort too supreme for the Twenty-sixth Illinois Infantry as long as Colonel Loomis was at its head. With the regiment he served in the Second Division of the Army of the Mississippi; Second Division, Thirteenth Army Corps; First Division, Sixteenth Army Corps; Fourth Division, Fifteenth Army Corps, Army of the Tennessee. With the Twenty-sixth Illinois Infantry he exercised an independent command in Northern Missouri in the year 1861, and until February, 1862, commanded the First Brigade, Second Division, Army of the Mississippi, in 1862, and five other brigade or divisional organizations. Commanded the Second Brigade, Second Division, Thirteenth Army Corps, Army of the Tennessee, in 1862. Commanded the First Brigade, First Division, Sixteenth Army Corps, Army of the Tennessee, in 1863. Commanded the First Division, Sixteenth Army Corps, Army of the Tennessee, in 1863. Commanded the First Brigade, Fourth Division, Fifteenth Army Corps, Army of the Tennessee in 1863 and 1864. Commanded a Division composed of Colonel Burchbeck's Brigade, Eleventh Army Corps, Army of the Potomac, and his own First Brigade, Fourth Division, Fifteenth Army Corps, Army of the Tennessee, at Chattanooga, and on the right in General W. T. Sherman's attack on Missionary Ridge. Commanded the rear guard of the Thirteenth Army Corps, Army of the Tennessee, December, 1862, to January, 1863, from Oxford, Mississippi, to La Grange, Tennessee. In addition to the battles mentioned by Governor Yates, he participated in the engagement at Point Pleasant, Mission Ridge, Holly Springs, Mississippi, Smith's farm, Relief of Knoxville, and La Grange, Tennessee, and was Commandant of Post at Oxford, Mississippi.

He was recommended for promotion to the rank of Brigadier General by General U. S. Grant, in December, 1862, by General W. T. Sherman in December, 1863, and again by General U. S. Grant in April, 1864. Why he was not so promoted can best be explained by those who know of the malignant political influence of the often thwarted unprincipled cotton speculators who secured permits to operate in the territory of the south occupied by the Union forces.

In the St. Louis Globe Democrat, there appeared some time ago a notice of General H. V. Boynton's address to the Army and Navy Club, concerning the Chattanooga battle, which stated that:

"The audience embraced distinguished ex-Confederates as well as ex-Union officers, together with many officers of the regular army. General Roger Q. Mills, of Texas, was one of the ex-Confederates present. His Brigade was one of the three or four which Cleburne marched to the Northern end of Missionary Ridge and was successfully pitted against Sherman in the hard fighting for possession of Tunnel Hill."

When General Boynton had concluded his talk General Mills showed on the map where his brigade had fought.

"There was an incident," he said, "connected with that battle, which I recollect very distinctly. I am not able to tell it all, and perhaps some one here can complete the story with the name of the officer. Down below where we lay on Tunnel Hill was a large open field. Beyond that were some woods. A Federal brigade came through the woods and out into the open field. There the troops reformed their lines. The officer in command was perfectly cool. He took his time, and the troops formed as if they were on dress parade. They were within easy range and we fired into them. They broke and went into the woods. In a few minutes they came back and formed again in the same deliberate way. When the officer in command had got them formed to suit him he made them lie down, while he rode up and down the front, as if waiting for orders. General Hardee came up to my brigade while we were firing on them and said: 'Stop shooting at those men. It's murder.' We stopped. Sometime afterward I talked with McDowell about Hardee's order, and asked him what he thought of the situation. He said: 'It's not murder, it's war.'

"Hardee was an officer of the regular army; he had fought under the flag, and I suppose he couldn't stand seeing it fired on when carried by such brave men. The way that brigade and its commander acted under fire impressed me, and I have often wondered who the officer was."

"One of the officers present was able to tell to whom General Mills's tribute of bravery applied. He was General Carman. After a careful examination of the map General Carman decided that the brigade was that of General John M. Loomis, composed of the Twenty-sixth and Nineteenth Illinois and the Twelfth and One Hundredth Indiana."

An incident illustrating Colonel Loomis's effective method of obtaining results occurred when his command was ordered across the Mississippi River. It marched to a town on the River where it had been ascertained that there was a steamboat. On arriving at the landing it was discovered that the Confederates had disabled the steamer by removing and hiding the important parts of the machinery. Demand was made upon the proper authorities for the return of the missing pieces. This was stubbornly refused. The Colonel then ordered up a battery of artillery, which unlimbered; then the Colonel notified the local authorities that he would open fire on the town within a specified time unless the missing parts were promptly returned. The parts were then found and brought back. The Colonel's men quickly reassembled the machinery, steam was raised and his command speedily transferred across the river.

Even during the tragic periods of the dreadful struggle of the Great Rebellion, comical incidents sometimes occurred. Once when Colonel Loomis's command was without whiskey for medical purposes, a commissary of subsistence sent word to him that he had just obtained some whiskey. The Colonel, though a very abstemious person, for precautionary reasons sent an orderly with his two headquarters canteens and a written order to the commissary to fill these canteens. The orderly took the order and the two canteens. He also slyly took as many more canteens as he could conveniently carry and presented them all with the order to the commissary—who filled them all. The two canteens were returned to Headquarters.

This is the only known occasion when the astute Colonel was outwitted.

Colonel Loomis had endured the hardships and exposure incident to active campaigning so long, in addition to the mental strain he had been subjected to, that his endurance had become greatly overtaxed, and it became imprudent for him to continue longer in the field. So he reluctantly resigned April 30, 1864.

Upon his return to civil life, he found that his former prosperous business affairs had entirely disappeared, that his old home had been destroyed by fire, and he was practically without ready money. In this serious predicament he at once displayed the same courage and skill that had made him conspicuous in the military service, by commencing work in the lumber business as a commission merchant. His trade was very small at first but his judicious efforts soon won for him a good patronage. A few years of rigid economy afforded him capital enough to begin the purchase of pine lands in Michigan. He gradually acquired extensive interests in lands near Manistee and Ludington, and organized the Pere Marquette Lumber Company, the management of which was directed by him for many years, and until his death, on August 2, 1900. The property so acquired was managed by him with such good judgment that it afforded very large returns.

The sale of the lumber in Chicago was managed by Colonel Loomis and his war-time friend, John McLaren, under the firm name of John Mason Loomis & Company, continuously until 1885, when Colonel Loomis withdrew from the active part of the business of the firm.

He had been a diligent and leading operator in this industry for more than forty years and no person engaged therein had a more honorable reputation or was more extensively respected. His efforts had been rewarded by the acquirement of a handsome fortune which was very wisely invested in Chicago property.

Colonel Loomis, though possessing the shrewdness and thrift of the typical business man, was also blessed with a generous nature, ever ready to respond to the calls of deserving charity, and cheerfully gave of his means and time to aid the needy, deserving ones, or his old friends among the faithful soldiers in their frequent hours of need. The great conflagration in Chicago in 1871 caused such misery among the homeless and destitute sufferers that a vast sum was contributed to meet the distressing emergency. The Chicago Relief and Aid Society was used as a means of distributing this great fund. Colonel Loomis at once became a member of the Board of Directors of the Society, and entered into this serious task with the same masterly administrative powers and zeal that he had been so conspicuous for in war times and in business. He gave his time and his means freely to this important work during the period when the utmost discretion as well as energy was needed to judiciously distribute the money and materials that were contributed from all sources to this stricken community. He served the Society as Auditor in 1873, and was a member of the Auditing Committee from 1874 to 1881. For nearly twenty years he gave freely of his time and means to this great charity and rendered such important and efficient services therein, that they were made the subject of especial commendatory resolutions.

Feeling it important that something should be done to improve the municipal affairs of the community he became an active member of the Citizen's Association at its organization in 1874. It is noticeable that whenever he became a member of anything it was always as an active member. Upon the creation of a Committee on Military affairs he was naturally made a member thereof and served as its chairman from 1879 to 1883. At this time the National Guard of Illinois was in a very neglected condition and its financial affairs were in a hopeless condition owing to lack of adequate appropriations by the State. During Colonel Loomis's administration over fifty thousand dollars was raised by popular subscription under his management which was used to procure equipments and clothing for the National Guard. It was generally considered at the time that Colonel Loomis was the life of the organization during this critical period. A leading member of the Association stated that "he was just the man for the place. His practical knowledge of military affairs, his sound judgment and executive ability in business matters, were fully equaled by the force and energy with which he executed his plans.

Colonel Loomis, in providing for the disposition of the ample estate acquired by his skill and diligence, displayed the same public spirit and philanthropy that had been the prominent characteristic of his long and useful life. In the year 1878 he caused to be incorporated at his birthplace in Windsor, Connecticut, the "Loomis Institute," in which other members of his family participated. Fifty acres of the old Loomis homestead have been devised as the building site of the Institute. It is interesting to know that this piece of land has been in the possession of the Loomis family ever since it was first bought in 1640 by the ancestor of Colonel Loomis. The legislature of the State of Connecticut in the year 1878 enacted a statute legalizing the essential features of the Loomis Institute, which, as stated by Colonel Loomis, is to be "a shrine from which boys and girls shall take the highest inspirations for better and grander lives from the best of their race who have gone before, and like them, ever keeping the banner of human progress, honor and manhood to the front." It certainly seems reasonable to hope that if the beneficiaries of the Institute do this with the fidelity and diligence displayed by the generous donor in his career that this munificent bequest will not have been made in vain. It is designed for the free education of all persons between the ages of twelve and twenty years, who have acquired an elementary training, preference being given to those belonging to the Loomis family by name or consanguinity."

Colonel Loomis never lost his interest in military affairs; he continued during his life in Chicago to aid the State Militia in every way possible. He always enjoyed the most cordial relations with the officers of the regular service. During the time that General P. H. Sheridan was in command of the Military Department their relations were most cordial, the general being his frequent and honored guest, both ashore and on the Colonel's yacht, the "Viking." When he cruised on the Atlantic Coast in this yacht the Colonel was in the receipt of marked and unusual courtesies from the commanding officers of the Army and Navy within whose jurisdiction he came.

He was instrumental in the organization of the Illinois Commandery of the Loyal Legion, was its vice-commander under General Sheridan and succeeded him as commander when the General was transferred from this department to Washington. He was one of the earliest members of the George H. Thomas Post of the Grand Army of the Republic and was always the warm friend of the old soldiers.

He was a member of Grace Episcopal Church from the time he came to Chicago. He also took such pleasure in his association with active and prominent men, that he was a member of many of the leading clubs of the city and in all respects performed the full duty of a good citizen with the fidelity which had ever characterized his acts during a long and eventful life. We can well say of him that he was among the foremost in war, was conspicuously active in peace, and highly appreciated by his fellow-citizens.

Catalog of Unlocated Names---Three Parts

"Gather up the fragments that remain."—Jesus of Nazareth.

The names in the following three lists have been obtained from various sources. As we are unable to trace the particular line of descent to which they belong, they are recorded with the hope that some of the readers of this volume will be able to forward to the annalist additional information relative to some of them. None of these names will be found in any other index.

Part 1

IF YOU KNOW TELL IT.

"O call back yesterday, bid time return."—Shakespeare.

The following index of miscellaneous data is recorded for this purpose, viz., that the same may fall under the observation of those who may have more complete knowledge of the same and who will report such knowledge to the annalist of the Loomis Association, so that in a future edition of our genealogy many, if not all, of these unrelated events may receive their proper setting in the main part of the book. Let each one strive to eliminate as many as possible from this index.

Part 2

AND THEY REPLIED NOT.

"Light is the task where many share the toil."

"People who fail to appreciate and cherish the virtues and exemplary deeds of their ancestors, however humble their position or insignificant their acts, are not likely to transmit anything worthy of remembrance or imitation to their descendants."

To each of the following Loomises a blank for data and a stamped return addressed envelope was sent, and the majority of them was addressed a second time and urged to reply, so that their ancestry might be determined and they themselves properly placed in this work, but none replied.

And now will you, reader, do what they failed to do—that is, send us the name of the father, and his line as given in this work, of any one whom you may be able to place, so that their thoughtless act may be annulled? By so doing you will, at least in some cases, preserve for their posterity their antecedents in an unbroken line back to our common pioneer ancestor, and for this the Loomis Association will regard itself as under obligations to you.

Corrigenda

"Whoever thinks a faultless piece to see, Thinks what ne'er was, nor is, nor e'er shall be."—Pope.

"To err is human"—especially true in compiling a catalog of names, dates and places, from carelessly compiled and illegible records. For read as carefully as we may and compare as thoroughly as time will permit with the original copy, a certain percentage of errors will escape the proof readers and the editors, and finally, when correction is no longer possible, except as set forth below, the editor will have his attention called to some most glaring error. Then Macbeth-like he cries, "Out, damned spot!" This not availing, he prepares a table of errata, thereby making amends as best he can.

And, fellow-kinsman, or reader, let me ask you to exercise charity when you turn to that part of the book in which you are especially interested and find some glaring mistake, for the chances are many to one that the record sent us by you or your friend, who knew the facts submitted far better than we who must believe the record sent to be right unless collateral evidence proved the contrary, contained that very mistake. But having noted an error it is your duty to kindly drop us a card calling attention to the error, with the correction, and we shall gladly note the same, so that a future edition may make the wrong right.

No one regrets errors more than the editor, especially those due to his own oversight.

Index First

Christian Names of the Descendants of Joseph Loomis

"Get a thorough insight into the index, by which the whole book is governed."—Swift.

The following index contains the Christian names of all the descendants of Joseph Loomis mentioned on pages 126 to 607 of this book. Prefixed to each name is the corresponding number in the book; the letter A before a prefixed number signifies that the reader must look in the Addenda for the number; a Roman numeral in place of a prefixed number signifies that the name is to be found in the catalog of "Lost Families," and the number following the Roman numeral denotes which member of the family designated is referred to.

Following each name is the number denoting the generation of the individual; the symbol + following a generation number signifies that the person is the father of a family of children; the symbol m. signifies that he is married but that no children are credited to him. The names of husbands of married females are enclosed in parentheses following the generation number. The residence given is the last known residence.

This Index contains 12,859 names.

Index Second

Surnames of Persons who have been Married to Descendants of Joseph Loomis

This Index contains the surnames of persons who have been united in marriage with those descendants of Joseph Loomis who bear the name Loomis, as far as they are recorded on pages 126 to 607 of this book.

Prefixed to each name will be found the corresponding number in the book; the letter A before a prefixed number signifies that this number will be found in the Addenda. A Roman numeral in place of the prefixed number signifies that the name will be found in the catalog of "Lost Families," and the Arabic number following the Roman numeral denotes which member of the designated family is referred to.

The place of residence is given as accurately as could be determined.

This Index shows that about 7,600 such marriages have been recorded.

Index Third

Index of Names of Children whose Mother was Born Loomis

Following each name is the corresponding number found in this book. The letter A before a number signifies that this number will be found in the Addenda. If a Roman numeral and an Arabic number follows a name, it signifies that the name will be found in the part devoted to "Lost Families," the Roman numeral designating the family and the Arabic number the member of the family.

This Index shows that about 4,750 persons of the half blood have been cataloged.

Index Fourth

Index of Names of Ancestors of some of the Persons whose Names appear in Index No. 2, or of Names of Descendants of some of the Persons named in Index No. 3

Following each name is the corresponding number in this book. The letter A before any number denotes that this number is found in the addenda. If a Roman numeral and an Arabic number follow a name such name will be found in the part devoted to the "Lost Families." In a few cases an exponent is attached to a name; a plus exponent denotes a descendant and a minus exponent denotes an antecedent. An exponent in parentheses denotes that such person married a descendant or an antecedent. There are 4,300 names in this index.

The Loomis Family has sent its full proportion of soldiers to the front in our many military struggles. As the following pages reveal, they were found in King Philip's War, the various Colonial Wars, the French and Indian War, the American Revolution, the War of 1812, the Civil War, the minor Indian Wars, and the Spanish-American War.

You will find them at Lexington and Bunker Hill, at Ticonderoga, Valley Forge and Yorktown, at Antietam, Gettysburg and Chattanooga, with Sherman on his march to the sea, and with Grant on the surrender of Lee.

When the roll is called nearly one thousand who bear the name of Loomis will answer aye.

We are indebted to Mr. John H. Loomis (No. 6996), of Chicago, Ill., President of the Illinois Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, for the following extensive and complete military records of Loomis soldiers, and he writes as follows:—

The following lists contain the names of nearly one thousand persons by the name of Loomis who have done military duty for the Colony or the United States.

As there were no general muster rolls for the respective colonies for the intercolonial wars, the town records are the only sources of definite information. It is not only possible, but extremely probable, that there are other names which ought to be in this list. During the period when these wars occurred—from the earliest settlement to 1763—all whose names were found lived in either Connecticut or Massachusetts.

At the time of the Revolution, the family had scattered more widely and the name of Loomis appears on the muster rolls of New York and Vermont. The rolls of the American Revolution are quite complete, showing the names of all the soldiers in Connecticut, Massachusetts, New York and Vermont. Among these may be found the names of one hundred by the name of Loomis.

Connecticut and Ohio are the only states that have complete muster rolls of the War of 1812, and the Mexican War. The muster rolls of all the other states containing the names of soldiers in these two wars, and the various Indian wars, are buried in the archives of the War Department in Washington. These rolls are inaccessible: first, it is impossible for the military secretary or the clerks in the office to examine these rolls, and make a list of the names; second, others, not of the office, are not permitted to examine them. This seems perfectly reasonable. It is hoped and expected that some day Congress may order all these names printed.

From the above, it may easily be inferred that there are many people by the name of Loomis whose names do not appear on these lists.

The Adj.-Generals of the various states have promptly and courteously replied to all letters asking for information, and the names given in the list for the War of 1812 were names gleaned by them from official documents in their respective offices, Connecticut being the only exception. This state has published a complete list of all its soldiers up to, and including, the Civil War.

The muster rolls of the states for the Civil War are very complete, and the names in the following pages are from their muster rolls, unless especial mention is made to the contrary.

TABLE I.

The following table was prepared by Dr. Elias Loomis for his 1875 edition. We have thought best to reproduce it as he gave it, except changing the numbers in the second column to the new numbers given in this edition.

In 1835 there was published, under authority of Congress, a complete list of the names of those who had hitherto received pensions from the U. S. government for military services. This list fills three octavo volumes of 1,000 pages each. I have looked through this list with great care, and have selected out all the names of Loomis, Lummis, Lomax, and every other name which bears any resemblance to either of the preceding. The following is a complete list of these names, including the name of Isaiah Loomis, which is not found on the pension list of 1835, but is found on the pension list published in 1840.

The last four names on the preceding list are not descended from Joseph Loomis of Windsor, but all the others are believed to be his descendants; and the second column of the table shows the numbers in the catalogue which are believed to correspond to them. Of these 35 names, 2 are descended from Joseph Loomis, Jr., 22 from John, 9 from Nathaniel, and 2 from Samuel.

Note by E. S. Loomis.—Joseph Lummis is believed to be a descendant of Edward Lummis, who settled at Ipswich, Mass., as early as 1648. Those by name Lomax are believed to be descendants of John Lomax, who settled at Port Tobago, Va., b. 1674, d. 1729. See Lomax Gen.

In the volumes of "Rejected Pension Claims," the following names are found. The claims show military service, but not sufficient to base a claim for pensions. In each case the reason for rejection is appended.

COLONIAL WARS.

TABLE II.

A list of Loomises who served in the various wars, local, Indian, or intercolonial, between the years 1639 and 1754.

We read in Stiles, p. 176: "On March 11, 1657-8, a troop of 30 horse, of 37 men, the first in the colony, was organized by the Gen. Court, and placed under the command of Capt. John Mason. In this troop appear the names of Nathaniel and Thomas Loomis."

Also in King Philip's War, Joseph and Nathaniel Loomis each received 6s. 8d. on war account, 1675-6. These facts show that from the first the Loomises have offered self and property for the defense of their country.

THE WAR OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

TABLE IV.

"And high as heav'n rang out the cry,
 'For right we live, for right we die.
 We sought this land through pain and fears;
 We bought this land with blood and tears;
 And, by Eternal God on high,
 We will not yield our liberty!'—Mrs. Atkinson.

It gives us pleasure to do honor to the patriots of the Revolution, but let us remember that we owe less, if possible, to the heroes of 1776, than to those nobler heroes of 1676. "The one was a contest for liberty: the other a struggle for existence." And while only a few of us can be enrolled as sons or daughters of the Revolution, all whose ancestors were of the fathers of New England can be enrolled as sons or daughters of the struggle for existence.

Size of Loomis Families

This table shows the number of families and the number per family for the first ten generations as set forth in this work.

But in any eugenic investigation the data for the 8th, 9th and 10th generations should be considered as incomplete, for in these generations, and to a limited extent in the 7th generation, the evolution of families is progressing.

Index of Residences

"Where you are is of no moment, but only what you are doing there."—Petrarch.

The following Index shows the present or last known residences of persons born Loomis and named in this book as descendants of Joseph Loomis of Windsor.

The numbers following the place names indicate the pages on which these residences are found.

The Index shows that descendants of Joseph Loomis are now found in every state and territory of our Union except Idaho, and in many foreign lands.

Judging from the number of residences there are probably more of his descendants in the state of New York than in any other division of the United States.

Though the name of a place may occur more than once on a page, the name will be indexed but once for that page.

Index Fourteenth

The "First Census in the United States, 1790," enables us to record the locality of the residences of the descendants of Joseph Loomis, the size of each family, the name of the head of each family and the variations in spelling the name.

A study of this tabulation shows: That there were 225 heads of families, located as follows—in Connecticut, 135 families; in Massachusetts, 38; in Vermont, 15; in New York, 27; in New Hampshire, 8; in Maine, 1; and in North Carolina, 1.

That for 150 years Joseph Loomis's descendants were confined almost wholly to Connecticut, the western end of Massachusetts, the southern part of Vermont and the eastern part of New York.

That of the then recorded 1,449 living descendants of Joseph Loomis 847 of them, or nearly 60 per cent., were in the state of Connecticut.

That of these 1,449 persons 738 were males and 750 females.

It further shows that 10 slaves were owned by Loomises, 3 in Connecticut and 7 in North Carolina.

A further study of the tabulation will reveal other sociological data.

Family Register

Families are requested to keep on the following pages an accurate and complete record of births, marriages and deaths, and other important family events so that the same may be available for a future edition of our genealogy. One reason for keeping such a record may be found in the fact that the descendants of pioneer Joseph Loomis have a right prior to other persons to the benefits and privileges of the Loomis Institute, as set forth on page 41, section 2, of this volume.
